Sens. Grassley, Johnson reveal Hunter Biden financial ties to CCP

By WorldTribune Staff, March 30, 2022

Republican Sens. Chuck Grassley of Iowa and Ron Johnson of Wisconsin took to the Senate floor on Monday and Tuesday to reveal financial links between the Chinese Communist Party (CCP) and Joe Biden's son, Hunter, and brother, James.

"Our report exposed extensive financial relationships between Hunter and James Biden and Chinese nationals connected to the communist regime," Grassley said. "More precisely, these were Chinese nationals connected to the Chinese government's military and intelligence services."

On Tuesday, the senators showed a wire payment of $100,000 to Owasco, one of Hunter Biden's firms, from CEFC China Energy, a now-defunct company closely Steve's Say . . .

Thank You Senator Ron Johnson!!

By Steve Welcenbach

Wisconsinites, blessed be our God for sending us a warrior, a fearless, humble yet street-wise man of incorruptible character. A man constantly seeking truth, exposing lies and corruption, applying the principles of God's law into everything he does. This description can only apply to one man today, our Senator Ron Johnson, ALWAYS AMERICA FIRST.

A man of simple needs, committed to his family and his community, his business customers and vendors, Johnson answered the emergency siren of 2010 by stepping into the world of bloodsport politics. With Obama's fundamental transformation of America well under way, Johnson hurled himself into the political arena as a US Senate candidate against 3 term incumbent Russ Feingold.

Birthed from the TEA Party movement engulfing Wisconsin and the nation at that time, few political insiders gave the newbie Johnson even a long-shot chance of upsetting the well-entrenched and well-funded Feingold. But boy were they wrong!

Johnson displayed a mastery of political intuition and strategy. His TV spots and radio ad campaigns proved so effective they garnered national praise from all side of the political spectrum. He boxed Feingold into a corner so tight he had no where to turn and nowhere to go but out. Johnson won handily 52%-47%.

Once elected to the Senate, Johnson's business acumen and personal character could not be ignored. He quickly earned assignments on key committees including Foreign Relations, the Budget, Homeland Security and Government Affairs, and the Committee on Commerce, Science and Transportation. His position on these committees allowed him to conduct inquiries and investigations into a wide range of Deep State hoaxes and mischief.

Who can forget Killary on the the stand shouting at Johnson, "What difference does it make?" as he grilled her about the Americans that died in Benghazi as a direct result of her directives.

Always the climate realist, Johnson kept himself well-informed on the CO2-is-destroying-the-planet hoax, the real science based upon factual evidence and full context data sets acquired through the vigorous use of the scientific method. He's never backed down nor ever wavered. This being my personal wheelhouse issue for the past 40+ years, I know of no stauncher climate truth teller in the halls of Congress save possibly Senator Inhofe of Oklahoma.

In 2016, the Feingold replay began. Apparently the history of the 2010 Johnson rout vanished and the entire planet including the supposedly conservative sages in Madison wrote Johnson off as a loss. When I saw Ron in the summer of 2016 I gave him my personal assurances that the Wisconsin Activist Army had his back. We would get him through. And we did, even though at an October meeting I scolded the "conservative" Madison sages for their defeatism.

"Feingold has a 47% ceiling in this state. The only way Johnson loses is if the people in this room don't do their job!" I did go back to that meeting in November to rub their noses in the idiocy of their despondency. I know that was bad but it sure was fun!

Since 2016 and the corresponding Trump election Johnson's brave advocacy continued to burgeon. Johnson pointed out to President Trump how the tax cut bill left out small businesses and insisted on a change to remediate that travesty. Trump not only agreed and demanded the change but thanked Ron profusely for bringing that to light and being such a diehard advocate. The press of course demonized him the entire time, as did Democrats and many Republicans.

Moving on to the drastic planetary change brought forth in 2020 by the Fauci-Pharma Medical complex, known as the well-planned-in-advance COVID-19 scamdemic, Johnson became a lonely voice against the ever-expanding madness. He conducted investigations into the truth and science behind lockdowns, masking, effective treatment remedies like Hydroxychloroquine, Ivermectin, Budesonide, Chlorine Dioxide and many others. He invited doctors, scientists and other medical professionals to hearings so their work and findings could be announced to the world. Apparently few in Washington DC from either party had any interest in the truth of any of these very important facts and data sets. The fake news continued their non-stop assault as fellow GOP members scurried to get away from this "kook." But Johnson continued to stand firm.

Johnson voiced truth all summer regarding the BLM-Antifa riots across America and in our own Kenosha, always opposing the fake news media narrative and burrowing down into the real facts. As the shenanigans of the voter fraud schemes took place before our eyes in the Fall of 2020, Johnson sounded the alarm bells. And when the

Our Vision

We aspire to a world in which people, made in the image of God, reconciled to Him by Jesus Christ, and reflecting God's own creativity, work together to enhance the fruitfulness, beauty, and safety of the Earth, enabling more and more of our neighbors to enjoy good health, long life, freedom, justice, and spiritual and material abundance, for the glory of God and the good of our fellow man, thus fulfilling the two Great Commandments to love God and love our neighbor.

Our Mission

We seek to magnify the glory of God in creation, the wisdom of His truth in environmental stewardship, the kindness of His mercy in lifting the needy out of poverty, and the wonders of His grace in the gospel of Jesus Christ.

Our Identity

A coalition of theologians, pastors, ministry leaders, scientists, economists, policy experts, and committed laymen, the Cornwall Alliance is an evangelical voice promoting environmental stewardship and economic development built on Biblical principles.

Biden's Crude Oil Policies May Be The Cause of Shortages and Inflation

By Ronald Stein, April 7, 2022

A year before being inaugurated President in 2021, Biden professed that "we are going to get rid of fossil fuels." Before the recent inauguration, America, for the first time since Harry Truman was president about 70 years ago, had finally become crude oil independent and no longer relied on unstable Petro-powers and foreign crude oil supplies.

The unintended consequences of attempting to rid America and the world of crude oil usage are being realized in supply shortages and soaring prices resulting from the elimination of products and fuels manufactured from crude oil that support:

- Asphalt for roughly 65 million miles of roads in the world
- Tires for the 1.4 billion vehicles in the world
- Fertilizers to feed the world on this increasingly resource-stretched and crowded earth.
- Medical supplies that are primarily made from oil derivatives
- 50,000 jets across the military, commercial, and private sectors.
- More than 53,000 merchant ships that move products throughout the world
- Vehicles that are mostly made of plastics
- Renewables of wind turbines and solar panels that are made from oil derivatives

On March 31, 2022, President Biden announced that he will tap into America's Strategic Petroleum Reserve (SPR) and will consume one-third of it (180 of the 700 million barrels of oil) in an attempt to control rising gas prices. America consumes an average of about 19.78 million barrels of petroleum per day. The SPR was created following the 1973 energy crisis to have a significant deterrent to oil import cutoffs and a key tool in foreign policy. Using it to lower gas prices may be irresponsible and dangerous to national security.

Unbeknownst to Biden is that California, with the highest cost of fuel in the nation, will get none of the oil as there are no pipelines over the Sierra Mountains to the California Energy Island.

While renewables continue to underperform in the generation of electricity, crude oil continues to be targeted for elimination along with coal and natural gas, even though oil is seldom used for generating electricity. Today, Biden supports allowing banks and investment giants to collude to reshape economies and energy infrastructure with their Environmental, Social, and Governance (ESG) divestment in fossil fuels. ESG is a very dangerous precedent as the American people never voted to give banks this sort of control over our country.

Biden and ESG supporters need to be careful about eliminating "all" 3 fossil fuels!

· Of the 3 fossil fuels of coal, natural gas, and crude oil, crude oil is the only one primarily used to manufacture products that are the basis of the economy.

· Crude oil is virtually useless unless it's manufactured (refined) into oil derivatives. These derivatives are the basis of more than 6,000 products in our daily lives that did not exist before the 1900's. The crude oil can also be refined into fuels to supply the heavy-weight and long-range needs of aircraft, cruise and merchant ships, and the military and space programs.

· Wind turbines and solar panels may be able to generate intermittent electricity, but they cannot manufacture anything. By the way, all the products needed to make the parts for vehicles, wind turbines, solar panels, planes, ships, medical supplies, tires, asphalt, and fertilizer are made with the oil derivatives manufactured from crude oil.

· It seems obvious that the efforts to cease the use of crude oil may be the greatest threat to civilization. Attempting to attain a decarbonized world like the one that existed in the 1800s and before could result in billions of human fatalities from disease, malnutrition, and weather-related deaths. Compare this to the projections of millions of fatalities from changes in climate.

· Of the 3 fossil fuels of coal, natural gas, and crude oil, where's Biden's and ESG's replacement or clone for crude oil, to keep today's societies and economies running?

Biden's continuous flip-flopping on his crude oil strategies for America has led to restricted supplies of products to meet the growing demand for that limited supply. Biden continues to send mixed and conflicting oil strategies:

Biden was against oil with his cancellation of the Keystone XL pipeline that would have provided our country with daily crude oil from Canada. The results from the Keystone Pipeline that was expected to transport 830,000 barrels to America is that Canada has another buyer in China. Now that oil is being sent by rail to West coast ports before being loaded onto ships to take it to China. A rail car will hold, on average, 650 barrels. It takes 12 trains of 100 cars each (crude by rail) each day to move 830,000 barrels to the West Coast where it can then be shipped halfway around the world to China.

Biden was against oil when he bought into the messages from a Russian-funded environmental group that gave millions to anti-fracking groups to support the GND and to stop, curtail or severely weaken US fracking of crude oil and natural gas in states like Texas, North Dakota, Colorado, Oklahoma, Louisiana, and Pennsylvania by implementing multiple restrictions on domestic oil production.

Following the cyberattack against the Colonial Pipeline in May 2022 that almost shut down the East Coast, Biden supported oil by Begging OPEC+ to boost oil production to combat skyrocketing gas prices and spiraling costs for the products from fossil fuels while kneecapping abundant U.S. energy production.

Biden was also for oil when oil imports from Russia made up 8 percent of U.S. oil imports. When he finally blocked oil imports from Russia, Biden continued his push for imported crude oil when he started looking at Venezuela, but that country owes around $100 billion to its external creditors, including China and Russia. Some reports put the figure higher. With the current situation of indebtedness to China and Russia and the unstable government in Venezuela, this is not a pretty picture.

The domino effect of tinkering with flip-flopping oil strategies for the supply chain of crude oil may be continued supply shortages and soaring prices for the thousands of products that support the entire medical industry, all branches of the military, airports, electronics, communications, merchant ships, container ships, and cruise liners, as well as asphalt for roads, tires, and fertilizers to help feed the world.

Biden and the ESGers appear to lack a basic understanding of what crude oil is used for, as they tinker with the supply chain of crude oil that supports the lifestyles and economies that did not exist in the decarbonized 1800s.

"If wishes were horses, beggars would ride." So goes the old saying, and it is as true today as ever.

Unfortunately, the many marvels of modern technology have led some people to believe there are no limits to what we can achieve if we put our minds to it.

One popular myth today is that we can power whole modern economies with solar energy.

But does that idea hold water?

This month, when you make a donation of any size to the Cornwall Alliance, as our way of saying thank you, we will send you a free copy of The Utter Inadequacy of Solar to Power a Modern Economy, an educational pamphlet that separates science from wishful thinking on this topic.

To request your copy, use promo code Promo 22-04 or mention The Utter Inadequacy of Solar Power when you make your donation through our secure online giving page, by mailing your check to: Cornwall Alliance, 875 W. ANDREW BREITBART FREEDOM CENTER AT THE HEARTLAND INSTITUTE

On March 1, 2016, on the fourth anniversary of his death, The Heartland Institute dedicated the public meeting space in its new home in Arlington Heights in honor of Andrew Breitbart.

The Andrew Breitbart Freedom Center is a state-of-the-art meeting facility with seating for 75. Events are scheduled to take place every week in the space, featuring authors of new books, freedom activists and thinkers, and civic and business leaders.

"Andrew Breitbart was a genuine American hero," said Joseph Bast, president of The Heartland Institute, in a video announcing the dedication. "He inspired millions of people to stand up and speak the truth about what is happening in America. We could not be more pleased to have his name forever affixed to The Heartland Institute. This C02 Pipeline Will Destroy Farmland!

By Tom DeWeese

Steven, powerful forces are stepping up their drive for a CO2 pipeline that will destroy farmland!

The push is on! The idiotic plan to enforce a pipeline across some of America's most valuable farmland for the purpose of "capturing" carbon emissions and driving it into the ground is gaining momentum.

As I reported earlier, the excuse for this bogus scheme is to stop Climate Change by getting rid of CO2. Of course, CO2 is very natural and plants need it.

Plus, there is no scientific evidence anywhere to be found to back up the claims of man-made Climate Change. It's the greatest hoax ever perpetrated on human society.

The pipeline is set to go straight across thousands of acres of our nation's most valuable farmland – taking it out of our vital food supply production. These forces plan to just take the farmland by force.

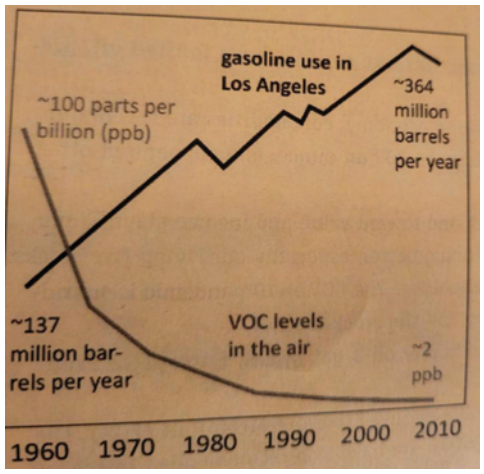
Now we find two new players in the plot.

First is Jess Vilsak – he is the son of Biden's Secretary of Agriculture. That fact alone gives him major influence to push this pipeline forward. Obviously, the Biden cabal is behind this.

Second, it's incredible to report that a new player in the game is North Dakota's biggest oil driller – Continental Resources. They have pledged $250m million to help build the pipeline.

There is only one sound reason for an oil driller to invest in its own demise – they are planning for a future after the oil industry has been destroyed.

Finally, I want to give you a report from one of APC's activists in Iowa who just attended a public meeting hosted by Summit Industries, one of the primary forces behind building the pipeline.



As she pummeled them with questions as to why they were doing this, they have few answers. They hemmed and they hawed. They had no real knowledge about Climate Change and or why the farm land will be destroyed.

They sheepishly indicated that they were following the rules set how by the Iowa Utility Board. That isn't so – because the Utility Board Doe4sn't make laws!

The only real answer they had to explain why they were doing this is that there was money provided in Biden's horrible "Infrastructure" bill, recently passed by Congress.

So – Now we know. We are going to destroy the oil industry. Destroy valuable farmland and our food supply because… THERE IS FEDERAL TAX MONEY AVAILABLE!!!

The American Policy Center is leading the fight to stop this outrage.

Just last week I interviewed former Iowa Congressman Steve King, and our leading Iowa activist Tammy Kobaz, on my new Catching Fire News program to reveal all of the outrageous details of the CO2 pipeline.

Please join me fight to stop this disaster. If you own farm property in Iowa, North or South Dakota, Minnesota, Nebraska and Illinois, you are in the path. They call it the Heartland Greenway. Help support our fight.

Citizens in any of these states must take up the fight – demand that your elected officials oppose the plan and protect property from Eminent Domain takings.

And please – help me continue to lead this fight with your most generous donation to APC. We can and we must stop this – but we must fight now with everything we have!

Independents — attribute rising gas prices mostly to Biden administration economic policies.

Only 24% attribute those increases to the war between Ukraine and Russia, and among Independent voters, it's basically a similar breakdown.

President Biden has attributed those skyrocketing prices on demands that shot up faster than supplies following the COVID pandemic, plus Vladimir Putin's war in Ukraine provoked a bipartisan ban on Russian oil, gas, and coal imports.

Let's remember, however, that gas prices began going up long before either occurred.

In televised November White House remarks, Biden also blamed the oil industry for gasoline prices which were then running at a seven-year high, stating: "Gas supply companies are paying less and making a lot more. That's unacceptable."

That's a hard case to make for an administration whose war on fossil energy has blocked and stalled drilling and pipeline permits for the express purpose of running those companies out of business.

It's additionally difficult to explain after having unsuccessfully pleaded with OPEC, Russia, Venezuela and Iran for oil just a year after the U.S. had been energy independent and a net exporter. Nor would it likely have advanced the Biden administration's primary goal of saving the planet from climate change.

On top of all that, one might well wonder where the liquid natural gas (LNG) will come from that President Biden has pledged to help bail out Europe from dependence on Russian reliance after having relieved Trump sanctions on the Nord Stream 2 trans-Baltic pipeline from Siberia to Germany.

Having failed in all other attempts to relieve midterm pump pain, the Biden White House has now announced plans to "borrow" 180 million barrels of oil from the U.S. Strategic Petroleum Reserve (SPR) over the next six months, the biggest release in history, reducing it to the lowest emergency level since 1984.

This is the third time Biden has turned to SPR in a little over four months. He ordered the release of 50 million barrels of oil last November, and another 30 million barrels which he announced during his March State of the Union address.

Established in late 1975 under the Energy Policy and Conservation Act signed by President Ford, SPR was created in response

Intl Energy Agency report urges energy lockdowns due to Russian war:

'Banning use of private cars on Sundays…Reducing highway speed limits…more working from home…cutting business air travel' & SUV 'tax'

IEA report 'A 10-Point Plan to Cut Oil Use' excerpts: "Reducing highway speed limits by about 6 miles per hour; more working from home; street changes to encourage walking and cycling; car-free Sundays in cities and restrictions on other days; cutting transit fares; policies that encourage more carpooling; cutting business air travel; and more." ... "Governments have all the necessary tools at their disposal to put oil demand into decline in the coming years, which would support efforts to both strengthen energy security and achieve vital climate goals." ...

Restricting private cars' use of roads in large cities to those with even number-plates some weekdays and to those with odd-numbered plates on other weekdays

Car-free Sundays in cities: Banning the use of private cars on Sundays

'Tax' SUVs: "Sales of SUVs also keep increasing...policies to address the rise in sales of such vehicles – such as specific registration and road taxes – are key." ...Ban installation of new oil boilers

Climate Depot's Morano: "COVID 2.0 has arrived?! The 2022 International Energy Agency's (IEA) report sounds an awful lot like an energy version of COVID lockdowns. Instead of opening America back up for domestic energy production, we are told to suffer and do with less and are prescribed the same failed lockdown-style policies we endured for COVID.

It is odd how COVID 'solutions' also allegedly helped the climate and now the same solutions are being touted to deal with Russia's invasion of Ukraine. As a bonus, IEA tells us these measures will also help 'achieve vital climate goals.'

Let's simplify this: The proposed 'solutions' to climate change, COVID, and now the Russian war are all exactly the same -- hammer the poor and middle class with more restrictions on travel, less freedom, and even more surrendering of power to unelected government regulators.

This new 2022 report from IEA comes follows their 2021 report urging a form of climate lockdowns to battle global warming. The 2021 IEA report called for 'behavioral changes' to fight climate and 'a shift away from private car use' and 'upper speed limits' and thermostat controls; limits on hot water & more!."

From COVID Emergency to War & Back to 'Climate Emergency': House Dems want Biden to declare national 'climate emergency'

Russia crisis spurs push to cut oil use

By Ben Geman

The International Energy Agency just unveiled ideas for quickly cutting oil demand at a time when Vladimir Putin's war on Ukraine could bring substantial loss of Russian barrels from global markets.

Why it matters: The 10-point plan comes amid IEA warnings that the war could become the biggest supply crisis in decades as countries look to isolate Russia.

• It's part of a wider reckoning in Europe — Russia's largest market — and elsewhere over how to curb reliance on Russia while keeping markets supplied and avoiding even greater economic shocks.

Zoom in: The plan says that "immediate actions" in advanced economies could reduce global oil demand by about 2.7 million barrels per day within four months.

They include…

• Reducing highway speed limits by about 6 miles per hour; more working from home; street changes to encourage walking and cycling; car-free Sundays in cities and restrictions on other days; cutting transit fares; policies that encourage more carpooling; cutting business air travel; and more.

The big picture: Russia is the world's largest combined exporter of crude and oil products combined and the second-largest crude exporter.

• The plan arrives two days after IEA projected that Russian exports could fall by around 2.5 million barrels per day next month and maybe more "should restrictions or public condemnation escalate."

Our thought bubble: This all seems … maybe hard to imagine? The idea of coordinated adoption of mass behavioral changes on a compressed time frame sounds like an uphill climb.

Same Garbage - Different Flies

A comment on the Australian Federal budget

By Viv Forbes of the Saltbush Club.

"The Australian Budget was a profound disappointment. Not one useless law was repealed, not one tax was abolished and not one bureaucracy was eliminated.

"Here are three essentials that were missing from the budget.

"Firstly, we hear a lot about "Build Back Better". The quickest way to start re-building Australia is to abolish capital gains tax. Far too many properties and businesses are held by aging owners, fearful of selling because of capital gains tax. New owners are always enthusiastic on how to use the assets better – they will expand, renovate and upgrade. Abolishing capital gains tax would kick-start this rejuvenation process.

"Secondly, all federal government taxes, rules and bureaucracies which impede energy discovery and development should have been abolished.

"The world energy picture has changed dramatically and the world is scrambling for reliable hydrocarbon and nuclear power. Australia cannot afford wind-solar toys, electric car dreams or hydrogen hype. And we cannot spend fifteen years seeking approval for one coal mine extension. We need to remove barriers to the exploration and development and of Australia's coal, oil, gas and uranium resources. And instead of splashing one billion dollars on Barrier Reef propaganda we should have supported domestic fuel refining capacity.

"Thirdly, the federal government should have abolished the sterilisation of private land used to fulfil obligations under the now defunct Kyoto Protocol Climate Agreement. This locked-away-land is currently supporting scrub, weeds and vermin. When landowners can control the destiny of their own land we will see restoration of the productive open grasslands that once dominated the Australian landscape. As Ukrainian grain fields are trampled and Russian food gets diverted towards China, the spectre of famine will haunt Europe and Africa – Australian land and food will be needed.

"These three budget steps would have been a giant leap for Australia. The budget lost that opportunity. We have one more chance to promote them in the coming federal election."

to U.S. supply shortages attributed to the 1973-74 Arab oil embargo during which time the average price of imported crude tripled.

In 1991, President George H.W. Bush authorized withdrawing nearly 34 million barrels during the Gulf War, although only 17 million barrels were used. And in 2011, President Barack Obama approved the release of 30 million barrels to offset the disruption of supply from Libya.

Whereas even though the latest million barrel per day drawdown is a huge amount of a 568 million remaining March SPR total, consider that even under COVID conditions the U.S. consumed nearly 20 million barrels a day last year, with worldwide consumption topping 97 million barrels daily.

That one million barrels a day will only make up for slightly less than 600,000 barrels the U.S. alone was importing from Russia last year, not enough to make much of a dent in helping Biden fulfill his magnanimous pledge for America to help compensate for European dependencies.

Canada was our top supplier, about 4.5 million barrels per day, and the Keystone XL pipeline that Biden cancelled during his first day in office would have delivered about 830,000 more.

In addition to not making much of a difference is easing Democrat gas pains ahead of the 2022 midterms, also don't count on any longer palliative fix leading into the 2024 presidential election so long as the Biden administration remains set on its goal to bankrupt U.S. oil and gas producers.

As White House Climate Adviser Gina McCarthy clarified to attendees at a March American Council on Renewable Energy forum, U.S. climate policy "is not a fight about coal anymore. It is a challenge about natural gas and infrastructure investments because we don't want to invest in things that are time-limited. Because we are time-limited."

Herein lies one of the big obstacles to Joe Biden's European LNG export bailout offer: a shortage of pipeline capacity due to permitting delays which discourage industry investment.

The time required to obtain federal Energy Department permitting can take four to five years for a pipeline that can be constructed in six to nine months. Since it can require decades to recoup the costs, McCarthy's comment about "time limits" will lend no investor confidence to future such ventures.

Although the Energy Department scrambled to finally approve two LNG export permits that it had been sitting on for more than two years, Secretary Jennifer Granholm again made it clear that this was a temporary circumstance premised upon the Ukraine invasion.

Speaking on March 9 in Houston, Granholm said: "We are on a war footing — an emergency — and we have to responsibly increase short-term [oil and gas] supply where we can right now to stabilize the market and to minimize harm to American families. ... And that means you producing more right now, where and if you can ..."

Meanwhile, the Biden White House hypocritically vilifies U.S. producers as enemies of the state for making "extraordinary profits and without making additional investment to help with supply"—even as its financial regulators tell banks not to lend for fossil fuels.

There should be an obvious message in all of this for Europe as well as American voters.

If they can't continue to rely on Russia as a reliable energy supplier, than why would they imagine that they can count on America to make up any substantial difference so long as we have an administration headed by someone who campaigned on the pledge that "I guarantee you we're going to end fossil fuels."

That theme continues to dominate his presidency, and we are all paying a painful price.

THIS WEEK:

By Ken Haapala, President Science & Environmental Policy Project (SEPP)

The Science & Environmental Policy Project began in late 1990 as a research effort by atmospheric physicist S. Fred Singer and a handful of graduate students working out of a small office in downtownWashington, D.C.The Project had two goals: (1) to gather material for a book on global environmental issues,and (2) to conduct a survey of scientists affiliated with the UN Intergovernmental Panel on Climate Change to determine the extent of what was, even then, being touted as scientific "consensus" on global warming.

What the graduate students discovered with their survey convinced Dr. Singer to set his book aside and instead to circulate among senior members of the American Meteorological Society a "Statement by Atmospheric Scientists" on greenhouse warming, which was quickly endorsed by 46 leading climatologists and atmospheric physicists (and eventually by nearly 100). That statement, issued on February 27, 1992, drew widespread media attention and was cited more than 150 times in the press. It was the first inkling journalists had that there was no scientific consensus on the reality of a global warming. Indeed, there was raging debate.

The Science & Environmental Policy Project was incorporated in the state of Virginia in 1992, and established as a nonprofit, 501(c)3 educational organization in late 1993. Today, having expanded from that core of 46 scientists, it draws on an international network of some of the finest minds in science who donate their time to promoting sound, credible, peer-reviewed research as the only basis for the health and environmental policies that affect us all.

You can help in two ways:

1. Download SEPP reports, press releases, and articles and pass them on – to newspaper editors, journalists, educators, civic leaders, and others. Help stop the fearmongering and the distortion of science.This is the most important thing you can do.

2. Support SEPP with your tax-deductible contributions. The environmental pressure groups, which present so much wrong information, have a combined clout of more than $1 billion a year.The Science & Environmental Policy Project has had far-reaching impact on less than one-hundredth of one percent of that figure. It's money well and effectively spent.

Send your contributions to:

Scope: The third part in the four-part series called the 6th Assessment Report (AR6) of the UN Intergovernmental Panel on Climate Change (IPCC). This episode is called "Mitigation of Climate Change" and it is the product of Working Group III which "focuses on climate change mitigation, assessing methods for reducing greenhouse gas emissions, and removing greenhouse gases from the atmosphere." Of course, the key assumption is that the group understands climate change and its causes, which it does not. TWTW will discuss a few of the deficiencies in the report.

Ross McKitrick published a paper showing another set of errors in using statistics to falsely attribute natural events to human caused climate change. After over thirty years the IPCC has not learned to use competent statisticians to examine studies claiming human cause.

As Richard Feynman stated: "If there is something very slightly wrong in our definition of the theories, then the full mathematical rigor may convert these errors into ridiculous conclusions." (TWTW, Mar 26). The problem is that many politicized scientist, bureaucrats, and politicians claim the ridiculous conclusions are science facts, the same as physical evidence. TWTW will discuss several more examples from NOAA and The Lancet.

The UK government announced it will address the problems brought by not importing Russian gas by relying on more unreliable, expensive wind power and reliable, expensive nuclear power. As discussed below, the problem is that they are fundamentally incompatible.

Francis Menton mentions a graph by the International Energy Agency (IEA) showing that the "Per-capita CO2 emissions in China now exceed the average in advanced economies." Of course, this graph renders foolish the claims that advanced economies must curtail carbon dioxide (CO2) emissions. China and Southeast Asia will not stop the use of fossil fuels that is bringing them out of poverty. It takes more than one generation to forget what poverty is.

With Russia's invasion of Ukraine, energy prices are exploding. For the US and Canada, which can be independent of imported fossil fuels, politicians are doing their best to promote temporary "fixes" as permanent solutions to the problems their policies create. A few examples will be discussed.

Howard Hayden corrected a small error in essay # 6 of his Basic Climate Physics. Correction of error is critical for science to advance. Failure to correct error is one reason IPCC science has stagnated.

For readers who live in the Washington Metropolitan area, solar physicist Willie Soon is giving a lecture on Monday evening, on "The Weaponization of Science: Politics, Vilification, and the Climate Debate" at the Hillsdale College Center on Capitol Hill.

Incompetent Statistics? Statistician Stephen McIntyre and Econometrician Ross McKitrick demolished the notorious hockey-stick featured in the IPCC Third Assessment Report (AR3, 2001).

In addition, McIntyre has shown that the 2000-year hockey-stick featured in the Summary for Policymakers of The Physical Science Basis, of the Sixth Assessment Report (AR6, 2021) is statistical nonsense. The authors assemble many examples of unrelated proxy data into a hockey-stick and assert that the data sources are related. But they fail to use physical evidence showing their relationships and are contradicted by well-established long-term proxies.

McKitrick has shown that attributing probabilities of human cause to unusual weather events is without an established theoretical basis in Ordinary Least Squares (OLS) Theory and is most likely highly biased.

Now, McKitrick shows huge problems in a different statistical technique used by climate researchers, Total Least Squares (TLS) in assigning human cause to weather events. McKitrick writes:

Continuing my exploration of the statistical elements of the IPCC climate attribution methodology I have a couple of papers under review at journals in which I use Monte Carlo simulations to analyse the properties of Total Least Squares (TLS, the preferred regression method) under conditions typical in a signal detection regression. There is very little underlying theory about when TLS yields consistent or unbiased results. In a single-variable model with a random explanatory variable TLS corrects a downward bias in Ordinary Least Squares (OLS, the standard regression method). But in many other cases it over-corrects or introduces new biases, and consistency results are not available without imposing unrealistic and untestable assumptions. In one paper I examine the consequences of omitted variables bias, and I will disseminate that paper separately. In this paper I look at what happens if the explanatory variables are allowed to be correlated (as they are in signal detection regressions). The results are, frankly, bizarre. I have posted a draft of the paper on the Earth and Space Science pre-print archive here: [Boldface added, see link below]

The term "bizarre" may be an understatement. Organizations that use statistics need to have their work reviewed by competent statisticians. Unfortunately, with the use of "packaged statistical programs," many users do not understand the theoretical limitations of statistics. It will be interesting to see if the final episode of AR6, The Synthesis Report, due in September contains the same statistical nonsense.

Bandwagon Science: NOAA has gone on the methane emissions bandwagon by developing mathematical absurdities. NOAA administrator Rick Spinrad stated:

"The evidence is consistent, alarming, and undeniable. We need to build a Climate Ready Nation to adapt for what's already here and prepare for what's to come. At the same time, we can no longer afford to delay urgent and effective action needed to address the cause of the problem – greenhouse gas pollution,"

According to the NOAA report:

"'Reducing methane emissions is an important tool we can use right now to lessen the impacts of climate change in the near term, and rapidly reduce the rate of warming,' Spinrad said. 'Let's not forget that methane also contributes to ground-level ozone formation, which causes roughly 500,000 premature deaths each year around the world.'"

Without physical evidence, the claim is a mathematically absurdity. Breathing indoor air from burning dung is a health risk, but ground level ozone from methane is another matter. Is living near swamps in Southeast US deadly? The W. A. van Wijngaarden & W. Happer paper covers the positive climate feedbacks of methane. Strangely, the IPCC has no negative feedbacks to global warming except humans darkening the skies. Yet the earth has cooled before. NOAA's Global Monitoring Laboratory loses credibility with such reports.

Donn Dears reports on another study showing Americans are villains who produce more than their "fair share" of carbon dioxide.

"Cutting the carbon footprint of rich countries is useless because these emissions will be replaced by emissions from growing nations."

"This paper exposes these claims as willfully ignorant, at best. By far the worst polluters are the super-rich, most of whom live in high income countries."

Do academics who advocate a subsistence lifestyle for Americans lead by example to show how it is done? In their calculations do they include the carbon costs of their computers which require extremely reliable electricity to manufacture? Or the costs of storing data on the cloud, which requires reliable electricity?

The once respected medical journal The Lancet now has a section called Planetary Health. It ran an article stating: "National responsibility for ecological breakdown: a fair-shares assessment of resource use, 1970–2017" claiming wealthy nations are responsible for 74% of worldwide ecological harm. Obviously, they fail to account for the benefits of adding CO2 to the atmosphere and the enormous damage of subsistence farming.

Continued Failure of Wind: The UK government is providing a great example of what not to do. Instead of trying to develop domestic sources of natural gas, which can complement shortcomings as nuclear comes online, it is going for wind and nuclear. John Constable writes:

"OUR energy policy has been an incoherent mess since the early 2000s when Tony Blair forced the UK off the carefully engineered and economical gas-to- nuclear strategy that was then under way."

"Far from clearing up Tony's mess, Boris and his Government appear to have learned nothing from the failure of the New Labour energy policies."

Constable and Paul Homewood point out that wind and nuclear power are incompatible. Both types of electrical generation are expensive, but the former is highly erratic, unstable, and unreliable, while nuclear is stable and reliable. To TWTW that a large part of the cost of nuclear power is due to concerns with safety that border on neurotic.

As Homewood writes concerning nuclear expansion:

"The current strike price for Hinkley Point C [nuclear] is £113.83/MWh. If prices could be reduced to below £100/MWh, it would make economic sense given current power prices of double that.

"There are two issues raised by this strategy:

"1) Who will build and fund them? [the nuclear reactors]

"2) A nuclear strategy rather undermines the case for wind and solar power. With the baseload provided by nuclear, wind and solar power will be redundant much of the time.

"And, of course, you cannot simply ramp nuclear up and down to match the vagaries of renewables. Quite apart from the technical issues, the economic case for nuclear depends on 24/7 operation."

Small Correction: In Basic Climate Physics #6, Howard Hayden corrects an error on the graph on the first page, Climate Constraint Equation. The values on the vertical axis, Greenhouse Gas Effect G were corrected to a range of 70 to 250 with the value of the horizontal line in the graph showing 159 rather than the previous 398. In entering data, a small typo can make a big difference. Correcting errors advances science, ignoring them does not.

Monday Evening Lecture: As seen through his own case concerning climate science, award-winning astrophysicist and geoscientist Willie Soon will explain how science has become politicized to target scientists who disagree with the dominant narrative of the scientific community. Dr. Soon will also consider how science could be reformed to be more open and better able to investigate and debate questions of public policy. There is no cost, but reservations are recommended to attend.

Number of the Week: 18,000. According to promotional material: "The IPCC report included 278 authors from 65 countries reviewing over 18,000 scientific papers" all in an effort to avoid discussing the characteristics of the atmosphere where the greenhouse effect occurs. If the greenhouse effect is not significantly increasing in the atmosphere, it cannot cause dangerous warming of the surface.

Saving America from planet-threatening fossil fuels

By sacrificing our economy, environment, living standards, freedoms and security

By Paul Driessen

Presidential candidate Joe Biden repeatedly promised to end fossil fuels in America. There'll be "no more drilling, including offshore," he said. "No ability for the oil industry to drill. No more pipelines."

Shortly after reaching the White House, President Biden ended Keystone XL pipeline construction and began working with congressional Democrats, regulators and eco-activists to impose leasing and drilling moratoriums, slow-walk permits, pressure financial institutions to deny funding to fossil fuel companies, and implement "social cost of carbon" rules, "environmental justice" programs, "windfall profit" taxes and other policies to close down or bankrupt fossil fuel projects and companies.

His Securities and Exchange Commission says companies must "disclose risks" from alleged "manmade climate change" – from their own production, refining and manufacturing operations; from suppliers and customers using their products; and from government anti-carbon policies.

Supplies predictably dwindled, and prices skyrocketed. Not just for gasoline and other fossil fuels that still provide 80% of all U.S. energy, but for fertilizers, farm chemicals, pharmaceuticals, paints, plastics, cosmetics and countless other petroleum-based products – and for goods and services that require offices, factories, stores and transport that need reliable, affordable energy. In other words, for nearly everything.

Keystone alone would have brought the United States 700,000 barrels of friendly Canadian oil. That's equal to the petroleum Russia was sending America before Mr. Biden finally banned the imports, after Vladimir Putin's butchery in Ukraine reached levels that even far-Left Democratscouldn't stomach.

President Biden tried to blame Putin for food, fuel and other prices that had been soaring well beforethe Ukraine invasion. He's now pleading with American oil companies to increase production – but only temporarily (to send liquefied gas to Europe and to protect Democrat office holders in November), without easing his anti-oil edicts.

He begged Saudi Arabia, the United Arab Emirates and Venezuela to increase their oil production. He used Russia to broker a new nuclear deal with Supreme Leader Ali Khameni, so that Iran can sell more oil on the global market. He apparently believes those sources don't emit "dangerous" carbon dioxide.

Above all, Team Biden doubled down on calls for America to switch from gasoline cars to electric vehicles, and from coal and natural gas electricity generation to wind, solar and backup battery power. They claim this massive, costly restructuring of America can replace "dirty, planet-threatening" fossil fuels with "clean, renewable, sustainable" wind, solar and battery energy. It's a duplicitous con.

Wind turbines and solar panels on this scale would defile millions of acres of crop, scenic and habitat land. They would kill millions of birds, bats and other wildlife. They require massive amounts of raw materials (and thus mining) to create expensive, inefficient, weather-dependent energy devices. They and 1000-pound battery modules are the least clean, renewable, sustainable energy sources imaginable.

"Clean" technologies merely replace CO2 and methane emissions in the USA with massive amounts of real, toxic pollution in other countries, out of sight and mind, where climate activists can ignore them.

A Green New Deal would make America almost totally reliant on China, Russia and other despotic and unstable nations for the metals and minerals needed for GND technologies. And for the equipment itself, because a fossil-fuel-free America wouldn't have the reliable energy needed to manufacture wind turbines, solar panels, battery modules, transformers and thousands of miles of new transmission lines. America's entire GND energy and economic future could depend on their tyrannical good graces.

China, Russia and their surrogates could wield green tech as a strategic weapon, banning exports of materials or technologies to advance their political goals. They could even embed trip-switches or backdoors for hackers in equipment they sell to us, enabling them to close down part or all of our electrical grid and economy. A shutdown could kill millions.

The quantities of metals, minerals and other raw materials required for this "green energy transition" are almost incomprehensible. We would have to mine Planet Earth on unprecedented scales.

The first stage of President Biden's offshore wind energy program alone would require 110,000 tons of non-renewable copper – plus millions of tons of cobalt, lithium, nickel, aluminum, iron, manganese, rare earth elements, platinum, plastics, concrete, and that suddenly very visible and valuable metal: nickel.

His plan calls for 30,000 megawatts of offshore wind energy by 2030. That's 2,140 monstrous 850-foot-tall 14-MW turbines. It sounds like a lot of electricity, but it wouldn't even meet New York State's peak summertime electricity needs. And they'd generate zero electricity half the year.

Based on average global copper ore bodies, just those 110,000 tons of copper would require removing 40,000,000 tons of overburden and processing 25,000,000 tons of ore. That's enough crushed rock to cover a 24-foot-wide highway from Washington, DC to Tampa, Florida ten feet deep! Just for the copper.

(Or you could bury the White House, Capitol Hill, all the most climate-focused federal agencies, and all Greenpeace, Sierra Club and other eco-pressure groups' DC offices under 100 feet of rock and dust.)

Climate- obsessed legislators, regulators, activists and judges detest and contest mining anywhere in the United States, even to support the Green New Deal they claim is essential to save America, our planet and humanity from "climate cataclysms." They've already made millions of acres off limits to exploration and mining, affecting numerous world-class prospects.

In just the past couple years, they prevented three critically needed mines from opening: Alaska's Pebble Mine (billions of pounds of copper, gold, silver, molybdenum, rhenium and other metals); Minnesota's NorthMet mine (billions of pounds of copper, cobalt, platinum and nickel); and enormous lithium deposits in Nevada.

That means GND mining and processing would take place in Asia, Africa and Latin America, mostly by or under the auspices of Chinese firms – under environmental, pollution control, workplace safety, and child and slave labor rules, standards and practices that were repudiated in America 50-100 years ago.

Will the White House, congressional Democrats, EPA, Labor Department and SEC demand that companies disclose all those fossil fuel uses, risks, environmental impacts and human rights abuses?

They loudly promote electric vehicles and a total transformation of the U.S. energy system and economy. But they say nothing about acquiring the raw materials and equipment essential for turning these dreams into reality. They are silent about the land destruction, air and water pollution, wildlife losses, human diseases and deaths, and eco-imperialism that their policies impose, especially on people of color.

They are mute about the ways their "climate protection" racket would allow China, Russia and other thuggish regimes to pursue their territorial ambitions – and give them unprecedented control over the Western World's energy, jobs, economies, living standards, foreign policies and national security.

They make no attempt to calculate how many wind turbines, solar panels, vehicle and backup battery modules, transformers and transmission lines would be needed in a fossil-fuel-free, all-electricity nation. How many acres of wildlife habitat would be disrupted or destroyed. How many new mines would have to be opened. How many birds, bats and other animals would be killed. How many trillions of tons of ores and overburden would have to be blasted away and processed. Or how many huge landfills we'll need for all the worn-out turbines, blades, panels and batteries. They certainly don't discuss how much our living standards, personal choices and basic freedoms would be reduced in their "clean energy" America.

They don't ask because they don't want to know – and don't want us to even think about these issues.

Putin's Ukraine war has opened eyes about NATO, disarmament and Europe's feckless reliance on Russian natural gas. We need equal realism about America's climate and energy policies – and how far America's ruling elites would take us down the path to ruin, to achieve their Green Utopia.

chaotic we [will] live in a permanent state of biblical catastrophe."

Not to be outdone, UN Secretary General Antonio Guterres called the latest UN climate report "a file of shame, cataloguing the empty pledges that put us firmly on track toward an unlivable world." Drilling for more oil and gas is "moral and economic madness," he insisted. If humanity doesn't stop using fossil fuels, we will be overwhelmed by devastating floods, heat waves, droughts, firesand crop failures.

Global sea levels have already risen "a shocking nine inches," the PurpleOrange PR Agency proclaimed, promoting a client's Climate Neutral Certified label, which is designed to channel more money to "authentic, immediate climate action."

Back on the non-parallel-universe Planet Earth, a truly unlivable world would be one without fossil fuels. Not just to generate electricity, cook food, heat homes and water, and power cars, boats, trains and planes – but for fertilizers and insecticides to grow more food on less land, and for plastics, pharmaceuticals, paints, cosmetics, clothing and other essential products. For us today; for billions more tomorrow.

Fossil fuels to extract and process trillions of tons of raw materials, too, and manufacture the millions of wind turbines, billions of solar panels, billions of battery modules and millions of transmission line towers that would blanket our croplands, scenic areas and wildlife habitats if we didn't have fossil fuels.

In fact, far worse than a warmer planet with more airborne plant-fertilizing carbon dioxide would be a colder planet with less CO2. That would mean less arable land, shorter growing seasons and much lower crop yields, on top of losses from a devastated Ukraine and sanctioned Russian wheat crops.

(Why is it that Twitter twits never cancel, suppress or even fact-check climate fear porn? Why is it never just climate change, but always climate cataclysms? Why always manmade climate change, as though past natural climate changes never happened? Why do Guterres, Gore, Kerry, Biden and AOC always have to top his, her, hir, ver, zir fellow alarmists in hysteria? Why is the fear-mongering always based on computer models, never on actual data and evidence? Why does it always ignore China's massive fossil fuel use and greenhouse gas emissions?)

One of the prevalent climate alarm themes is sea level rise.

Back on real Earth, if the DC Swamp inhabitants of 35 million years ago had looked up, they'd have been transfixed in their last moments by a non-special-effects meteor hurtling into what is now Cape Charles, Virginia on the Chesapeake Bay. The 2-mile-wide meteor obliterated and pulverized sediments and bedrock, vaporized plants and animals, sent rock fragments hundreds of miles in every direction, and launched tsunamis into West Virginia's eastern mountain slopes.

Shattered rock settled back into a crater 4,300 feet deep and 53 miles in diameter. Over the ensuing millennia, river and ocean sediments poured into the crater – and mile-high glaciers pulled 10-million cubic miles of water out of the oceans, burying half of North America, Europe and Asia under trillions of tons of ice. Land under the ice was pressed down, while land outside the glacial zones was lifted up. Then, some 12,000 years ago, the last Pleistocene glaciers began melting.

Oceans slowly rose – some 400 feet! Land masses underwent "isostatic rebound." Areas that had been under the ice began rising; those that had bulged upward began sinking. In much of the Chesapeake Bay region, post-glacial subsidence is compounded by continued compression of pulverized crater rock – and by the ongoing withdrawal of groundwater from sedimentary aquifers beneath urban and agricultural areas that depend on groundwater.

The aquifers include layers of porous sandstone (with water between sand grains) interspersed among layers of impermeable but water-soaked shale and clay. As water is pumped out of the sandy layers, the shale-clay layers get squeezed by hundreds of feet of overlying rock and sediment, and their water is forced into the sandstones, and then into pumps. The overlying land steadily subsides.

In the Chesapeake Bay area, subsidence averages nearly 3 mm/year; 11.5 inches per century. That's in addition to almost 4.5 inches per century in isostatic subsidence, plus 7 to 9 inches per century in actual sea level rise. The total perceived sea level rise can be 24 inches per century – although two-thirds of that total has nothing to do with actual sea level rise. Indeed, the Norfolk Naval Station tide gauge at Sewell's Point shows that the rate of actual sea level rise has not changed since the gauge was installed in 1927.

The situation in Houston-Galveston, Texas, Santa Clara Valley, California, and other places around the globe is similarly complicated, even without post-glaciation issues. To single out actual sea level rise – and blame the rise on humans and fossil fuels – is simply disingenuous.

However, salt-water intrusion and coastal flooding are serious, recurrent, growing problems, especially during hurricanes and as more expensive homes are built along coasts. Some communities have slowed subsidence by relocating groundwater pumping stations away from the coast, reducing withdrawal rates, increasing aquifer recharge, or substituting surface water for groundwater. Others have installed sea walls, improved drainage systems, and pipelines to bring water from nearby lakes and rivers. Other options include desalination plants to create more fresh water, recycling household "gray water" to agricultural use, and switching to less water-intensive irrigation methods, as Israel does.

These approaches are far more practical and cost-effective than trying to stop seas from rising any further, like a modern King Canute, by banning fossil fuels, especially if it's done only in some Western nations.

Meanwhile, inhabitants of Tuvalu, the Maldives and other

The Democrats War On America: In Their Own Words

By Gary L. Wickert

There isn't much about the world today that doesn't seem upside down. Men competing in women's sports; children being indoctrinated with gender ideology, and lifelong criminals are given bail so they can murder innocent Americans. America's economy is shut down tighter than the Keystone XL pipeline because of rabid hysteria about getting a cold, but illegal immigrants, drug and human traffickers, and child predators are allowed to pour over the U.S. border unchecked, untested, and unmasked. Phantom presidential "collusion" with Russia by one president is investigated for years while top intelligence experts who denied the existence of Russian disinformation on the laptop of another president, and then just look the other way when proven wrong. The arrest of four Disney employees after a massive undercover operation targeting human trafficking, child predators, and prostitution was followed up by the land of Mickey Mouse voicing strong opposition to Florida's new law prohibiting elementary school teachers from indoctrinating young children—kindergarten through 3rd Grade—on sex and gender issues; a law overwhelmingly supported by Florida Republicans and Democrats.

Throngs of young planet-savers actually believe that 97% of climate scientists agree that human activity is significantly contributing to the warming of an entire planet's climate—its actual global climate. Even worse, the misinformed and misguided believe that punishing ourselves with $6 per gallon gasoline will solve the problem and change the climate of an entire planet. There really isn't much that makes these days. The entire climate change fairy tale isn't about being good stewards of the environment. The target is capitalism; not global warming. As recently revealed by a United Nations official, "This is the first time in the history of mankind that we are setting ourselves the task of intentionally, within a defined period of time, to change the economic development model that has been reigning for at least 150 years, since the Industrial Revolution."

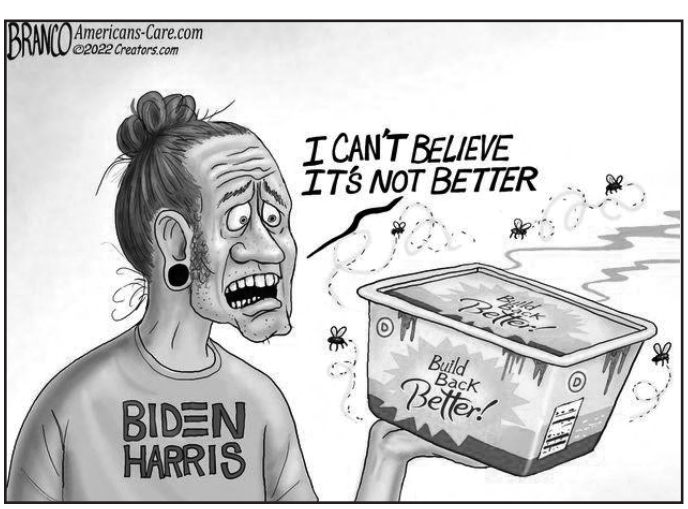
We are witnessing a titanic struggle between democracy and authoritarianism; between following real science and junk science; between responsible decision-making and technocracy; and between the rule of law and a complete unwillingness to punish those who violate it. Hybristophilia is the scientific name for women being attracted to and falling in love with those who commit crimes; especially prison inmates looking for "pen pals." That sort of lunacy is taking place on a grand scale with the American left embracing lawlessness. Liberal judges grant cheap bail to the most violent repeat offenders, only to have those hardened criminals commit murder or mow down innocent children at parades. By concocting phantom racism within the criminal justice system and cherry-picking stand-alone statistics with mean nothing. A police officer is nearly 20 times more likely to be killed by a black male than an unarmed black male is to be killed by a police officer. Let that sink in as Democrats across the country reluctantly goose step to rallies actually supporting defunding the police.

Bobby Kennedy once said that every society gets the criminal it deserves. Nobody in their right mind would support defunding police, which would hurt the most vulnerable areas of our American cities. They support it because they are in their right mind—in fact, the actual goal is to tear down society and rebuild a "fairer" society fueled by a massive federal government which guarantees income to all Americans. The strategy is known as the "Cloward and Piven Strategy" and is the namesake of two professors at the Columbia University School of Social Work. The goal is to overwhelm our social programs through a strategy of calculated chaos, create division by race, sex, age, and social standing, tear down our police force in order to create a crisis of crime, and replace everything with a guaranteed income and government-mandated "equality" which would not eliminate poverty—it would expand it. Caught up in the strategy are millions of outright Socialists and Communists whose misguided ideas have failed every time they have been tried in human history.

Democrats have lost control of their own party as the mainstream faction of the party dismantles the English language, unable to identify any differences in men and women, pushing a panoply of pronouns which make no sense, supporting the sexual indoctrination of kindergartners, and labelling shoplifters, murderers, vandals and arsonists as "peaceful protesters." You can't make this stuff up.

Democrats have also declared war on the Judeo-Christian foundations of this nation. They clearly have a religion problem. While they protest loudly if conservatives accuse them of not being patriots, not respecting the Constitution, or attacking our religious institutions, they constantly and repeatedly justify our concerns with their hostility toward anything religious. The left lost what is left of their collective minds when President Trump nominated Amy Coney Barrett to the list of potential Supreme Court nominees. Their toxic rumor was that she actually attended a Bible study.

Democrats have declared war on children with their support of the sexualization of kindergartners. They have declared war on women by abandoning all pretense of supporting women's rights by allowing men to compete against hard-working female athletes. They have declared war on African Americans by opposing all efforts to give inner city blacks a choice when it comes to failing public schools dominated by radical teachers' unions. They have declared war on inner city neighborhoods by attempting to leave the most violent and dangerous neighborhoods in our country unpoliced. At the same time as they surrender our inner-city neighborhoods to criminals and murderers, their official party platform promises to keep more people out of prison, use counselors instead of armed police officers, give millions of violent criminals early release, and instead protect these vulnerable neighbors "by building trust." That'll work about as well as the counselors.



Democrats like Joe Biden, Kamala Harris, and Cory Booker make political careers out of preaching we should contribute to the overpopulation of prisons by imprisoning those convicted of drug offenses, their soft-on-crime platforms overlook three very important factors: One, drug crime is most frequently associated with other criminal behavior and activity. Two, drug convictions are not the driving force behind the population in American prisons. Prisoners convicted of drug crimes make up less than 15% of our state prison populations. The overwhelming majority of prisoners in state prisons have been convicted of violent crimes and 25% have been convicted of murder, manslaughter, or sexual assault. State prisons house 90% of nation's 1.5 million prisoners, and virtually all prisoners serving long sentences are not in prison because of drugs. Three, the overpopulation of prisons is mainly a phenomenon of the post-COVID distancing nonsense. Before the pandemic, 41 states were operating at less than 75% capacity.

The truth is that there are too few people in prison; and if building more prisons is the price of safe communities for the families who live in them, then so be it. If you want to see criminals who deserve to be locked away forever, just turn on your television set. Yet far too many criminals do not get the sentence they deserve or are released far too early.

Republicans can't understand Democrats because they assume that the two ideologies share a common goal: a safe and prosperous America predominated by individual liberty and the ability of any person to get ahead and build the American Dream. They do not share that goal. One political party is attempting to tear down precisely what the other political party is attempting to build and strengthen. Perhaps that will put to rest any silly notion that the two political parties should just "get together, discuss their differences, and compromise." There is no compromise when one party's goal is to destroy the other party's goal.

There is no question that the left has embarked on a very dark agenda. As David Horowitz writes in his best-selling book, "Dark Agenda: The War to Destroy Christian America", Horowitz exposes not only the left's progressive war against Christianity, but also their covert war against America and its founding principles. Dark Agenda is about an embattled religion, but most of all, it is about our imperiled nation. Much like the Ukrainians whose homeland has been invaded and who are fighting for their very existence, America too is under attack by no less ruthless an enemy. No amount of conciliation is going to carry the day.

Emergency Laws

quite another when applied to average citizens seeking to protest their government. Unfortunately, the "leaders" of governments are softer on dictators and terrorists than on citizens. The reason, those who lead governments worldwide share a common bond – protecting incumbent leaders, including depots, is more important than protecting citizens.

Russia's vicious war crimes against Ukraine are being punished with sanctions, but there is a refusal by the U.S. and Europe to impose the financial death penalty – sanctions on all oil and banking to literally shut down Russia by isolating its assets and resources. Iran, a terrorist state is another example. The U.S., with Russia's assistance, is negotiating cash for hostage trade, which would unfreeze $11 billion of Iranian assets. The U.S. goal is to revive the 2015 Iran nuclear agreement in the hope that Iran will restrain its ability to develop nuclear weapons. Realists, however, assert the agreement allows Iran to build nuclear weapons and sell more oil to support more terrorism. These actions make no sense in that Russia and Iran seek to destroy the U.S.

Putting aside stupidity in the foreign policy arena, the question that needs to be addressed is why do emergency laws apply in domestic matters? Canada's recent use of its Emergencies Act illustrates it is an economic and social death penalty for the citizens it is used against. Should civilized governments, yet alone democracies, set out, without due process, to socially and financially destroy its own citizens?

In the 21st century, governments know they do not have to beat people bloody in front of cameras to destroy their lives. The government needs only make laws so unjust and lacking in due process, that people cannot defend themselves.

During the truckers' protest in Canada, Prime Minister Trudeau invoked the 1988 Emergencies Act, claiming the protest is an illegal blockade endangering public safety. The Act is to be used in situations that "seriously endangers the lives, health or safety of Canadians." The types of situations it is to address include espionage, foreign influence activities, serious threats of political violence, or acts intended to undermine or overthrow a constitutionally established government. None of these situations apply to peaceful protests whose offense is blocking streets and making noise.

The Emergencies Act allows the government to force banks to freeze the social media accounts that collect money to support the protesters, freeze the bank accounts of the protesters, seize their [300] trucks, revoke their driver's licenses, deny them insurance on their trucks, and of imprisoning them for years. It also authorizes the government to deny citizens the right to assemble and prohibit travel in certain areas of the country. By cutting off the ability of truckers to make a living, Trudeau is executing their ability to live a normal life. Trudeau was the first prime minister in the thirty-four years since its enactment, to invoke the Emergencies Act. Trudeau finds peaceful resistance to be so extreme as to be a threat to the state.

In the U.S., our federal government does everything "bigger and better" than any other country. If at any time the president of the U.S. feels, thinks, or worries about an emergency, he has the power to declare it through an emergency proclamation. While the U.S. has only one law designated "National Emergencies," NYU's Brennan Center identifies 136 laws or other authorities that allow the president to establish a national emergency. Ninety-six of these laws require nothing more than the signature of the president on an emergency proclamation. Fifteen of these emergency laws have restrictions such as involving a specific subject matter or the need for armed forces. Only thirteen of these emergency laws require a congressional declaration of emergency.

These 136 emergency laws are part of a massive legal framework that contains over 3000 separate criminal offenses in 50 titles of the U.S. Code and 23,000 pages of federal law. That was the last count in 1980. More troublesome, the National Emergencies Act "…does not define what constitutes a national emergency."

Without a legal definition, determining the statutory meaning of the term falls to the common meaning found in a dictionary. Merriam Webster defines a national emergency as "a state of emergency (an unforeseen circumstance needing immediate action) resulting from a danger or threat of danger to a nation from foreign or domestic sources and usually declared to be in existence by a governmental authority." A very subjective definition.

Historically, emergency powers were limited to wartime. But today, non-wartime presidents want war powers to control citizens in a domestic setting. The Covid pandemic is the most recent use of emergency powers. Relying on emergency public health powers the federal government-imposed mask and vaccine requirements on the entire population of the nation while keeping the science supporting its proclamation secret. It locked up the entire nation for two years. Another recent example, on inauguration day, Joe Biden, without the involvement of Congress, terminated all authorities requiring the construction of the Southern border wall which was being built to keep drug cartels, sex traffickers, and criminals out of the U.S.

The troubling use of both proclamations is that they were invoked without any direct factual findings to support the actions of the government. The public health emergency law referenced a waiver of liability law for those assisting the federal government address Covid, i.e., protecting the pharmaceutical companies. As for revoking authority to construct the Southern border wall, president Biden proclaimed the wall "is not a serious policy solution." So much for the rule of law.

The only requirement to implement emergency power is the president must specify the provision of law under which he will act. The provision cited does not need to relate to the actions taken.

The emergency law terminates on the anniversary of its declaration unless the President notifies Congress of its continuation. The other option for terminating an emergency is for Congress, by joint resolution to terminate it. Since joint resolutions must be signed by the president, Congress needs a two-thirds majority to override a presidential veto. Otherwise, these emergency powers are continuously available to the president.

Recently, the U.S. Senate passed Senate Joint Resolution 38 which would terminate the Covid emergency declared by former President Donald Trump on March 13, 2020, and which has been extended multiple times by President Joe Biden. President Biden is threatening to veto the Joint Resolution, should the House of Representatives pass it. A presidential veto is likely to be sustained since the Democrats control the House. The president keeps his emergency powers to again shut down the nation, at his whim.

In addition to health emergencies and the Southern border wall, other powers available to the president include the ability to control airports, industrial facilities, and any device capable of emitting electromagnetic radiation, i.e., our communications system. The authority most used is the International Emergency Economic Powers Act ("IEEPA"). It authorizes the president to invoke emergency powers relating to U.S. national security, foreign policy, or the economy, including financial and commercial transactions. Sanctions can be imposed on individuals as well as countries, including the freezing of bank accounts and the seizure of assets. While there is a requirement that the threat be related to an activity in whole or part outside of the U.S., it is easy for a president to assert a foreign connection merely by accusation. The IEEPA has been invoked 55 times.

Literally, Congress through the enactment of the National Emergencies Act gives all presidents the power to be a dictator, at the time of their choosing. The only possible restraint is for Congress to remove such power, at least as it applies domestically. 3000 criminal laws and 23,000 pages of federal law should be sufficient for any government to keep the peace.

Hunter laptop called more evidence U.S. intelligence community interfered in 2020 election

By WorldTribune Staff, March 27, 2022

In knowingly disseminating the false narrative of the Hunter Biden laptop story being "Russian disinformation" in October 2020, the U.S. Intelligence Community sought to manipulate public opinion through the press and to disenfranchise President Donald Trump's voters, an analysis said.

"This was just another information campaign by the Intelligence Community, instituted for the purpose of influencing the 2020 election," the Techno Fog analysis noted.

Even The New York Times has now confirmed what the public has long-known: that the Hunter Biden laptop, with all its incriminating e-mails and scandalous media, is authentic.

Still, "the laptop that launched a thousand lies" served its purpose for the Left.

The lies "weren't limited to the usual suspects in media: Brian Stelter, CNN, etc. Instead, we saw them from more than 50 former senior intelligence officials, from directors of the CIA to directors of the National Security Agency," the analysis noted in focusing attention on the role played by the U.S. intelligence community (IC).

Related: The October 2020 lie: Heads of U.S. intelligence, 'experts' called Hunter report a Russian 'laptop op', March 20, 2022

Those officials included Gen. Michael Hayden (a former director of both the CIA and NSA); John Brennan (former CIA Director); James Clapper (former Director of National Intelligence); and Leon Panetta (former CIA Director).

The analysis listed several deceptions by the IC that were backed by the corporate media including the "infamous September 3, 2020 article from The Atlantic's Jeffrey Goldberg — where Goldberg accuses Trump of calling dead American soldiers "losers". The story, later proven to be bogus, was based on U.S. intelligence sources.

"Our Intelligence Community is keen on protecting the corrupt and committed to deceiving the public to achieve their goals," the analysis said. "In other words, the intelligence operations have come for the Americans. We're targets — and we're the victims."

Who is Michael Rubenstein? 'Single individual' controlled all Green Bay 'Wi-Fi, machines, and ballots'

By WorldTribune.com 03/06/2022

'The OSC learned that all machines in Green Bay were ESS machines and were connected to a secret, hidden Wi-Fi access point at the Grand Hyatt hotel, which was the location used by the City of Green Bay on the day of the 2020 Presidential election.'

Analysis by WorldTribune Staff, March 4, 2022

The March 1, 2022 report by Wisconsin's Office of the Special Counsel does not make for boring, bedtime reading. Every American who voted in 2020 should read it.

Take, for example the following paragraph:

The OSC learned that all machines in Green Bay were ESS machines and were connected to a secret, hidden Wi-Fi access point at the Grand Hyatt hotel, which was the location used by the City of Green Bay on the day of the 2020 Presidential election. The OSC discovered the Wi-Fi, machines, and ballots were controlled by a single individual who was not a government employee but an agent of a special interest group operating in Wisconsin.

Reporter Emerald Robinson, formerly of Newsmax, had an appropriate journalistic response to a story being ignored by even major conservative news outlets:

Wow. So one guy hidden at the Grand Hyatt Hotel controlled Green Bay's election from his room? What is that guy's name? According to the report: his name is Michael Spitzer Rubenstein. Why was a lawyer from Brooklyn in control of an election in Wisconsin?

Former Trump White House staffer Garrett Ziegler posted on Telegram: "Spitzer-Rubenstein is a CRIMINAL! The Special Counsel report has been written — now is the time for ARRESTS!" Special Counsel Michael Gableman, a retired state Supreme Court justice, also provided disturbing details — again not written in mind-numbing legalese — about the blatant coverup of evidence by the companies contracted to conducted computerized vote-counting in Wisconsin:

The OSC began a comprehensive investigation of voting machines in Wisconsin. As part of that investigation, subpoenas were sent to Dominion, ESS, and Command Central, LLC, a Dominion reseller and servicer. The information sought included information about who, when, where, and what updates the machines were provided.

The OSC learned that one machine company representative stated that the voting machines were "wiped" during updates, meaning they did not retain federally required voter data.

It was discovered that Command Central, LLC, received images of cast ballots on election night using the internet. Command Central is alleged to be holding actual ballots cast on election night at its offices in Minnesota in violation of Wisconsin law.

The OSC was not able to complete this portion of its investigation. ...

As of the date of this Report, the voting machine companies have refused to comply with the OSC's legislative subpoenas, and have provided no data. The OSC considers this investigation incomplete but ongoing.

The OSC also sought information about the machines in Wisconsin used on election night from the clerks. The clerks either did not possess the data sought by the OSC or refused to provide it, with Green Bay and Madison insinuating that providing secure voting machine data to the OSC would somehow compromise election integrity. In other words, these cities claim that it is impossible to verify the integrity of the voting machines because doing that would jeopardize the integrity of both the machines and future elections.

But back to Michael Spitzer Rubenstein:

One of the functions of Mr. Spitzer Rubenstein's service as "on-site contact" was to coordinate with the contractor staff at the Hyatt Regency and KI Convention Center to set up wireless networks for Election Day operations. At Mr. Spitzer Rubenstein's instruction, there were three WiFi networks available. One was the general conference facility public network that would be available to members of the press and others. That network was password-protected, but the password was widely available. A second password-protected WiFi network was created for Central Count staff. Mr. Spitzer Rubenstein also directed that a third WiFi network be established, but that network was to be hidden and it was not to be password-protected. Spitzer Rubenstein also ensured that "both networks reach[ed] [his] hotel room on the 8th floor" (App. 262-266).

On election day, Spitzer Rubenstein had access to ballots and determined which ones

Pennsylvania 2021 election: 288 ballot traffickers, no prosecutions

Analysis by WorldTribune Staff, April 6, 2022

How's that election integrity working out?

At least 288 individuals were caught on video depositing more than one ballot in Pennsylvania ballot drop boxes during the 2021 off-year election.

None of them will be prosecuted, according to one county's district attorney.

Lehigh County District Attorney Jim Martin said on Monday that there were likely hundreds of instances where people deposited more than one ballot into drop boxes between Oct. 18 and Nov. 2, 2021, WFMZ reported.

The state's Election Code requires that each voter deposit/deliver only their own ballot.

Joe Vichot, Chairman of the Lehigh County Republican Committee, first alerted county officials that individuals had deposited multiple ballots at drop boxes during the 2021 election, according to a news release from Martin's Office.

Following an investigation, Martin said he found that there were likely hundreds of instances where people deposited more than one ballot into drop boxes between Oct. 18 and election day, Nov. 2, 2021. In that time, 7,196 ballots were deposited and counted in Lehigh County. Based upon the review by detectives, at least 288 people deposited more than one ballot in the various drop boxes, all of which were under video surveillance, according to the news release.

"Based upon the sampling, it is clear that many more than just those observed deposited more than one ballot," Martin said.

Some of the individuals depositing more than one ballot have been identified. But Martin said they won't be prosecuted.

There will be no prosecution brought as a result of the investigation "because to prosecute those few whose identity can be proven would be unfair and unjust given the much larger numbers who cannot be identified and who also deposited multiple ballots," Martin said.

Pacific islands and coral atolls worry about rising seas due to fossil fuels. However, most of them are increasing in land area, not decreasing – as corals grow, sediments are laid down off their coasts, and volcanic lava flows expand land masses.

Moreover, few of these islands and coral reefs even existed 12,000 years ago, when the Wisconsin Glaciation extracted 400 feet of seawater from the world's oceans. The islands and atolls began growing as the seas rose. They've continued growing with every additional foot of sea level rise since the last Ice Age and the Little Ice Age (1350-1850) – and show no signs of stopping.

Cosquer Cave's Paleolithic paintings near Marseille, France (the entrance is 115 feet below current sea level) and a Mel Fisher dive team's discovery of charred tree branches and pine cones from a forest fire 8,400 years ago in 40 feet of water off the Florida coast further attest to steadily rising seas.

Yet, experts tell us. (1) "Snows are less frequent and less deep. The rivers scarcely ever freeze over now. There is an unfortunate fluctuation between heat and cold in the spring, which is very fatal to fruits." (2) "We were astonished by the total absence of ice in Barrow Strait. I was here at this time [six years ago] – still frozen up – and doubts were entertained as to the possibility of escape." (3) "The Arctic Ocean is warming up, icebergs are growing scarcer, and in some places the seals are finding the water too hot."

It behooves to take action. Or perhaps not. Quotation (1) is from Thomas Jefferson's diary, 1799; (2) from Sir Francis McClintock's ship's log, 1860; (3) from a Washington Post article, November 2, 1922.

Instead of parroting scare stories – and demanding that fossil fuels be replaced by pseudo-clean, pseudo-renewable energy – it really behooves us to think, analyze, ponder the many ways fossil fuels improve our lives, and demand real evidence instead of GIGO computer models for any supposed climate crisis.

Trump spokeswoman highlights shocking True the Vote findings

By WorldTribune Staff, March 31, 2022

True the Vote's election integrity investigation in Wisconsin revealed that 138 ballot "traffickers" in Milwaukee, Racine, and Green Bay counties "went to drop boxes to harvest ballots 3,568 times" in the 2020 election.

True the Vote also found that 14 of the ballot harvesters in Wisconsin also participated in one or more of the violent riots in 2020.

Trump spokeswoman Liz Harrington noted on Telegram that True the Vote found "7 percent of mail-in ballots were trafficked in Wisconsin" and there were "137,551 trafficked votes in an election decided by 20,682 votes."

"But it wasn't just Wisconsin," Harrington added. "4.8 million ballots trafficked in the 2020 Election. 7% of mail-in ballots were trafficked in every Swing State True the Vote has looked in."

True the Vote detailed how it was done:

- Exploit inaccurate voter rolls
- Mass mail ballots
- Use NGO's
- Fund drop boxes
- Pay traffickers

Trump in Georgia turns up volume against RINOs; Warns U.S. faces 'single most dangerous time'

By WorldTribune Staff, March 27, 2022

The United States is facing "the single most dangerous time in its history," former President Donald Trump said on Saturday during a rally in Commerce, Georgia during which he incinerated "RINOs" for "not doing a damned thing" about massive election fraud in 2020.

"Before we can defeat the Democrat socialists and communists, which is exactly what we're running against at the ballot box this fall, we first have to defeat the RINO sellouts and the losers in the primaries this spring," he said.

Before addressing other flashpoints at home and abroad, Trump loudly defied the advice of Republican strategists urging him and conservatives to move on from the election of Nov. 3, 2020. He turned his wrath on Georgia Gov. Brian Kemp and Attorney General Brad Raffensperger:

"Kemp and Raffensperger allowed themselves to be bullied into a consent agreement by Stacy Abrams that effectively abolished signature verification and allowed massive fraud throughout the state of Georgia. It's all been found out. We have all the numbers and they are massive numbers. Under Kemp who just didn't want to do anything, Georgia officials took $45 million from Facebook's Mark Zuckerberg . . . to fund election-related activities over 90 percent of which was given to blue areas of the state to bolster Democrat turnout. We lost 2 senators over this. Kemp and Raffensberger also allowed a leftwing organization to mail out 2.2 million absentee ballot applications and place unsecured drop boxes throughout the state paving the way for massive election fraud."

"This is the single most dangerous time for our country in history," Trump said. "Far more dangerous than World War I or World War II, and that's because of the power of nuclear weapons. And yet, you have people like John Kerry worrying about the climate. The climate! Oh, I heard that the other day. Here we are, guys, threatening us — he's worried about the ocean will rise, will rise, one-hundredth of 1% over the next 300 fing years."

Trump also sent a warning to America's greatest geopolitical foes, Russia, China and North Korea, noting that the United States has the greatest nuclear power

"We have the greatest nuclear power right now in the world, far greater than any other country," Trump said. "That's because we had weapons that were 47 years old. They were so old that nobody even knew if they worked. And now, we have a very powerful nuclear power again, and that's because we rebuilt our entire military and all because you had a president who always put America first."

Trump also called for greater protection of parents' rights to control what their children are taught in school. He called for an end to all Covid restrictions, lockdowns and mandates. "And please, no more masks".

He then blasted Supreme Court nominee Ketanji Brown Jackson for not being able to define what a woman is.

"The Left has become so extreme that we now have a justice being nominated to the Supreme Court who testified under oath that she could not say what a woman is," Trump said. "If she can't even say what a woman is, how on Earth could she be trusted to say what the Constitution is?"

Following the rally, Trump gave an interview to Newsmax in which he discussed his new lawsuit against Hillary Clinton and other prominent architects for the Russiagate hoax.

Conservative spring: Right-of-center candidates rack up big wins

By M.D. Kittle

MADISON — The conservative spring has sprung, and signs from Wisconsin's April elections point to a cold November ahead for Democrats.

Conservative candidates won scores of local seats in some nationally watched races, blue-leaning Kenosha County elected its first Republican county executive, and a conservative easily defeated Democrat Gov. Tony Evers' liberal appointee to the state's Second District Court of Appeals.

Paul Farrow, chairman of the Republican Party of Wisconsin, said Tuesday's elections proved the GOP's grassroots operation is battle-tested and well-positioned to carry its momentum into the November mid-terms.

"Conservatives fought and won across the state, including in swing and deep blue areas," Farrow said in a press release."

Tuesday felt a lot like the building days of the Republican Revolution of 2010, when an Obama-and-big-government-fatigued electorate pushed Democrats out of power in the House and states across the country, including Wisconsin, elected conservative governors and legislatures.

On the list of significant victories:

› Waukesha County Judge Maria Lazar handily beat interim Appellate Court Judge Lori Kornblum, a former prosecutor in "progressive justice" John Chisholm's Milwaukee County District Attorney's office. Lazar's victory marked the second time in the last year an Evers appointee was defeated in the Second District appeals court.

› State Rep. Samantha Kerkman became the first woman, and reportedly the first Republican, elected Kenosha County executive. Kenosha is still healing from the damage done in the 2020 riots. Many residents were frustrated by the slow response to the riots from Evers and his administration.

› In La Crosse County, six of the nine candidates backed by the local Republican Party won seats on the county board. La Crosse County remains a blue island in an increasingly red 3rd Congressional District, but conservatives made significant gains inTuesday's elections.

"The conservative movement continues to grow in western Wisconsin and I think that bodes well for our party," said Bill Feehan, chairman of the Republican Party of La Crosse County.

Adams, Calumet, Door, Kenosha, Marathon, Rock, and St. Croix counties all flipped their county boards, according to the state GOP. An additional nine county boards are now within three seats of a Conservative majority.

Conservatives in Rock County won almost 90 percent of the county board races they had targeted, the RPW said. Rock County voters also elected conservatives to school boards in the Democratic strongholds of Beloit and Janesville.

In left-leaning Green Bay, conservatives took control of the city council, despite national and state liberal groups spending heavily in a desperate attempt to hold the majority for leftist Mayor Eric Genrich. The two defeated liberal incumbents led Genrich's effort to try to whitewash Green Bay's 2020 election scandal in which emails show a former Democratic Party operative and other liberal activists funded by Facebook founder Mark Zuckerberg infiltrated election administration.

The parent revolution also showed up big time at the polls. Every targeted conservative candidate running for school board seats won elections in Cedarburg, Elmbrook, Manitowoc, Menomonee Falls, Germantown, Wausau, Oconomowoc, Whitnall, Waukesha, Altoona, Amery, New London, Neenah, West Bend., and several other locations, according to the RPW. Many of the candidates are fed up with administrators and educators pushing liberal ideology in classrooms.

All three conservative candidates in the Wausau School Board were victorious, leading to an 8-1 majority on the board. Just two years ago, liberal controlled the board 7-2.

Three school boards in Kenosha County flipped to conservative control.

Conservative Jane Lang became Neenah's second female mayor. President Biden won the city by more than 1,000 votes in 2020. Waukesha, Washington, and Langlade County all won over 80 percent of their targeted races, according to the state GOP.

Conservative candidate recruiter American Majority Wisconsin said 124 of its candidates were elected Tuesday night — a win ratio of 63.6 percent. American Majority noted the five first-time candidates winning seats on Green Bay's city council "after city officials used Zuckerbucks to run the 2020 elections."

"Green Bay voters sent a clear message that they want to restore election integrity," the group said in a press release.

Turnout, too, was way up in places where local elections don't generally draw much attention. In rural La Crosse County, for instance, voter turnout was as high as 40 percent, a remarkable participation rate for a county board race.

What drove the conservative spring?

"Democratic Party policies are leaving people behind," Feehan said. "People in western Wisconsin don't believe in defunding police, they like their guns, they like hunting, and they're very concerned about the crumbling rural roads out here." Roads, coincidentally, liberal governor Tony Evers promised to fix when he ran four years ago.

"I think we're in a good place for November," Feehan added.

on election fraud, but was overwhelmed daily by the sheer volume of information/evidence that has come out. I tossed the first five drafts and tried to pare this one down to the basics – which has still left me with a LOT of information to unpack. Bear with me, please. Understanding the inner workings of the Electronic registration Information Center is essential if we are to be effective against it in the months ahead. And, we cannot say it enough, if we cannot secure the ballot for this upcoming November, 2022, midterm we will have lost our republic and the freedoms we cherish. There will be no second chances. HONEST ELECTIONS, WITH SECURE BALLOTS ARE THE LIFEBLOOD OF OUR FUTURE AS A FREE NATION. Yes, all caps equates to yelling, and that's what I'm doing.

It IS that important!

Let's face the facts. Election fraud has been going on for decades and we have known about it, but we have ignored it. Didn't seem to be important, really, that some state had more voters than residents in several counties, or that ballots for the elderly were filled out and returned, without their knowledge.

We brushed off all the research from Judicial watch, Real Clear Politics, the Public Interest Legal Foundation (PILF) and others – until the night of Nov. 3-4, 2020, when what we saw in real time finally make election FRAUD become FACT in front of our own eyes. On our TV screens, we watched vote tallies move backwards or register in fractional votes. We heard odd reports of pizza boxes covering windows and broken water mains in counting centers. People slowly began to awaken.

Experts came out of the woodwork to dissect the happenings of that night, and held court for weeks, as affidavits and videos of irregularities poured in. Most of the focus at the time was on the Dominion machines and their world-wide connectivity. With what I have learned since, I now believe that the ERIC system was part of the coup; hardly anyone, myself included, had heard of ERIC then. Now, teams of investigators have unearthed reams of evidence, of irrefutable proof of irregularities, of dark money, of hired ballot runners and poll workers, of thousands of cartons of ballots brought in from ineligible sources, et. al. A LOT of the highest profile cheating occurred in ERIC member states.

All of this has created blow back from those states. This begs the question, of course, that, if not involved with the fraud, then why bother to complain about those who are writing about it? The responses from state election officials and Secretaries of State ranged from the emotional to the calculated. One Secretary of State begged an underling to "make Liberal bias is pervasive in national news sources, but it often is even worse when it comes to state and local news sources. Local newspapers such as the Green Bay Press Gazette, Appleton Post Crescent, and the Milwaukee Journal-Sentinel are so biased against conservative values and the truth about political issues that they are practically impossible for conservatives to read.

Thankfully, there are a number of outlets for news and commentary about Wisconsin issues that are conservative, reliable, and free. Here are five of them.

Reality News

http://www.realitynewsmedia.com/news/

You are reading this article on the Reality News website or the print edition of the newspaper. Reality News is Wisconsin's only conservative monthly newspaper covering national as well as Wisconsin-specific news stories. It prints columns and essays by many conservative and libertarian writers who are not already promoted by the major national think tanks. From the website:

"Reality News attempts to provide a forum outside of the internet for conservative minded people to interact with each other in two very important ways; 1) to allow the voices and opinions of TEA Party people to be heard through articles and letters submitted to and published in Reality News, 2) for people to publically proclaim their support of the conservative viewpoint as a sponsor and/or advertiser so these like-minded people can support each other in their business dealings as well as their political activism."

Regular Joe Show

http://www.regjoeshow.com/

"Your home for consistent conservatism without apology!" Joe Giganti hosts Wisconsin's most popular conservative radio show for two hours a day in the mornings on WTAQ, 97.5; WHBL, 101.5; and WSAU, 99.9. The show can be streamed from the website, which contains a wealth of links and news and candidate endorsements for conservative activists. From the website:

"Reasoned, mature and in-depth, host Joe Giganti digs deep to expose the facts about what's really going on and how to be a force for truth, justice, and, yes, the American way. Politics, culture, sports, entertainment…there are no safe spaces in this discussion!"

The Center Square

https://www.thecentersquare.com/wisconsin/

The Center Square, formerly known as Watchdog.org, produces a free daily email that is an outstanding source of original reporting on Wisconsin politics as well as national news and conservative commentary. From the website:

"The focus of our work is state- and local-level government and economic reporting. A taxpayer sensibility distinguishes our work from other coverage of state and local issues. As a result of this approach, our readers are better informed about the focus of state and local government and its cost to the citizens whose tax dollars fund governmental decisions."

Wisconsin Conservative Digest

http://wiconservativedigest.com/

The Wisconsin Conservative Digest is a website featuring some original news reporting and reposts of conservative news and commentary on Wisconsin politics from other sources. Online subscriptions are free. From the website:

"The Wisconsin Conservative Digest is Wisconsin's home for educating people about Conservative ideals. Our founder, Bob Dohnal, was a clinical pharmacist by trade, but Bob always had a passion for Wisconsin politics. In 1988 he launched the Wisconsin Conservative Digest as a way to engage conservatives outside of the dominant media and has been doing so for decades."

Wisconsin Right Now

https://www.wisconsinrightnow.com/

An excellent website featuring original reporting on Wisconsin and national news and commentary, great coverage of the Kyle Rittenhouse case, and it covers the release of research and news releases from Wisconsin conservative think tanks like the Badger Institute, MacIver Institute, and Wisconsin Institute for Law and Liberty. From the website:

"Wisconsin Right Now is a Wisconsin-focused news platform founded in 2020 that offers breaking news and some opinion, with an emphasis on Wisconsin. We are self-funded and, thus, an independent voice. Our mission is to give you the news you won't see elsewhere."

would be counted or not counted.

As WorldTribune.com reported in March 2021, Spitzer-Rubenstein was the Wisconsin state lead for the National Vote at Home Institute, one of several leftist groups funded largely by Facebook CEO Mark Zuckerberg. Green Bay received a total of $1.6 million in grant funding from the Zuckerberg-funded Center for Tech and Civic Life. Chapter One of the Special Counsel's report spelled out the role of Facebook CEO Mark Zuckerberg in the following provocative headline: "The Center for Tech and Civic Life's $8,800,000 Zuckerberg Plan Grant with the Cities of Milwaukee, Madison, Racine, Kenosha and Green Bay (the Zuckerberg 5) Facially Violates Wisconsin Law Prohibiting Election Bribery."

Related: Special counsel: Zuckerberg 2020 election grants violated Wisconsin bribery laws, March 1, 2022

The report also broke new ground about a "ballot tracking and harvesting application" used in Georgia and Pennsylvania:

The OSC's investigation discovered the use of a ballot tracking and harvesting application in Wisconsin. An extensive amount of time and effort went into this portion of the investigation. The OSC became attuned to the possibility of an application when reviewing email exchanges between the Zuckerberg 5 and third parties. This involved tracking applications in Georgia and Pennsylvania.

The OSC discovered ballot tracking programs in both Georgia and Pennsylvania. The OSC was able to locate and identify the developer of both programs in those States. The OSC obtained the source code for the Pennsylvania application.

In a March 4, 2022 statement, former President Donald Trump said:

Former Attorney General Bill Barr wouldn't know voter fraud if it was staring him in the face—and it was. The fact is, he was weak, ineffective, and totally scared of being impeached, which the Democrats were constantly threatening to do. They "broke" him. He should have acted much faster on the Mueller Report, instead of allowing the fake Russia, Russia, Russia, Hoax to linger for so long, but it was the Election Fraud and Irregularities that he refused to act on because he wanted to save his own hide—and he did. He never got impeached, contempt charges never went forward, and the Democrats were very happy with him—but I wasn't. The Unselect Committee of Political Hacks continues to spin its wheels in trying to fabricate a narrative that doesn't exist. The only thing they refuse to look into is the massive Election Fraud that took place in the 2020 Presidential Election.

Deep State traitors and Foreign entities stole what everyone knows was a Trump landslide victory Johnson never conceded the loss despite continual fake news media hounding. Trump acknowledged Ron's dogged resolve for truth and integrity by shouting out in March 2021 his full endorsement for Johnson to run again for Senate. Johnson only decided to run for a third term six months later. So that endorsement speaks volumes of President Trump's respect for this man.

Ok, so what has Ron Johnson done for me lately?

- Continues to insist on seeing the 14,000 hours of film footage available during the January 6th "Insurrection" that Nancy Pelosi refuses to release and demand the individuals arrested from this travesty of justice get let out immediately.

- Continues to bring in physicians and medical professionals to examine the dangers and effects of the COVID-19 jabs on all populations.

- Held a roundtable on January 24, 2022 with medical experts and attorney Tom Renz to examine the contents and implications of the Defense Medical Epidemiology Database (DMED) then wrote a scathing letter to Defense Secretary Austin asking him if he was aware of the damage these jabs have clearly done to our military personnel and what actions, if any have been taken. Also called him to investigate why the data set became altered after this roundtable and provide him the explanation

- Continues to pursue the cover-up by Fauci and Big Pharma on cheap, available treatments for COVID-19 patients and the use of Remdesivir in the Fauci death protocol

- Continues investigations into the 2020 election fraud and supporting all those entities working to uncover the specific mechanisms by which it was carried out

What more do I need to say?

Senator Johnson has my full and total support in all his pursuits and certainly in his re-election. Join me in supporting him by texting me at 414-491-3421. I will reply with some specific ways you can assist in this effort.

The Immoral, Obscene Trainwreck That Is The Irs – One Personal Story

By Andrew Zuelke

In the spirit of the dreaded April 15, I wanted to share a personal story with you.

In May 2021, I was contacted by my local tax preparer, Jennifer, that I had made an error in my 2020 tax return and I'll need to submitted an amended form. I admit, my first thought was one of dread. That was until she informed me that I not only didn't have to pay any extra taxes, but I was due an additional federal refund of $385. After paying a small fee, Jennifer electronically submitted my amended tax return.

The IRS received my filing…June 3, 2021.

I went to the IRS website (irs.gov) a couple times in 2021 to check on the status of my refund. There is a place on their website titled "Where's My Amended Return?" In a text box titled "Coronavirus Processing Delays," I was informed that it will take "…16 weeks to process amended returns." Later that year, a new message read, "It's taking us more than 20 weeks (instead of up to 16 weeks) to process amended returns. Do not file a second tax return or call the IRS."

To check on the status of my amended return, at irs.gov, I clicked on the "Amended Return Status" button. Then on another page, I typed in my Social Security Number, my date of birth, and my zip code. On the next page, I selected a tax year. It only lists 2020. Knowing how bloated the federal bureaucracy is, I was shocked that there weren't checkboxes for 2019, 2018, and 2017.

When I clicked on 2020, it took me to the next page, saying the same message as it did last year.

"Your amended return was received on June 03, 2021. However, it has not been processed. We apologize for any inconvenience. Please call 800-829-0582, extension 623, between the hours of 7 a.m. and 7 p.m., Monday through Friday. You will need a copy of your amended return."

I have been blessed by Jesus Christ with a great paying job; I'm not hard up for the refund. Just that it would be nice to get it at some point, preferably before I forget about it. The IRS will not even direct deposit your refund. Apparently, amended tax refunds have to be paper mailed. Why? It's the federal government, so who knows. Some career politicians and/or some entrenched IRS bureaucrats thought it was a good idea.

Just for fun, last December 13, I called the IRS. Somehow, I got through. I talked to a friendly enough lady. She told me what I already knew was that my refund wasn't processed yet, and then she said it would "…take an additional 30 days for my return to process." This is on top of the half-year I've already waited.

I asked her, "Then, after the 30 days, I assume I'll get my amended return." Keep in mind that I already knew the answer before I asked her, or I thought I did. I figured I would hear her say something like, "Well, possibly, sir." or "Either 30 days after or close to that, sir."

Instead, the IRS lady replied, "We won't know that until the 30 days have passed."

Friends, I wish I was making that up. That is what she said. At that point, I offered the IRS agent a courtesy "Thank you." and decided to end the conversation and go about my day.

As of the writing of this article this April, I still haven't received my refund, yet I received my 2022 federal tax refund the week after I filed it.

And mine is just one example. How many other stories like this are out there? Go online and type in "IRS is hiring more agents 2022," and many pieces will come up with the answer. One article at newsmax.com dated March 4, 2022, titled, "IRS intends to hire 10,000 Workers to Ease Tax Return Backlog." Apparently, there is a backlog of 24 million tax returns.

I invite you to read the article where IRS Commissioner Chuck Rettig shares his tales of woe is he, how his agency has 20,000 fewer employees and an 11.4 billion dollar budget, 20% smaller than 2010. Rettig laments that he feels the taxpayers' frustration. He said, "We want to do more, but we face great challenges."

The article added that the backlog won't be entirely eliminated until the end of this year.

So, to prevent future backlogs, we're not going to simplify the tax code, limit spending Constitutionally and end the progressive income tax? No, we're just going to create more public sector jobs and grow the federal government even more. Great! Just throw more money at the IRS (the infernal revenue stealers).

Want to bet that those 10,000 new hires will just stay on at the IRS permanently even after the backlog is eliminated?

I'm sure the "check is in the mail" and I'll receive my refund soon…any day now.

Connecticut school nurse fired after revealing young students were secretly given puberty blockers

By WorldTribune Staff, April 4, 2022

A school nurse in Connecticut who revealed that "gender confused" pre-teen students were being given puberty blockers and that it was hidden from their parents has been fired after she was accused of being "transphobic."

Kathleen Cataford was suspended and later fired by the Hartford School District after she wrote in a Facebook post that an 11-year-old at the school where she worked was on puberty blockers.

"Investigate the school system curriculum… CT is a very socially liberal, gender confused state," the school nurse wrote in a Facebook group. "As a public school nurse, I have an 11yo female student on puberty blockers and a dozen identifying as non-binary, all but two keeping this as a secret from their parents with the help of teachers, SSW [social workers] and school administration. Teachers and SSW are spending 37.5 hours a week influencing our children, not necessarily teaching our children what YOU think is being taught."

Cataford also said that Hartford students were being introduced to transgender content as early as Kindergarten.

Hartford Public Schools Superintendent Dr. Leslie Torres-Rodriguez issued a statement condemning Cataford's remarks:

"Hartford Public Schools strives to provide an inclusive environment where all students feel seen, valued, respected, and heard," the statement read. "We as a school district are responsible for the health, well-being, social and emotional development, and safety of ALL of the children entrusted to our care."

Hmmmm: Secret Service can't find Hunter Biden travel records from years Joe was VP

By WorldTribune Staff, March 3, 2022

The Secret Service told Republican investigators that it can't find records related to Hunter Biden's taxpayer-funded travels for 2010, 2011, or 2013 — when Joe Biden was the vice president.

In a letter to the Secret Service last month, Republican Sens. Chuck Grassley of Iowa and Ron Johnson of Wisconsin sought unredacted records tied to Hunter Biden's travels between January 2009 and January 2017.

"They asked for full travel records and criticized the agency for years of 'inappropriate redactions' — especially related to a controversial Kazakhstan trip in 2014. The senators also lamented that three years of documents seemed to be missing entirely," Jerry Dunleavy, who covers the Department of Justice for the Washington Examiner, reported on Feb. 24.

Emails from Hunter Biden's laptop with Ukrainian Burisma official Vadim Pozharskyi show that Biden scheduled a meeting in 2014 with Karim Massimov, then the prime minister of Kazakhstan, to discuss an energy deal with Ukrainian gas giant Burisma.

"Vadim — I've chosen to carry on from Paris without the Secret Service," Hunter wrote in a message dated May 26, 2014. "They are not happy about it, but it seemed far too complicated and unnecessary. Best, Hunter."

Johnson and Grassley said they had determined that even though Hunter Biden was a Secret Service protectee from January 2009 through July 2014, the United States Secret Service (USSS) did not produce any communications about his travel for the years 2010, 2011, or 2013.

"[This] raises questions, given that USSS travel records show that Hunter Biden made trips to China and other destinations around the world, including, Russia, Italy, Spain, and Mexico," the senators said.

In a letter in mid-February, Secret Service Director James Murray said the agency didn't find any documents tied to the Republican requests.

"In consultation with the Department of Homeland Security, on June 11, 2021, the Secret Service provided documents responsive to your request in accordance with law, longstanding Executive Branch practice, and Department-wide standards," Murray wrote to the GOP. "In October 2020, the Secret Service worked extensively with your committees, and agreed to search parameters provided by your offices to identify communications regarding Mr. Biden's travel. These search parameters did not yield communications for the years 2010, 2011, or 2013."

Republican investigators have specifically zeroed in on communications between the Secret Service, Hunter Biden, and his business associates at Rosemont Seneca Partners.

Last month, the senators noted that the Secret Service had handed over 259 pages of records, but with "extensive" and improper redactions.

"These inappropriate redactions impede our offices' ability to understand the full scope of the interactions between Hunter Biden, his associates, and the USSS," Johnson and Grassley wrote in January. "The USSS hid names and other information contained in email conversations regarding Hunter Biden without any proper legal justification."

Daily Mail: Russia did not lie about Biden link to Ukraine biolabs

By WorldTribune Staff, March 28, 2022

Russia's claim that Hunter Biden's investment fund was involved in raising funds for biolab projects in Ukraine was accurate, according to e-mails reported on by London's Daily Mail Friday.

The commander of the Russian Nuclear, Biological and Chemical Protection Forces, claimed there was a "scheme of interaction between US government agencies and Ukrainian biological objects" and cited the "financing of such activities by structures close to the current US leadership, in particular the investment fund Rosemont Seneca, which is headed by Hunter Biden," according to the report.

Intelligence analysts promptly dismissed the allegations as propaganda to justify President Vladimir Putin's invasion of Ukraine and divide public opinion in the U.S.

"But emails from Hunter's abandoned laptop show he helped secure millions of dollars of funding for Metabiota, a Department of Defense contractor specializing in research on pandemic-causing diseases that could be used as bioweapons," the Daily Mail reported.

"He also introduced Metabiota to an allegedly corrupt Ukrainian gas firm, Burisma, for a 'science project' involving high biosecurity level labs in Ukraine."

"Metabiota … Ukraine … Plandemics … It's all in the Biden laptop, which is, according to Marco Polo, a new Rosetta Stone of corruption," noted Garrett Ziegler in a Telegram post last month. Ziegeler, a former Trump White House official heads the Marco Polo research group.

An analysis by Federalist on March 28 noted that Russia's access to the laptop made the device and its owner a national security threat.

"The timing of events last week suggests Russia has access to the same emails as The Daily Mail or that Vladimir Putin's agents might well have obtained access to Hunter Biden's first laptop — the one the president's son believed Russians had stolen in 2018. In either case, the Biden family corruption documented on the laptops has gone from a potential national security risk to a real one — and in the midst of a war launched by Russia on a country bordering North Atlantic Treaty Organization allies."

Metabiota Honored by Klaus Schwab's WEF

In June 2021, the San Francisco-based Metabiota was honored by the globalist World Economic Forum (WEF) as one of its "Technology Pioneers" amid the Covid pandemic that WEF founder Klaus Schwab termed phase one of his "Great Reset."

The pandemic "acclimatized the world to lockdowns, normalized the acceptance of experimental medications, precipitated the greatest transfer of wealth to corporations by decimating SMEs (Small and Medium Size Enterprises) and adjusted the muscle memory of workforce operations in preparation for a cybernetic future," said a March 9 analysis in Winter Oak.

Susan Nesbitt, Head of the Global Innovators Community at the WEF said of Metabiota: "Metabiota and its fellow pioneers are developing technologies that can help society solve some of its most pressing issues."

associated with the communist regime in Beijing.

Also revealed was a wire transfer of $5 million to Hudson West, a company Hunter Biden invested in and managed, from Northern International Capital, a business that partnered with CEFC. A contract also made public by the senators showed $500,000 went to Hunter Biden as a "one-time retainer fee."

Two others showed a $1 million payment made to Hudson West by CEFC and a transfer of $1 million from Hudson West to Owasco, with the money appearing to go to Hunter Biden for the purposes of representing Patrick Ho, a Chinese businessman who has helped CEFC gain advantages through bribery, the senators said.

The $100,000 transaction was dated Aug. 4, 2017; the $5 million transfer was dated Aug. 8, 2017; the two other payments were made on Nov. 30, 2017, and March 22, 2018, respectively.

"Bank records like this piece of evidence are pretty hard to deny and sweep under the rug," Johnson told senators, asserting that the documents show corruption and conflicts of interest that could compromise Joe Biden. "The evidence is stunning, and it is growing."

Grassley told colleagues on March 28 that the report was largely based on records from the Obama administration and almost a dozen interviews with government officials.

On Monday, the senators focused on the Chinese government-linked CEFC Energy, whose since-imprisoned tycoon leader Ye Jianming was linked to the Chinese military.

"CEFC operated under the guise of a private company but was for all intents and purposes an arm of the Chinese government," Grassley said. "Hunter Biden and James Biden served as the perfect vehicle by which the communist Chinese government could gain inroads here in the United States through CEFC and its affiliates."

Grassley also showed a poster he said showed the newly public bank record which displays an August 2017 wire transfer from CEFC through Wells Fargo Clearing Services for $100,000 that stated "further credit to Owasco" — a Hunter Biden firm.

Democrats and their media allies have called the report by Grassley and Johnson "Russian disinformation."

"A question to the liberal media and my Democratic colleagues who accused us over the last two years of distributing Russian disinformation — is this official bank document Russian disinformation?" Grassley asked Monday.

Johnson echoed this in his own speech, in which he blasted Russian disinformation claims.

"Over the course of our investigation into how Hunter Biden used his father's position and name to enrich himself and his family, the dishonest press published countless stories reporting on the Democrats' false charge that Sen. Grassley and I were soliciting and disseminating Russian disinformation," Johnson said.

Grassley said he and Johnson would produce new records over the next few days "to show additional connections between the Biden family and the communist Chinese regime."

Biden link to Ukraine

Metabiota's Nita Madhav said: "It's a great honor to be acknowledged as a pioneer by the World Economic Forum. This provides validation that our technology is among the most unique in the world to build health systems, societies, and economies that are more resilient to infectious diseases. Our technology can help risk mitigation efforts as infectious diseases continue to pose an increasing global threat. We look forward to contributing to the Forum dialogues on this challenge."

The WEF says its Technology Pioneers are "early to growth-stage companies from around the world that are involved in the use of new technologies and innovation that are poised to have a significant impact on business and society."

Related: Hunter Biden investment firm tied to Ukraine bio labs, using Department of Defense funds, March 25, 2022

"Although Metabiota is ostensibly a medical data company, its vice president emailed Hunter in 2014 describing how they could 'assert Ukraine's cultural and economic independence from Russia' – an unusual goal for a biotech firm," the Daily Mail noted.

"Emails and defense contract data reviewed by DailyMail.com suggest that Hunter Biden had a prominent role in making sure Metabiota was able to conduct its pathogen research just a few hundred miles from the border with Russia. The project turned into a national security liability for Ukraine when Russian forces invaded the country last month."

"Metabiota has worked in Ukraine for Black & Veatch, a U.S. defense contractor with deep ties to military intelligence agencies, which built secure labs in Ukraine that analyzed killer diseases and bioweapons," according to the report.

Metabiota also has close ties to China's Wuhan Institute of Virology (WIV), now considered the most likely source of the Covid outbreak.

Chinese scientists performed gain of function research on coronaviruses at the WIV, working alongside U.S.-backed EcoHealth Alliance.

Researchers from the Wuhan institute, Metabiota, and EcoHealth Alliance published a study together in 2014 on infectious diseases from bats in China, which notes that tests were performed at the WIV.

Shi Zhengli, the WIV Director of the Center for Emerging Infectious Diseases who became dubbed the "bat lady" for her central role in bat coronavirus research at the lab, was a contributor to the paper.

Metabiota has been an official partner of EcoHealth Alliance since 2014, according to its website.

Tim Ramthun: Committed to Correcting the Crime

By Steve Welcenbach

Most Wisconsinites engaged in the welfare of their state and continuation of the republic set forth in the US Constitution understand that the Democrat Party in collaboration with various foreign entities stole the Presidency of the United States in the November 2020 election. The plethora of data and physical evidence supporting this conclusion continues to pile up. Yet a disconcerting cacophony resounds throughout GOP leadership and elected officials that, despite incontrovertible evidence that an organized criminal effort trampled our individual rights as citizens of Wisconsin and the Republic, that no remedy exists to make redress of this obvious wrong.

State Assembly Representative and Gubernatorial candidate Tim Ramthun doesn't think so. In fact, he introduced a resolution through legislative procedure to do just that - reclaim our ten presidential electors assigned to Joe Biden under false pretense. His action sparked hope throughout the GOP voting base that someone in government actually cared that our most basic tool and sacred right of our republican system got ripped away from us last November. And maybe forever.

So on Friday March 25th Tim graciously spent 3+ hours conversing with Reality News and a constituent who welcomed us into her home. While we covered many topics and ventured down several rabbit holes, I will confine this piece to what I felt to be the most pressing questions and interesting comments Tim provided to us.

Tim declares his political service and current gubernatorial candidacy to be a directive from God. As he explained how he became an Assembly Rep in the first place, God told him to run in the GOP primary back in 2014 which he did not win.

"God told me I would be in the Assembly. When I finished 2nd in the primary, I thought it was over, that I misheard what God told me. I didn't understand that God's plan set me up to become the Assembly Rep once Jesse Kremer decided not to run again."

"God's plan almost never looks like what WE think it should be," I replied. "But He certainly alway knows what's best for us!"

"That's for sure. And now I know that this whole thing was set up for this moment. God commanded me to pursue this election fraud stuff, to be boldly speaking the truth and pursue it to wherever it leads me. Now I am a candidate in the Governor's race, because our entire future as a State and Republic is on the brink of being lost forever."

"Thank the Lord for you and all those listening to His Word and following His plan. Mike Lindell certainly believes that as does General Michael Flynn. Do you expect to get endorsed by President Trump as the America First candidate in this race?" I inquired.

"I hope so. I'll tell you this, I will work hard every day to earn that endorsement of his support because Trump's been the only President truly pursuing the interests of the American people and doing everything he can to quash their enemies, especially the mainstream media."

"His endorsement would be huge," I added, "since America First voters comprise 95% of the GOP voter base."

We then moved into more sinister topics - The Globalists, New World Order and their desire for totalitarian control, population reduction, and a godless society. Since all of these things are playing out right before our very eyes today, I think we all agree that it's important we know the perspective of our candidates on these topics and the extent of their knowledge.

"So what do you think of our good friend Klaus Schwab?" I asked.

"You mean the World Economic Forum guy? The guy that wants to rule the world? You know, 'You'll own nothing and will love it?'"

"Yeah, that guy."

"He may be the most evil man on Earth right now. Or maybe Bill Gates, Anthony Fauci or George Soros."

"What about Klaus Schwab's science adviser, Dr. Yuval Noah Harari? I think he's actually the voice of Satan!" I exclaimed.

"Yeah, He's bad news. Doesn't hide anything. Their real agenda laid bare in everything he says."

"Do you think all GOP gubernatorial candidates ought to know who these guys are and what they're trying to do? And that they are intwined fully with the Biden administration?" I inquired.

"Absolutely. America as founded stands in their way. They must destroy America for their plan to succeed. And they're doing it. And we need to stop it."

Then we discussed that every time Tony Evers, Joe Biden or anyone else for that matter blurted out the "Build Back Better" slogan they parroted Klaus Schwab and the World Economic Forum. That's Klaus' slogan. So Tony Evers and his administration, like Joe Biden and his, are fully controlled, bought and paid for by Klaus Schwab and the Globalists of the New World Order.

We bantered about on many more topics but returned back to the elephant in the room - the stolen 2020 election. Tim stated the resolution he put forth based on illegalities called for a Writ of Mandamus - a prerogative remedy of mandamus is used for enforcing the performance of public duties by public authorities of ALL KINDS. In other words, he's attempting to force uncooperative bureaucratic systems to move forward with a correction that's clearly called for.

Finding that pathway will be a fight, because many aligned interests wish to prevent correction, including apparently, GOP leadership in both Houses the Wisconsin Legislature. Tim stated much stems from Speaker Vos and his leadership monopoly held together by fear, favoritism and funding. We will get into more specifics of Tim's perspective on this matter in the next part of this interview featured in May.

In the meantime, check out the press release Tim put out on January 14, 2022 titled "Let There Be Light #5." In this disclosure Tim exposes the specifics of the drop box fiasco and how the GOP legislative leadership assisted in facilitating their illegal use. You can find his document at:

Who elected Klaus Schwab? Convening World Government Summit in Dubai, he urges 'rapid widespread cooperation'

By WorldTribune Staff, March 31, 2022

The unelected globalist and World Economic Forum (WEF) founder Klaus Schwab proclaimed on Wednesday that a single world government is needed to solve global problems such as climate change, trade, and economic disruption.

Schwab praised the World Government Summit as a place for governments to "go beyond crisis management," while adding, "In times of crisis, the role of governments is more important and more relevant than ever."

He did not address the role played by those governments in the creation of the crises buffeting the world's population.

Related: Klaus Schwab turns on a once-promising 'Young Global Leader', Vladimir Putin, March 11, 2022

During his keynote speech on the opening day of the World Government Summit (WGS2022) in Dubai, Schwab insisted that a "Fourth Industrial Revolution" has arrived, major and enduring change is on the way, and rapid widespread cooperation between world governments is needed.

"The impact of the Fourth Industrial Revolution accelerates global change in a much more comprehensive and faster way than previous industrial revolutions. Despite all the challenges, we have to uphold the responsibility we have towards the next generation through collaborations on a national and a global level," Schwab said.

"Our futures are intrinsically connected and that requires collaborative responses."

Schwab went on to say during the session, Our World Today: Why Governments Need to Act Now: "The world has to overcome not only the damage done to our economies and our societies by COVID-19, it also has to confront the repercussions of a dangerous clash between major global powers."

It was Schwab who wrote a book celebrating the Covid pandemic not as a crisis but an opportunity for a "new normal."

In "Covid-19: the Great Reset", he wrote: "At the time of writing (June 2020), the pandemic continues to worsen globally. Many of us are pondering when things will return to normal. The short response is: never. Nothing will ever return to the 'broken' sense of normalcy that prevailed prior to the crisis because the coronavirus pandemic marks a fundamental inflection point in our global trajectory."

It has also been pointed out that "Build Back Better" is also the slogan of the Great Reset and the man who invented it, Klaus Schwab.

Does Klaus Schwab have a mole in the post-2016 GOP?

The Great Reset is donning an America First skin suit. And no one is seriously reporting it. Why is that?

WorldTribune has written two breakdowns detailing the globalist bona fides of David McCormick, ex-CEO of Bridgewater Associates, the largest hedge fund in the world, who is now attempting to purchase a U.S. Senate seat out of Pennsylvania on the backs of grassroots Republican voters.

Why I stand with Abp. Viganò and his analysis of the Russia-Ukraine

(LifeSiteNews) – An increasing number of Catholics are attacking Archbishop Carlo Mario Viganò for his analysis of the situation in Ukraine. Catholics I respect, and know, have accused His Excellency of being a "conspiracy theorist" pushing "Kremlin propaganda" and "carrying water for the KGB."

The blowback Viganò is receiving deserves our attention, as does the way establishment traditionalists are talking about the Ukrainian conflict itself. We live in a significant moment in Church history. It would be a mistake almost beyond compare to cancel the archbishop at the exact time we need him most.

Firstly, let me say I believe Archbishop Viganò is the answer to decades of prayers and penance by Catholics who have begged God to send them a prelate who can see through the lies of the world and guide them through the fog that has enveloped the Church. In this regard, I view him as a sort of Old Testament prophet.

This isn't to say he's impeccable, for no human being is, but I can't recall a single public statement His Excellency has made that doesn't read like one of the great social encyclicals of the 19th century. Even his critics would be hard pressed to deny the gifts of the Holy Spirit are plainly visible in his writings. It seems to me God is giving him graces otherwise reserved for a pope.

What did Viganò actually say?

Far from being Russian "propaganda," Viganò's well researched summary of the Ukraine-Russia conflict is a balanced explanation of what's going on in the region — and why it's taking place. It's less of an op-ed arguing for one side over the other and more of a 10,000-foot view of current geo-political realities. Few, if any, bishop statements I've read so far possess half the understanding of the situation as Viganò does.

It takes a decent amount of time to read through His Excellency's analysis given its breadth and scope. I've done so twice now. Here, in perhaps a grossly overly simplified way, is what he said:

1.The entire conflict is a trap designed by the global Deep State to purposefully provoke a war.

War is 'trap set...'

Viganò cautions, "there is a real risk that the Biden Administration will take advantage of this crisis, of which Joe Biden himself is an accomplice and responsible."

"There is also a real risk," Viganò continues, "that this crisis will serve to cover up Biden's crimes, those of his son Hunter, the China virus pseudo-pandemic, the Durham investigation, the 2020 electoral fraud, as well as jeopardizing the mid-term elections in the United States."

With the world on the brink of World War III, thanks in great part to Klaus Schwab, George Soros, and Team Biden, the "truth" will be "the foundation of justice and peace," Viganò noted.

Looking at Ukraine, "without being misled by the gross falsifications of the mainstream media," Viganò wrote, "we realize that respect for each other's rights has been completely ignored; indeed, we have the impression that the Biden Administration, NATO and the European Union deliberately want to maintain a situation of obvious imbalance, precisely to make impossible any attempt at a peaceful resolution of the Ukrainian crisis, provoking the Russian Federation to trigger a conflict. Herein lies the seriousness of the problem.

"This is the trap set for both Russia and Ukraine, using both of them to enable the globalist elite to carry out its criminal plan."

The New World Order oligarchy, Viganò writes, "shows its tentacles in the UN, NATO, the World Economic Forum, the European Union, and in 'philanthropic' institutions such as George Soros' Open Society and the Bill & Melinda Gates Foundation. All these entities are private and answer to no one but themselves, and at the same time they have the power to influence national governments, including through their own representatives who are made to be elected or appointed to key posts. They admit it themselves, when they are received with all the honors by Heads of State and world leaders, beginning with Italian Prime Minister Mario Draghi, respected and feared by these leaders as the true masters of the fate of the world. Thus, those who hold power in the name of the 'people' find themselves trampling on the people's will and restricting their rights, in order to be obedient like courtiers to masters whom nobody has elected but who nevertheless dictate their political and economic agenda to the nations."

Viganò concludes:

"There is great concern that the destinies of the peoples of the world is in the hands of an elite that is not accountable to anyone for its decisions, that does not recognize any authority above itself, and that in order to pursue its own interests does not hesitate to jeopardize security, the economy, and the very lives of billions of people, with the complicity of politicians in their service and the mainstream media. The falsification of facts, the grotesque adulterations of reality, and the partisanship with which the news is spread stand alongside the censorship of dissenting voices and leads to forms of ethnic persecution against Russian citizens, who are discriminated against precisely in the countries that say they are democratic and respectful of fundamental rights.

"I earnestly hope that my appeal for the establishment of an Anti-Globalist Alliance that unites the peoples of the world in opposition against the tyranny of the New World Order will be accepted by those who have at heart the common good, peace between nations, concord among all peoples, freedom for all citizens and the future of the new generations. And even before that, may my words – along with those of many intellectually honest people – contribute to bringing to light the complicity and corruption of those who use lies and fraud to justify their crimes, even in these moments of great apprehension about the war in Ukraine.

"May the strong listen to us, so as not to become weak in injustice. May the powerful listen to us, if they want their power not to be destruction but support for the peoples and protection for tranquility in order and work" (Pius XII, Radio message to Heads of State and Peoples of the World in Imminent Danger of War, August 24, 1939).

"May Holy Lent lead all Christians to ask pardon from the Divine Majesty for the sins of those who trample His Holy Law. May penance and fasting move the Lord God to mercy, while we repeat the words of the Prophet Joel: Parce, Domine: parce populo tuo; et ne des hæreditatem tuam in opprobrium, ut dominentur eis nationes. Forgive your people, Lord, and do not expose your inheritance to reproach, to the derision of the nations (Jl 2:17)."

Abp. Viganò: Both society and Church 'infiltrated' by people who want to 'destroy' them

(LifeSiteNews) – Editor's note: The following is a translation of an interview Archbishop Carlo Maria Viganò gave to Dr. Armando Manocchia for the Italian TV channel "Canale Italia," April 2, 2022.

Dr. Armando Manocchia: Beginning with the Second Vatican Council (1962-1965), Masonic infiltrations within the Catholic Church have become increasingly substantial. Progressivism and relativism have been employed as weapons to undermine fidelity to Tradition. Did Archbishop Marcel Lefebvre, who was excommunicated by John Paul II in 1988, therefore sense that Catholicism was on the brink of the abyss?

Archbishop Viganò: Certainly. Archbishop Lefebvre was one of the few, very few prelates who wanted to denounce the conciliar revolution, understanding its subversive nature. And I say "who wanted" because many other prelates understood that a real revolution was underway. Some saw it as a danger, others saw it as a "springtime of the Church." But among those who saw the danger, almost no one knew how to denounce it openly. Today we understand the historical merit of Archbishop Lefebvre in having rebelled against the line dictated by the conciliar politburo and having created the premises for a return of the Church to the doctrine and Holy Mass of all time.

Dr. Manocchia: Could the St. Gallen Mafia be considered as a sort of ecclesiastical World Economic Forum?

Archbishop Viganò: If we identify the World Economic Forum as a private lobby that has placed its followers in the most important posts of national and international public institutions in order to impose the globalist agenda against the will of the citizens, it is certainly fitting to see a parallel with the St. Gallen Mafia. In a similar way, this cabal of conspirators also placed its agents in the Roman Curia and in the peripheral organs of the Church, just as it imposed the conciliar agenda against the will of the faithful. But just as there is not only the World Economic Forum in the public sphere, so there is not only the St. Gallen Mafia in the ecclesiastical sphere.

We are facing a global coup that involves both civil society and the Church. Both are infiltrated and controlled by characters who use their power and the authority that derives from it, not for the purposes of the institutions they govern, but in order to destroy them. This crisis of authority must be denounced, because the action of those who have reached the highest levels of leadership both of nations and of the Church is a subversive and criminal act.

Dr. Manocchia: In his book Non è Francesco [He Is Not Francis], Antonio Socci argues that, from the point of view of canon law, the election of Francis to the papal throne did not take place in a regular manner and that the 2013 Conclave is illegitimate. What is your opinion on this?

Archbishop Viganò: The reconstructions of Antonio Socci follow the things that were let slip by Elisabetta Piqué, who is very close to Bergoglio, and Austin Ivereigh: they seem plausible, even if they are not supported by unequivocal evidence. But at the same time they have never been denied by the Holy See, and this has meant that speculations about the resignation of Benedict XVI and the maneuvers of the St. Gallen Mafia at the Conclave have multiplied, creating dismay, confusion and division among the faithful.

If we think of the Vatican's interventions on countless issues, its silence on such an important issue is disconcerting. Even greater is the bewilderment at the silence of the Cardinals who participated in that Conclave. Some appeal to the pontifical secret, but in the face of a possible violation of the norms provided for by the Apostolic Constitution [Universi Dominici Gregis], which would render the election of the Pontiff invalid, there is no justification for this prolonged silence.

I know from a reliable source that when Cardinal Giovanni Battista Re – who as Vice Dean of the College of Cardinals presided over the 2013 Conclave – was questioned privately and asked which paragraph of the Apostolic Constitution Universi Dominici Gregis was the basis for the conclave proceeding to a third scrutiny on the evening of the election, he refused to answer, asserting in an emphatic and angry way that everything had taken place regularly.

Sooner or later, the truth will emerge and the very serious damage done to the Church will have to be denounced and repaired.

Dr. Manocchia: The [institutional] Catholic Church, which has for some time now been committed to ecumenism, and in line with the logic of approval advocated by the globalist oligarchies, seems today to aim at the creation of a single religion, a syncretism that mixes monotheistic doctrines and pagan beliefs, such as the Andean cult of the Pachamama: is this an act of homicide or is it rather a suicidal gesture?

Archbishop Viganò: Both. On the one hand, the corrupt part of the Hierarchy – which for the sake of brevity I call the deep church – since it is subservient to Satan, hates the Church as the Mystical Body of Christ and intends to kill Her, just as happened to the Church's Head. But we know that just as Christ is risen, so His Mystical Body will also be resurrected after Her Passion. So yes: those who serve the devil carry out a murderous operation, however crazy and doomed to failure.

On the other hand, the healthy portion of the hierarchy is mostly composed of bishops and clerics who nevertheless accept the ideological premises of the present apostasy, since they accept the Council and the new liturgy that conveys its errors to the masses. They do not want the Church to succumb, but they are deluding themselves, against all the evidence and after sixty years of failure, by thinking that the Council has merely been misinterpreted, that the new Mass is celebrated badly but that we can return to a certain dignity in the liturgy, that ecumenism is good as long as it is only with the [Eastern] Orthodox but not with idolaters.

But if they are not convinced that the crisis began with Vatican II, if they do not understand that it was the Council that caused this disaster, and that to remedy it, it is necessary to return to the faith, morals and liturgy that existed before the Council, they are unwittingly part of the problem. They, although with the best intentions, represent that part of the moderates who, in the face of an attack on all fronts, if they do not fight, constitute an obstacle to the solution of the crisis. Their support for the Council and the secularized mentality of the deep church makes their gesture certainly suicidal.

Dr. Manocchia: Bergoglio has policed the most traditionalist orders: the Franciscans of the Immaculate, the Little Sisters of Mary Mother of the Redeemer. Is he perhaps allergic to authentic vocations or are the goods of these congregations tempting to someone?

Archbishop Viganò: At a time when the Church is suffering the drastic reduction in the offerings and donations made by the faithful due to the economic crisis caused by the psychopandemic, the closure of churches, and the disgust of many Catholics for the work of Bergoglio and the bishops, it is evident that gathering a little money and real estate is a convenient way to pad the disastrous Vatican coffers.

Society and Church 'infiltrated'

But the real reason, the one that motivates every action of the Bergoglian Church, is the relentless hatred for Tradition, of which the contemplative and conservative orders are an eloquent manifestation. Imagine the anger of these modernists who – at the same time that the most progressive communities are dying out and religious orders are disappearing in the crisis of vocations, and the loss of many who have abandoned religious life – witness monasteries and institutes flourish again in which there is discipline, fidelity to the rule of the founder, true poverty, penance, the spirit of recollection and the Tridentine Liturgy. All this makes their [the Bergoglian's] failure evident and therefore it must be eliminated, so that it may not be seen that Tradition has a much greater following (and would have enormously more, if it were not systematically boycotted) than the post-conciliar religion with its priests without cassocks, its nuns without veils, its religious who do not pray, and its empty churches.

In Bergoglio's mind, the only vocations that deserve his approval are those that are modernist, inclusive, aimed at the existential peripheries, and composed of doctrinal nothingness, moral emptiness, and trite humanitarian slogans. As soon as a vocation shows even vague signs of being genuinely Catholic and animated by the desire to give glory to God and save souls, it is attacked as being an expression of clericalism, intolerance, fundamentalism, rigidity … with all the Bergoglian repertoire of more or less offensive words that is one of the techniques used to criminalize the adversary, a method already successfully tested ever since the Council.

Dr. Manocchia: Pope Francis has praised multiculturalism, ecologism, and immigration, received Soros and Bill Gates at the Vatican, and played the role of the promoter of experimental gene serums. Could one hypothesize that there is a correlation between his work and his formation as a Jesuit?

Archbishop Viganò: If we were to limit ourselves to "hypothesizing" this correlation, we would show at least naivety and carelessness. The Society of Jesus, which was among the most important Orders in the Church, has been targeted by the action of the devil, who has corrupted its charism and has progressively diverted it well before Vatican II, and it is today the assault body, so to speak, with which the deep church demolishes what remains of the Catholic Church so as to replace it with an amorphous NGO that can act as a "container" of the Religion of Humanity desired by the Freemasons and the New World Order, consistent with the ideological foundations laid down by the Council.

Like every Jesuit, Bergoglio is first a Jesuit and then a Catholic. For this reason it is still forbidden for the Jesuits to ascend the ranks of the Hierarchy, which is why the Argentine had to ask the Pope for a dispensation to be consecrated Archbishop of Buenos Aires. If that dispensation had not been granted and instead the Rule of St. Ignatius had been respected, we would have been spared the disasters we have seen since 2013. It is evident that the Jesuits have played a prominent role not only in carrying out the conciliar revolution, but also in maneuvering to bring one of their own to the Throne of Peter.

Dr. Manocchia: In 2009, as Secretary of the Governorate, you restored the Vatican's budget in a formidable way. In fact, it went from a deficit of 8 million euros to a surplus of over 34 million euros. In pursuing this line of transparency and fighting corruption, you apparently stepped on some toes. After that, coincidentally, they appointed you Apostolic Nuncio to the United States. Was it a case of, as the Latins used to say, "Promoveatur ut amoveatur" [Promote in order to remove]?

Archbishop Viganò: My appointment as Apostolic Nuncio to the United States was decided by the then all-powerful Secretary of State Cardinal Bertone. At the time I had been Secretary General of the Governorate since July 2009 and before that I had held the position of Delegate for the Pontifical Representations in the Secretariat of State. My tasks included preparing and examining the processes for promotion to the episcopate in the Roman Curia and in the Pontifical Representations.

In this role I had opposed the appointment of unworthy or homosexual prelates, and I had proposed, among other things, to remove McCarrick's cardinal's hat. This role of mine made me unpopular with my superiors and in particular with Bertone, who persuaded me to accept the transfer from the Secretariat of State to the Governorate, as Secretary General, with the promise of then promoting me to President in place of Cardinal Giovanni Lajolo when he retired. My work to fight against corruption and heal the disastrous finances of the Governorate was opposed by some, and beginning in 2010 there was a real "mobbing" [workplace bullying] against me, with the publication of slander and defamatory articles. Abp. Viganò questions whether Francis' election was valid, urges next pope to 'stop referring to Vatican II'

(LifeSiteNews) – In a new interview, former U.S. Papal Nuncio Archbishop Carlo Maria Viganò spoke of the need "to shed light on the abdication of Benedict XVI" and called for an "investigation" into potential "manipulation of the 2013 Conclave."

Archbishop Viganò's comments came in a wide-ranging interview conducted with veteran Vatican journalist, Aldo Maria Valli, released April 5 and later reprinted on LifeSiteNews. The former nuncio discussed, amongst other topics, the growing "split" between politicians and citizens who recognize a "coup" has been enacted across the world; aspects of the "anti-globalist alliance" for which Viganò previously called; the "corruption" of Joe Biden's administration; and provided a meditation for the final days of Lent.

'Investigation' needed into 'abdication of Benedict XVI'

The most striking elements of the archbishop's interview were his comments concerning a future conclave and the results of the last, which saw the announcement of Cardinal Jorge Mario Bergoglio as Pope Francis.

Valli asked the prelate if there was anyone currently in the College of Cardinals "who is credible and authentically Catholic on whom the Cardinals could focus their votes in a conclave in order to effect a total change of tune compared to the current pontificate?"

In response, Viganò observed that some popes are "inflicted" upon the Church rather than being more happily "granted" to Her.

"But before discussing the next Conclave, it is necessary to shed light on the abdication of Benedict XVI and the question of the manipulation of the 2013 Conclave, which sooner or later ought to be the subject of an official investigation."

Should it be proven that there is "any evidence of irregularity," Viganò stated that "the [2013] Conclave would be null and the election of Bergoglio would be null, just as all of his appointments, acts of governance, and magisterial utterances would be null."

Such a monumental occurrence "would be a reset that would providentially bring us back to the status quo ante," he said, "with a College of Cardinals composed only of those Cardinals who were appointed up to the time of Benedict XVI, ousting all those who have been created since 2013 who are notoriously ultraprogressive."

The archbishop suggested that an investigation of this kind would at the very least serve to provide clarity to the faithful, and answer the "rumors" which are widely spread regarding Benedict XVI's resignation.

"Certainly the present situation, with all of the rumors circulating about Ratzinger's resignation and Bergoglio's election, does not help the ecclesial body and creates confusion and disorientation among the faithful," he said.

Benedict XVI appointed Viganò as Papal Nuncio to the United States in 2011, a position he held under Francis until his retirement in 2016, upon turning 75, the mandatory age at which resignation must be offered.

The next Pope must 'stop referring to Vatican II'

Leaving aside the issue of the 2013 conclave, Archbishop Viganò offered advice to any future "papabile" looking to "change the tune."

"If there is a Cardinal that really wants to 'change the tune,' let him come forward and – for the love of God – may he stop referring to Vatican II and instead think of the sanctification of the Clergy and the faithful," said the archbishop.

Referring to the "horrors of the Bergoglian 'pontificate,'" Archbishop Viganò had earlier noted that these "horrors and errors" of the current Vatican "did not appear out of nowhere, as if in the preceding Pontificates everything was perfect and wonderful."

"The crisis began with Vatican II," he stated, "deploring the symptoms of an illness without understanding its causes is a useless and harmful operation."

If the College of Cardinals is not persuaded that it is necessary to return to what the Church believed, taught, and celebrated up until and through the pontificate of Pius XII, all opposition to the present regime will be doomed to certain failure.

Some days prior to the archbishop's interview, on March 25, a group of prominent U.S. prelates, along with the Papal Nuncio and Vatican curial officials, secretively gathered in Chicago to "understand the spirit of what they call the 'opposition'" to Pope Francis, and to promote the ideology of Vatican II.

Archbishop Viganò referenced this meeting, saying that "we cannot help but agree with them [the conference attendees] on the intrinsic relationship between the conciliar cancer and the Bergoglian metastasis."

The former Papal Nuncio declared that it was "evident" how the current state of the Church is a "punishment" from God:

The apostasy of the Catholic hierarchy is the punishment with which the Divine Majesty is afflicting rebellious and sinful humanity, so that it recognizes the sovereign rights of God, converts, and finally returns under the gentle yoke of Christ.

Doubling down on his statement that any future Pope would need to "stop referring to Vatican II," Archbishop Viganò added: "as long as the Bishops do not recognize their betrayal and repent of it, no hope is possible for the world, since salvation can only be had in the one Flock under the one Shepherd."

Sankt Gallen mafia

Archbishop Viganò is not alone in raising questions about the resignation of Benedict XVI and the ensuing conclave of 2013. Writing on LifeSiteNews in October 2021, former intelligence officer Steven O'Reilly highlighted a number of "unsolved mysteries" regarding Bergoglio and the 2013 conclave. O'Reilly has compiled considerable research into the conclave, found in the Conclave Chronicles at RomaLocutaEst.

The St. Gallen Mafia is also believed to have been involved to some extent in the resignation of Benedict XVI, since it comprised of a number of key cardinals who schemed for years to elect a pope who would change the Church and attempt to make it more liberal.

U.S. author Julia Meloni recently examined the St. Gallen Mafia in a book published 2021, pointing to the hidden relationships between Cardinal Bergoglio and prelates such as Carlo Maria Martini, Walter Kasper, Godfried Daneels, Cormac Murphy-O'Connor, and even former-Cardinal Theodore McCarrick.

Abp. Viganò: The Church needs an 'official investigation' of Benedict's resignation (Aldo Maria Valli) – Editor's note: The following is a reprint of an interview conducted by Italian Vatican journalist, Aldo Maria Valli, with Archbishop Carlo Maria Viganò.

AMV: Your excellency, here in Italy it is more and more apparent that there is a political vacuum. A growing number of Italians do not feel that they are represented by the current political parties. On the other hand, there are political movements that are gearing up in different ways to fill this void. This question also concerns Catholics, perhaps more than anyone else, as was apparent during the first public meeting of the Comitato Liberi in Veritate [Free in the Truth Committee], which was formed in response to the anti-globalist appeal that you issued, beginning with the consideration that for two years now we have been living with all the effects of a global coup. There are two questions in this regard. First: Do you think that there is room for political action by those who intend to oppose the dominant aligned thought and fight for the liberty of man as God has created him? Second: is it still useful to invest in a national commitment when it has now been demonstrated that the biggest decisions are being made at the supra-national level by powerful people who are able to influence and direct the choices of individual nations?

Archbishop Viganò: Catholics, as citizens, have the right and duty to influence society by their civic and political involvement. To sit back and let others participate in the political life of the nation, especially at a moment when the principles of the natural law and morality are ignored or openly opposed, would be irresponsible. It is true that the democratic system has its weak points, because it gives the power of governance to the numerical majority rather than to what is right and good. However, we ought to recognize that first with the pandemic farce and now with the Russian-Ukrainian crisis, we now understand that the will of the majority, despite all the manipulations of the mainstream media, is less and less convinced of the official narrative. This shows that there is a split between the ruling political class and citizens, who are realizing that a coup has been carried out against them by a mafia of bureaucrats and political leaders who are enslaved to the globalist elite.

As soon as people understand that a silent coup is happening, they will have to react and oppose the dictatorship before they are deprived of other fundamental rights.

AMV: In your Appeal for an anti-globalist alliance, you have called rulers, political and religious leaders, intellectuals, and people of good will to unite, inviting all of them to join together in issuing an anti-globalist manifesto. Can you update us on the latest developments with this initiative in Italy and elsewhere?

Archbishop Viganò: I issued an Appeal in order to respond to the globalist tyranny, and I see that interest and support for it is growing from many different quarters in various nations. I believe

CDC Scrubs 25% of Pediatric COVID-19 Deaths; Cites Coding Error

The Centers for Disease Control and Prevention (CDC) updated its data this week representing the number of children who died from COVID-19 complications.

The public health agency suspiciously removed nearly 70,000 total COVID deaths from the dashboard, reducing pediatric deaths by 24%.

Dr. Nicole Saphier, MD reported on the update:

The CDC has already lost its credibility with a significant portion of the American public.

With this latest development showing a 'coding error' leading to inflation of COVID deaths, the agency again showed its incompetency.

James Cintolo reported on his Substack:

Moving on, the CDC corrected COVID pediatric deaths because of a coding error. Essentially, they eliminated nearly 25% of all previously reported deaths from their data base because of inaccuracy. You should understand the implications of such an action. To be specific, it means COVID public health policy for kids over the past years was based on inaccurate evidence and speculation. That is to say, kids were unnecessarily exposed to the harms of interventions like masking social distancing, school closures, and mandatory vaccination without appropriate evidence.

Some wonder why there's next to no trust left in public health. Clearly, it's because of frequently occurring mistakes like this.

Anyways, the data has been summed up for you and attached below with all sources (which you should read, don't simply take these summaries at face value- read the supporting literature). BREAKING: Almost 25% of all paediatric COVID-19 deaths reported by CDC were due to a coding error. Figures have just been adjusted.

The proof bad data was driving public health policy for kids this whole time report revealing a high rate of vaccine injuries among military personnel, Lt. Col. Theresa Long said: "I have been ordered not to answer that question."

Long was testifying at a hearing in which Liberty Counsel, the law firm representing 30 members of the military who are fighting the military vaccine mandate, returned to federal court to defend a preliminary injunction Judge Steven Merryday of the U.S. District Court for the Middle District of Florida granted two military plaintiffs that allowed them to skirt the Pentagon's vaccine mandate, Dr. Paul Alexander reported on substack.com on April 3.

Long said that she and two other flight surgeons reviewed DMED data last year and discovered a stunning rate of vaccine injuries in the military.

Related: Army silenced physician who reported pilot vaccine injuries, November 2, 2021

According to a whistleblower in the case, certain disorders spiked after the vaccine mandate went into effect, including miscarriages and cancers, and neurological problems which increased by 1,000 percent.

Long testified that she was contacted by a high level officer the night before the hearing, and told not to discuss her findings in court.

Mat Staver, Founder and chairman of Liberty Counsel, asked Long if the information the military ordered her to withhold was relevant and helpful for the court and the public to know. She said, "yes," and Staver asked her why.

Long told the judge: "I have so many soldiers being destroyed by this vaccine. Not a single member of my senior command has discussed my concerns with me … I have nothing to gain and everything to lose by talking about it. I'm OK with that because I am watching people get absolutely destroyed."

Long also testified that the data shows that deaths of military members from the vaccines exceed deaths from the Covid virus itself.

The doctor said she is constantly contacted by people who have been injured by the vaccines, and that many of those injured are pilots who are expected to meet high fitness standards. Long told Staver that in just one afternoon she heard from four pilots who had just gotten MRIs back showing that they had myocarditis.

Morale is tanking in the military, Long testified, with many soldiers in despair over the pressure to get the vaccine. Some are even having suicidal thoughts. Long said she was aware of at least two people who have committed suicide over the pressure, and the threat of punishment for refusal.

She said Team Biden's policies are undermining "good order and discipline."

Since whistleblowers came forward with the DMED data, the Department of Defense has claimed the increase in military vaccine injuries was caused by a "glitch in the database."

Sen. Ron Johnson: Americans died as Fauci 'sabotaged' early Covid treatments

By WorldTribune Staff, December 6, 2021

It is a "travesty" that early treatment for Covid has been, for the most part, ignored in favor of pushing the vaccines, Wisconsin Republican Sen. Ron Johnson said.

"I ask a simple question, did Dr. Fauci's response to COVID-19 work? 788,000 lives lost, many because he ignored and sabotaged early treatment using cheap, available, generic drugs in favor of a vaccine that is not as safe or effective as we all hoped it would be," Johnson tweeted.

Far from "following the science," Fauci and the medical establishment have essentially blocked the use of ivermectin and hydroxychloroquine to treat Covid even though hundreds of scientific studies have found they are highly effective in combating the virus.

In an interview last week on Fox News's "The Brian Kilmeade Show", Johnson noted:

"This virus has evolved, they've become more contagious because they want to evolve, they want to replicate. But they've also become less lethal because killing your host doesn't help you replicate very well. So again, that's the general tendency of viruses, so why would we expect anything different from the coronavirus? Except for, you wanna create a state of fear, to keep us in this state of fear, to maintain the controls. And that's what you're seeing here in the United States."

Johnson added: "I mean – by the way, Fauci did the exact same thing with AIDS. He overhyped it. He created all kinds of fear, saying it could infect the entire population when it couldn't, and he's using the exact same playbook with Covid: ignoring therapy, pushing a vaccine. The solution to this, I've always felt, is early treatment. We still haven't robustly explored that, and that's a travesty."

Fauci and his Big Media comrades blew a gasket when Johnson said that Fauci had "overhyped" AIDS.

"How do you respond to something as preposterous as that?" Fauci said after CNN played a deceptively edited clip of Johnson's comments. "Overhyping AIDS? It's killed over 750,000 Americans and 36 million people worldwide. How do you overhype that? Overhyping COVID? It's already killed 780,000 Americans and over 5 million people worldwide."

"I don't have any clue what he's talking about," Fauci said.

"I don't think [Sen. Ron Johnson] does either," CNN personality Jake Tapper added.

So, did Fauci "overhype" AIDS?

In the following video clip, Fauci, who has been director of the National Institute of Allergy and Infectious Diseases (NIAID) since 1984, claimed that AIDS could be transmitted through "ordinary household contact." AIDS can not be spread in such a way.

Meanwhile, as the Fauci regime and Big

Media continue to rail against the use of ivermectin, the lawyer who helped a dying Covid patient in Illinois win court-ordered treatment with ivermectin, which saved the man's life, says the episode reveals a deep need for American health professionals to rethink their approach to the virus.

Kristin Erickson represented 71-year-old Sun Ng of Naperville, who was on a ventilator for weeks and dying with Covid-19 when Erickson won a court order on Nov. 8 to force the hospital to treat him with ivermectin.

Related: Critically-ill Covid patient made full recovery after court order allowed him ivermectin, December 2, 2021

Within days, Ng recovered. He is now back home walking and enjoying life, Erickson said.

"After one day, he was able to do a breathing test he couldn't do for 22 days," Erickson said in an interview on the John Solomon Reports podcast. "After three days, he was off the vent for two hours. And then by the fifth day, he was off it entirely. So the hospital tried to file for, you know, a physician report, after he was off the vent, saying that ivermectin is not the reason he's better. But clearly it is."

Erickson said she found 66 studies globally that show ivermectin is effective in fighting and warding off the virus, and it is used in places like India and Bangladesh but not in the United States.

"We need to think outside of the current standard of care that hospitals are giving. And if it's not working, let's look at outcomes and not finances," Erickson said.

Erickson said the phones at her office and the New York group that assisted Ng have been ringing off the hook and the courts are likely to be inundated for similar interventions for other patients after what happened in the Ng case.

"I don't know what people's motivations are," she said. "Certainly ours here is to help people get what they need. I know there's a lot of good-hearted people out there who want to save people, even in the hospital setting. Physicians and nurses, they want to do the right thing. But if hospitals aren't allowing it, that creates a barrier for people who are hospitalized."

Explosive Pennsylvania Testimony Explains How Leftist Money Infiltrated Election Offices In 2020

By Margot Cleveland, April 08, 2022

This evidence should be enough for the Pennsylvania legislature to recognize there is a real problem when private money and private actors collaborate with election officials.

The Democrat governor's office in Pennsylvania colluded with left-wing activists to secure millions of dollars in private money to run get-out-the-vote efforts in blue counties in the swing state in 2020, new, explosive testimony revealed. The Pennsylvania legislature heard this testimony, backed up by email evidence, on Tuesday during the first public hearing on two new bills seeking to block private grants.

Tuesday's public hearing began with statements by the respective primary sponsors of the bills that seek to ban dark money from elections, with Sen. Lisa Baker speaking in support of Senate Bill 982 and Rep. Eric Nelson encouraging passage of House Bill 2044. Pennsylvania investigative journalist Todd Shepherd then testified at length on the results of his extensive probe into the insertion of private funds into the 2020 election.

With a series of PowerPoint slides, Shepherd revealed to lawmakers that beginning in July 2020, consultants working for leftist organizations coordinated with local election officials and Democrat Gov.Tom Wolf's office to lobby five blue counties to apply for these private grants. While the grants originated with the nominally non-partisan Center for Tech and Civic Life—an organization that Mark Zuckerberg and Priscilla Chan's private foundation later infused with some $350 million in cash—emails reveal that a main consultant involved in targeting select counties, Marc Solomon, worked for the Center for Secure and Modern Elections, or the CSME.

"What's important to know about CSME is that it is not a 501(c)3, but rather it is a fiscally sponsored project of the New Venture Fund," Shepherd told the Pennsylvania lawmakers. In turn, "the New Venture Fund is managed by Arabella Advisors," Shepherd continued, noting that "the 'parent' group of Arabella, New Venture Fund — they are part of what the Atlantic Magazine identified as 'The Massive Progressive Dark-Money Group You've Never Heard Of.'" In fact, in January, The New York Times called out the New Venture Fund in its article headlined, "Democrats Decried Dark Money. Then they Won with it in 2020," Shepherd added.

The CSME was not the only left-wing organization involved in lobbying blue counties to obtain grants. The emails also indicate that The Voter Project played a prominent role in this targeted cash giveaway: Following the 2020 election, the lead strategist in Pennsylvania for The Voter Project would brag that The Voter Project "was instrumental in signing up over 3.2 million people to vote by mail and leading the soft-side effort to win the swing state in 2020."

How the Left Opened This Battlefront

A July 2020 email exposes the beginning of these efforts, with The Voter Project's Gwen Camp introducing Delaware County's Christine Reuther to CSME's Solomon, saying they had "both been hearing about the other's operations" and "want[ed] to get everyone together to talk about the potential for an official partnership." According to the testimony, Camp copied Jessica Walls-Lavelle, a special advisor to the chief of staff on election reform in Wolf's office, on that email, along with The Voters Project lead Pennsylvania strategist Kevin Mack.

In August, other emails show the governor's staffer, Walls-Lavelle, reaching out to additional blue counties. Solomon passed the good news to his Delaware County contact, Reuther, telling her, "We've invited Chester, Montco, and Bucks to apply! They're on it!"

Another email from August shows Camp, a consultant for The Voters Project, contacting a representative in Lackawanna County, telling the recipient that Camp is working with Jessica Walls-Lavelle, who is "with the Governor's Office."

Activists Push for Ballot Trafficking Dropboxes

All five counties lobbied by the left-wing activists, with an assist from Wolf's office, ended up breaking heavily for Joe Biden, which likely explains why, when Solomon saw in August 2020 that Montgomery County had applied for a $1.2 million grant, he exclaimed, "the third largest county in the state, Philly suburbs!" Solomon then asked his colleagues whether they should turn this "into more of a plan."

In an email response, Solomon's cohort noted that the application "raised polling place consolidation as a possibility." "We should ask what resources they need to make that not happen," the email continued, suggesting: "Could we push them to use more than 5 dropboxes with more money? Maybe pointing out that Delaware County is using 10 times as many?"

While the right-to-know requests revealed the targeted lobbying of blue counties, there were no emails showing any outreach to core Republican counties until after September 1, 2020. That proves significant, according to Shepherd's testimony, because when the summer-time targeting of Democratic strongholds took place, the Zuckbucks cash infusion to the CTCL had not yet been announced. Without that cash, there may never have been a chance for the red counties to obtain any funds. (Shepherd also questioned where the earlier CTCL funding came from—something apparently still unknown.)

But even after the new funds came in, the Democrat counties still received a substantially higher cut of the $22.5 million in grants spread across 23 counties, as Shepherd illustrated with powerful graphics, testifying, "Philadelphia had $8.83 cents that could be spent on each 'Joe Citizen' registered to vote there, while in Luzerne or Erie County, those counties had about 75 cents to spend on 'Joe Citizen' registered voter in those counties.

Equal Protection Problems

Far from being an outlier, Pennsylvania's experience matches the growing evidence seen in other states that the Zuckbucks and other leftist money funded state-run get-out-the-vote efforts for Biden. What makes Pennsylvania different, however, is that the emails connect the grant process to this nightmare (of investigation into ERIC) go away". Several denied the Soros connection (and that disproves fraud how?) and several more just said we were "misinformed" or just plain "wrong". The response of an honest user of the ERIC databases would have been to show with the number of ineligible voters that their state had cleaned off of their rolls, as is the law. So simple! Those numbers were only posted on the website of one state election group that I could find, out of the thirty members who use the system.

Instead, this group of election officials, posturing against any and all who dared question their system, made themselves look bad. All their blather just made me want to look harder. So I did, and I present this to you today.

If some of the member states do not actually understand the fraud potential in the ERIC constructs, as J. Christian Adams of PLIF thinks possible,then they need to demand answers form their ERIC board, or withdraw their state from membership. But, only Louisiana has actually quit their ERIC membership. This, as the result of a suit brought against their Secretary of State, Kyle Ardoin.

On Jan. 27, 2022, the Secretary of State of Louisiana, Kyle Ardoin, put out a carefully crafted news release, saying that his action (of suspending membership in ERIC) "comes amid concerns raised by citizens, government watchdog organizations and media reports about potential questionable funding sources and that possible partisan actors may have access to ERIC network data for political purposes, potentially undermining voter confidence."

"While Louisiana joined ERIC under my predecessor," Ardoin went on, "we did so under the impression that it would enhance the accuracy of our voter rolls and strengthen Louisiana's election integrity. After reading about these allegations and speaking with election attorneys and experts, I have determined that it may no longer be in Louisiana's best interests to participate in this organization…My job is to ensure that the data (which) the voters entrust to my office is protected. I look forward to ERIC's swift response to these allegations."

The cause of Louisiana's resignation, as I said, was a lawsuit brought against Ardoin by the Public Interest Legal Foundation (PILF), for "failure to permit inspection of voter list maintenance records, including data the state received from the Electronic Registration Information Center, ERIC." The case cites the provisions of the National Voter Registration Act (NVRA) of 1993, in which provision of these records to the public is required upon request.

Personally, I would like to see states take the same hard look as Ardoin has been forced to take, without legal action to force the issue. Here is where the citizens can make it happen.

Now, I want to turn back to ERIC and its constructs, and just how they have incredible potential for fraud in our voting process. In addressing these, I have quoted heavily from their own website, https://www.ericstates.org.

I want to add a postscript, up front, for a change.

The national attention began to turn to ERIC with the Louisiana lawsuit, and the following series of four articles by the Gateway Pundit, late January – February, 2022. I bring this up because at least part of the ERIC website had a rewrite as recently as Feb. 8, 2022. Number 15 on their FAQ list directly addresses the culling of the rolls, and references an article published in the media, Jan. 23, 2022 – by title. Easy to look up. Prior to that, neither I nor anyone else looking closely into the subject, could find any specific requirements to cull ineligible voters from the lists. This #15 seemed to be in response to such accusations, but even then said that The member states who were subject the NVRA law were required to cull. I saw no direct requirement coming from ERIC, even here.

So, what is actually mandated of ERIC members? Again, from their website:

1)"Within 60 days of (joining) and at least every sixty days thereafter, the Member shall transmit all inactive and active voter files (excluding those "confidential" ones) AND all licensing records of the state's motor vehicle department – which would necessarily include green card holders and id card recipients! Green card holders are permanent NON-CITIZEN residents, and id cards have been being given to illegals, and under-aged residents nationwide for years. So, now we have lists being constantly submitted containing citizens and non-citizens alike, eligible and non-eligible voters as well. Taking all of this mangled information, ERIC's computers add USPS and Social Security data, and provide four lists back to the states: those who have moved in-state; those who have moved to other ERIC states; those with duplicate registrations instate; and those who are deceased.

The important thing to note is that ALL of these names are mixed together: citizens, non-citizens, living, dead, and non-residents. The ERIC mandates only ask that a state "must request at least one of these reports at a minimum of once a year. NO mandate to do anything else.

2)"At least every two years member states are required to send voter registration information to potentially eligible residents who are not registered to vote." If they use the mangled batches of data, how is a state supposed to now who is ppotentially eligible? Better just send it to all, I suppose. Invite every name on the list to register. It is stated that "Prior to conducting the mailings, states review the data to remove any known ineligible individuals." No mandate that they MUST do so, just a statement saying that they do. But, as grandma used to say, "saying so don't make it so."

All of the mandates of the Eric organization seem to revolve around registration, not maintenance. But there is one more thing that sets off alarms for crooked doings.

Beneath all of the constructs of ERIC, is David Becker, who helped the Pew Charitable Trust with the Soros grant, to organize and found ERIC, in 2012. Becker has been termed a "hard-core leftist who couldn't stand conservatives", and "very unethical and unprofessional by by those who worked with him at the DOJ in the early 2000's. Please go to https://www.influencewatch.org to see the story behind Becker's unethical dealings as a trial attorney in the DOJ Civil Rights Division, and the comments by Hans van Spakowsky and Brad Scholzman, acting head of the division at the time, who worked with Becker then. Personally, I wouldn't trust Becker to do anything where it involved honesty, let alone control the voter rolls of 30 states.

Becker never denied any of the claims against him, which caused his firing in 2005. He said only that no charges had been brought. Which, to me, only means that another liberal got out of a crime with no penalty, which has been more and more the case to this day.

Becker still sits on the ERIC Board of Directors to this day. Just sayin'.

In the next few weeks, I will talk about the fraud that is surfacing and being proven in each ERIC state:

Alabama, Arizona, Colorado, Connecticut, Delaware, Florida, Georgia, Illinois, Iowa, Kentucky, Maine, Maryland, Michigan, Minnesota, Missouri, Nevada, New Mexico, Ohio, Oregon, Pennsylvania, Rhode Island, Couth Carolina, Texas, Utah, Vermont, Virginia, Washington, Dc, West Virginia And Wisconsin.

If you have been following the breaking news, there is quite a LOT to unpack, so stay tuned. If you are a resident of any of these states, my very next article will be how to secure the vote in your states by organizing and acting on a local level. However you have ever voted, fraud invalidates your choices. Know that, please, and work together. I believe that after years of being divided, we can still come together on this one fundamental of maintaining our freedom.

Warnings of a virulent new election virus – "AORTA"

By Viv Forbes

It was a happy settlement
the people strong and free.
They tended flocks and tilled the soil and fished upon the sea.

The north wind brought the raiders with their swords and greedy eyes.
They stripped the land and left behind a blight of funeral pyres.

"We must unite" the people said
"to beat these robber bands.
We'll arm ourselves and train our men to sweep them from our lands."

T'was thus they formed a government to save them from the foe.
It levied tax and raised the troops and laid the looters low.

The system was a great success and wealth grew all around.
The idle troopers then were used to police the roads and towns.

Said thinkers from a foreign land
"You must assist the poor.
You orta get the government to pass a welfare law."

AORTA spread like smallpox germs
it raced down every road.
As every loafer raised his voice
"AORTA ease my load."

"AORTA keep the prices down,
AORTA teach the kids,
AORTA start a dancing troop,
AORTA print the quids."

Alas, AORTA has a sting,
a dreadful side effect.
It brings a rash of taxes which the troopers must collect.

The troopers' swords grew rusty and the farms were filled with weeds.
The cities turned to hives of drones whose product was "Free Feeds".

But hungry eyes were watching still the grim north wind did blow.
Soon bloated corpses filled the streets
"AORTA" laid them low.

Opinion From a Former Judge

I am a student of law whose age is 85. My first year of college was 68 years ago. One class I took was political science. A half-page of my textbook essentially outlined a few steps to overturn a democracy:

1) Divide the nation philosophically.
2) Foment racial strife.
3) Cause distrust of police authority.
4) Swarm the nation's borders indiscriminately and unconstitutionally.
5) Engender the military strength to weaken it.
6) Overburden citizens with more unfair taxation.
7) Encourage civil rioting and discourage accountability for all crime.
8) Control all balloting.
9) Control all media.

What was printed in 1954 as a possible diabolic nightmare has become an emerging reality. I hope that Americans will unite enough to pen a good finish - Go dwelling.

scandalous accusations, which originated in the Sacred Palaces, gave Bertone a pretext to remove me from that office. I therefore felt compelled to inform the Holy Father, so that he would know what was really happening.

Pope Benedict summoned me immediately, and before I could even mention the events with Bertone, he proposed to appoint me President of the Pontifical Council for Economic Affairs of the Holy See, in place of Cardinal Velasio de Paolis. And he did so with these precise words: "I am convinced that this is the task with which you can render the best service to the Holy See."

It is not difficult to imagine what may have been the pressures, misinformation and slander against me that were presented to Pope Benedict, which prompted him to change his mind and appoint me Nuncio to the United States, an appointment that I accepted in a spirit of obedience, but not without suffering, well aware that it was a coup of the Curia that intended to nullify all the work of healing that I had carried out in the Governorate. The Holy Father wrote to me: "I find myself confirmed in the conviction that your providential position at this time is the Nunciature in the United States of America. On the other hand, I am sure that your knowledge of this great country will help you to take up the demanding challenge of this work, which in many ways appears to be decisive for the future of the universal Church."

My official assignment in that immense and beloved nation has come to an end, but that challenge – to which Pope Benedict almost prophetically referred and in which he had involved me – is more open than ever.

Dr. Manocchia: Have your lucid, fiery and courageous interventions against the New World Order brought you unpleasant consequences, threats, media attacks?

Archbishop Viganò: Already after my revelations about the scandals of then Cardinal McCarrick, I had to take care of my safety. My statements about the pandemic farce, which I remember began in May 2020, at the time earned me insults and verbal lynchings, accusations of undue interference or that I was promoting conspiracy theories. There have also been those who have said that it was not I who wrote my statements; it was even insinuated that I was suffering from psychosis and "delirium of interpretation," or even possessed by the devil. Not to mention the accusations following my pronouncement on the Russian-Ukrainian crisis, a few days ago…

I have been amazed that these often over-the-top attacks also come in part from circles of Catholic conservatism and the so-called political right. In many cases, those whom I would have considered as allies – in opposing first the pandemic farce and then the war provocation – have shown that they side with the adversary, to the point of recognizing the effectiveness and moral lawfulness of the so-called vaccines or presenting Zelenskyy as an innocent victim of Putin's expansionist aims. The reality is quite different, and denying

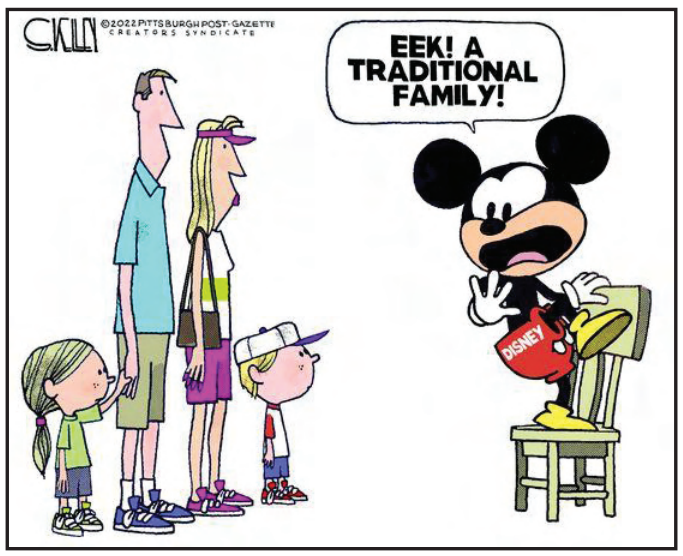
One Nation Under God

Milo: Asking Christians to 'tone it down' on social issues is asking them to 'stop loving people'

Independence, Ohio (LifeSiteNews) — In an unexpected twist, "ex-gay" author and conservative provocateur Milo Yiannopoulos gave a second speech at the Bringing America Back to Life Convention just 24 hours after his first.

Daily Wire podcaster and author Matt Walsh, scheduled to speak on Saturday night, could not make it to the convention because of a snowstorm that grounded his flight out of Nashville. But on just a few hours' notice, Yiannopoulos accepted the offer to take Walsh's place.

The theme of Yiannopoulos' Saturday night talk was clarity and penance, a fitting topic for the Lenten season. Describing his experience with a week-long water-only fast he was still maintaining until Saturday afternoon, Milo colorfully explained the agony of days two through four, which soon gave way to a unique mental clarity and "stillness" by days five and six.



"When you're deep in sin, when you're sunk deep into your addictions, it's difficult to think clearly," he said. "It's difficult to reason. It's difficult to tell fact from fiction."

But Milo emphasized that clarity and stillness of mind are a sine qua non of "getting right with God," of embracing the virtue of charity and learning to forgive others, in addition to overcoming one's inordinate lusts and desires.

On the issue of abortion, Milo noted how his mental clarity made it all the more "obvious" to him that protecting the lives of the unborn is the "most urgent … moral problem" of our time. It's a moral problem on which he sees significant progress.

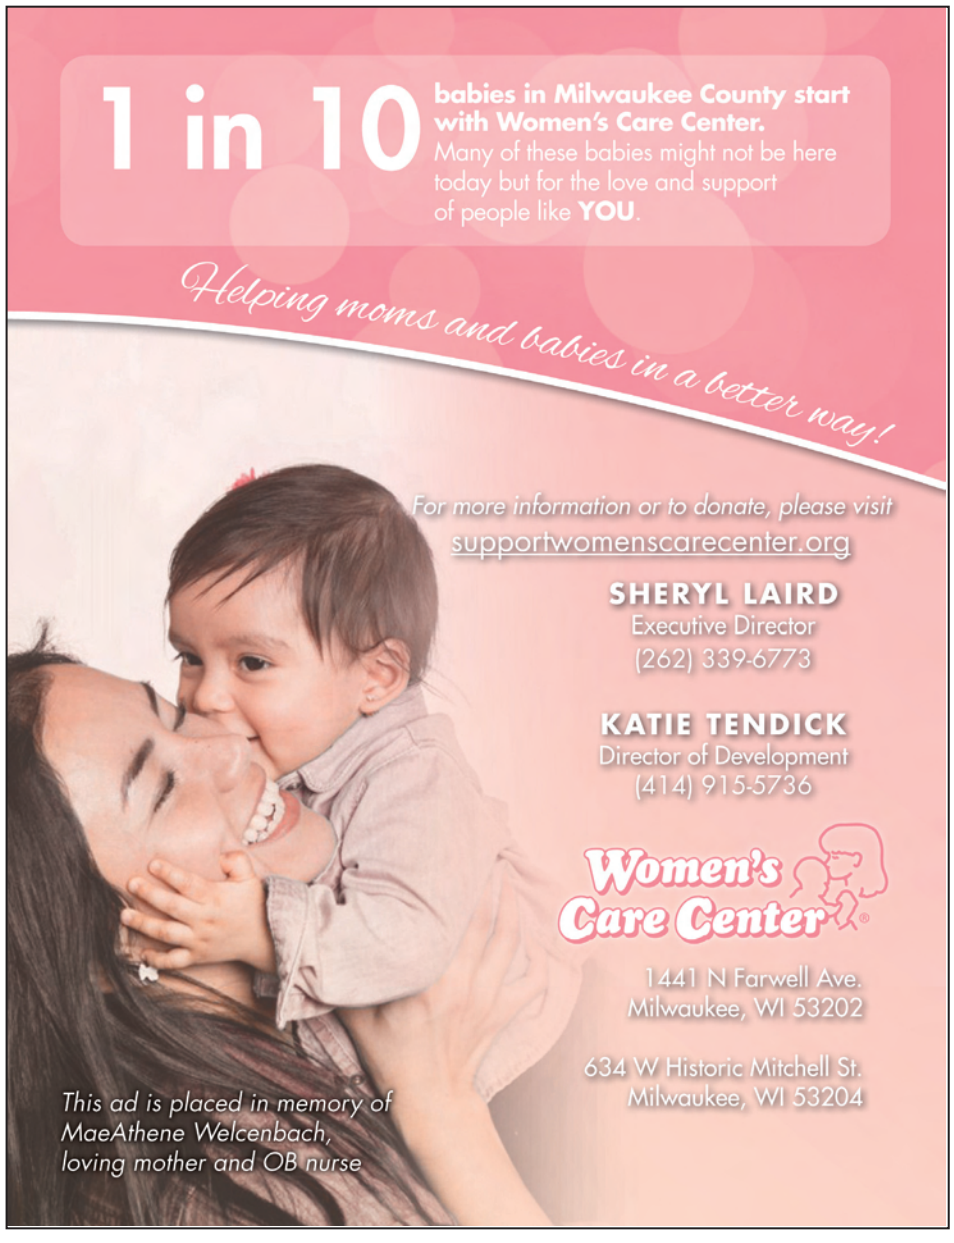
"When you have that foundation of intellectual and moral clarity, it's very difficult to care about anything else," he added. "And here's some good news: you're winning. Slowly, but you are. This is the only issue that Christian conservatives are actually gaining ground on. The only one. What a blessing that it's this one."

Pro-abortion activists and politicians may be in Satan's grip and it's only a matter of time before their movement loses, Milo said, but he urged the audience to show them "a little more compassion than your heart really wants to." Because his life mission is now oriented toward saving souls, he expressed a desire to bring the "light and truth of Jesus Christ" to pro-aborts. He predicted they will be in a "very bad place" once the pro-life movement becomes victorious.

"I'm learning that loving people to death — figuratively speaking — is quite a powerful and effective thing, versus maybe what I did in previous chapters of my career which you might characterize as churlish, brutal, sarcastic, and vindictive," he added.

Still, Milo made it clear that loving someone does not mean treating them with kid gloves. He knows this firsthand, as people who lovingly told him to reject the homosexual lifestyle weren't necessarily being "nice" in the strict sense of the term.

"Asking us to 'tone it down' is asking us to stop loving people," he said. "Because tough love, the love that says 'No,' is the only love that matters. It's easy to say 'Yes' to people, but it's very difficult to say, 'I love you, and therefore you may not.'"



Lawmakers ask Department of Justice to investigate deaths of aborted babies found in DC

By Cassy Fiano-Chesser | April 8, 2022

As circumstances regarding the recovery of five aborted babies from Washington Surgi-Center become more widely known, more and more are demanding justice. In particular, pro-life advocates want an investigation, as experts believe at least one of the bodies shows signs of being a possible victim of a D&X ("partial-birth") abortion, which is a federally illegal — and now, lawmakers are getting involved, too.

This week, members of Congress sent a letter to Washington, D.C. Mayor Muriel Bowser and Metropolitan Police Chief Robert J. Contee III, urging local officials to autopsy each of the children and investigate the manner of their deaths.

Today, a group of lawmakers including 23 senators and 46 representatives, led by Senator Mike Lee (R-UT), sent a letter to Attorney General Merrick Garland, asking the Department of Justice to investigate the children's deaths. "We are gravely concerned by allegations brought forward that suggest a preborn baby underwent a partial birth abortion at the Washington Surgi-Clinic in Washington, D.C.," the letter begins. "We demand that you conduct a comprehensive investigation on the circumstances surrounding the deaths of each preborn baby."

Several medical experts, including one self-described pro-choice OB/GYN, told Live Action News that it appears one of the babies, who was given the name "Harriet," showed signs of having been the victim of the D&X ("partial-birth") procedure. During this procedure, most of the infant's body is delivered through the birth canal, with just the head remaining inside. The abortionist then punctures the base of the baby's neck, and suctions out the child's brain matter. Photos appear to show something protruding from the back of Harriet's head — possibly brain matter — which is why so many are calling for Harriet's death, and the deaths of the other children, to be investigated.

"If federal law was violated then this abortionist needs to be in prison," said Live Action founder and president Lila Rose in a statement. "The abortionist, the industry he works in, and the government of D.C. think that if they can just ignore this scandal long enough, it will go away. I can promise them that they are wrong, we will not stop demanding justice for these children until true justice is achieved. To the D.C. Chief of Police, the Mayor of D.C., and the Attorney General of the United States: lead, follow, or get out of the way. We will discover what happened to these innocent children. Perpetrators will be held accountable."

One of the children, a baby boy given the name "Christopher X," was the largest and most developed of the five, and it is not clear how his life was ended. Dr. Kathi Aultman, a former abortionist, told Live Action News she believes he may have been killed via an induction abortion procedure. In this procedure, the baby is first given a lethal injection, and then after several days, labor is induced, and the mother gives birth to the body of her dead child.

Yet for Harriet, the injuries are more obvious, as neonatologist Kendra Kolb told Live Action News. "This baby appears to be somewhere between 28-30 weeks gestational age, with evidence of deep lacerations to the posterior neck which presumably correlates to the method of abortion used to end her life," she said. Harriet's body was, with the exception of the laceration to the back of her neck, fully intact, with her skull crushed and one eye open.

"Official statements made by the Metropolitan Police of DC have made the assumption that each preborn baby died as the result of a legal abortion," the letter to the DOJ notes. "However, we question whether such a conclusion can be reasonably reached regarding the cause of death for each preborn baby until an official autopsy is performed. We formally request that you direct the appropriate personnel at the Department of Justice and the Federal Bureau of Investigation (FBI) to investigate whether these preborn babies were aborted in violation of federal law, specifically the Partial Birth Abortion Ban Act of 2003. We also request the Department of Justice ensure the preservation of each of these bodies as evidence for future investigations."

VOICE OF JERUSALEM

The Nuclear Deal is not Inevitable

By Caroline Glick

On Wednesday morning, five Democrat members of Congress held a news conference to EXPRESS their misgivings about the nuclear deal with Iran that the Biden administration is obsessively seeking to conclude, seemingly at any price. The details of the deal that have been leaked to date made clear that the nuclear agreement President Joe Biden and his team are eagerly pursuing will guarantee that Iran becomes a nuclear threshold state with an industrial uranium enrichment capacity in a few short years – at most. The deal Biden has negotiated will also give Iran between $90-130 billion from sanctions relief. This astronomical sum all but ensures that Iran and its terror proxies will go to war against Israel and Iran's Sunni Arab enemies in short order, just as they massively escalated their attacks following their cash windfall in 2016, with the implementation of the 2015 nuclear deal.

Since it formed ten months ago, the Bennett-Lapid-Gantz government has operated under the assumption that Israel cannot influence the administration's pro-Iranian policies. The best move, Prime Minister Naftali Bennett, Foreign Minister Yair Lapid and Defense Minister Benny Gantz have all proclaimed, is for Israel to sit quietly on the sidelines in the hope of winning brownie points from Biden and his team. Israel's leaders have managed to miss the fact that like Israel, the U.S. is a democracy, and at the end of the day, the public's position cannot be ignored forever.

Last week, the McLaughlin polling group published the results of a survey regarding Iran and the results leave no question about where the American people stand on Iran's nuclear weapons program. A large majority of Americans strongly opposes the administration's appeasement policies. 76 percent of Americans support escalating the nuclear sanctions against Iran. Only 14 percent support the administration's intention to weaken them. Indeed, when asked directly about whether or not to weaken sanctions, 69 percent of Americans said not to. Instead, a plurality of 45 percent of Americans think the U.S. should attack Iran's nuclear installations if sanctions fail to stop Iran's nuclear operations.

As for the nuclear deal itself, 63 percent of Americans believe that the nuclear deal is a graver threat to U.S. national security than Russia's invasion of Ukraine.

The McLaughlin poll is in line with virtually all public opinion surveys conducted over the past few months in relation to Biden's domestic and foreign policies. Across the board, a large majority of Americans oppose what Biden and his team are doing at home and abroad. Most pollsters predict that the Congressional elections in November will deliver both The House and Senate to the Republicans. In the event that Republicans do take over Congress, Biden's progressive domestic agenda will be dead in the water. His ability to implement his progressive foreign policy agenda will be severely constrained.

The willingness of Democrat lawmakers' to openly oppose their President's key foreign policy initiative drives home a key truth about American politics and policymaking. It is true that the progressives are both ascendant in the Democrat Party and dominant in the Biden administration. But it is equally true that they are not the only forces in the Democrat Party and they are not the majority of Americans.

The fact that those making policy at the moment face constraints on their ability to act has been vividly borne out across the years in everything related to U.S. policy towards Israel. Whereas most Americans support Israel, many do not. The majority pro-Israel camp is comprised of many factions. The two most important ones are national security hawks and faith-based communities, particularly Evangelical Christians. The hawkish view was perhaps best expressed by then Defense Secretary Dick Cheney, who in the lead up to the 1991 Gulf War likened Israel to an aircraft carrier. As a nation who fights its own wars, and whose enemies are also America's enemies, national security hawks recognize that the stronger Israel is, the more secure U.S. interests in the Middle East are.

Faith based voters and communities base their support for Israel first and foremost on their belief that the Jews are God's chosen people and that the reborn Jewish state is proof that God's covenant is eternal.

As for the anti-Israel camp, its factions can be roughly divided into three groups – hard right isolationists and white nationalists; progressives, and Arabists.

White nationalists along former presidential candidate Patrick Buchanan lines oppose U.S.-Israel ties because they dislike Jews and believe in Protocols of the Elders of Zion-like conspiracy theories about Jews in the U.S. government and American society, more generally. This group has always been marginal in U.S. politics and in recent years, has been driven out completely from Republican party politics.

Like the Soviets and European socialists, American progressives are driven by cultural Marxism. Cultural Marxism is dogmatically hostile both to Judaism and to Zionism.

Just as Israel never had the possibility of winning over the Buchanan wing of the Republican Party, so it is incapable of impacting the positions of progressives. Unfortunately, while Republicans have driven anti-Semitic hard right members from their midst, over the past generation, progressives have taken over the institutions of the Democrat Party. They have become the dominant faction in the party and they control the Biden administration's policies.

Finally, the Arabist camp has served as a contra to the security hawks in foreign and national security circles since Israel's founding and has long dominated the Middle East policies of the State Department. The Arabist view posits that U.S. support for Israel undermines U.S. ties with the Arab world. Consequently, Israel is a burden, rather than an asset for the U.S. Arabists argue that U.S. ties with Israel should be downgraded.

Over the past decade, the Arabist camp has been weakened because its key regional anchor, Saudi Arabia has abandoned its hostility with Israel. Since the Islamist revolutions ten years ago, Saudis have set aside their hostility for the Jewish state recognizing that Iran is an existential threat to the Kingdom and that Israel is Saudi Arabia's most important ally in its struggle to beat back the Iranian menace. Saudi political and intellectual leaders are increasingly outspoken with their concerns about the Biden administration's realignment towards Iran against both Saudi Arabia and Israel. Last week Mohamed Alyahya, the former editor of Al Arabiya English published an article in the Jerusalem Post attacking the administration's pro-Iranian policies and arguing that for America's spurned Arab allies, the administration's hostility to Israel is a cause for alarm, not satisfaction. "If the Americans won't side with Israel against Iran," Alyahya wrote, "what's the chance they will side with us?"

Tellingly, U.S. Arabists have not abandoned their anti-Israel position. Instead, they have turned on the Saudis and the UAE and now rely for justification on Iran's closest Arab partner Qatar – itself a prolific supporter and financier of terror groups from ISIS to Hamas — and on Iran itself. It is hard to ignore that in their anti-Arab policies, the Arabists among the U.S. foreign policy elite expose a darker motive for their strident opposition to the U.S.-Israel alliance.

While the anti-Israel camp has long been the minority camp in the U.S., it has always been a powerful minority. And facing the divisions in U.S. views of their country, Israelis have also divided themselves into two opposing camps with competing views of how to safeguard and expand the U.S. alliance with Israel.

Former Prime Minister and Opposition Leader Benjamin Netanyahu has led the first camp for the past thirty years. Foreign Minister Yair Lapid, Defense Minister Benny Gantz, and Prime Minister Naftali Bennett, (who follows their lead), are today the outstanding representatives of the opposing camp.

The first camp, which we can call the American camp, recognizes that Israel cannot influence members of the anti-Israel camp in any of its various factions. But it also recognizes that this camp is the minority in the U.S. and while it is the dominant camp in the Democrat Party, it isn't the only faction in the party. Members of the American camp believe that the way to preserve and expand U.S. support for Israel is to support and strengthen Israel's supporters on both sides of the partisan aisle. The American camp advances this goal by speaking straightforwardly and unapologetically about Israel's interests and actions, and how both advance U.S. interests and values. Members of this camp believe that by drawing clear lines for Israel's American allies, whether on Iran or the Palestinians or other key issues, Israel empowers its allies, puts its opponents on the defensive, strengthens Israel's standing in the U.S., and attracts the attention of its regional neighbors and states around the world who see in Israel a regional power that they ought to work with – for their own benefit.

The second camp, which we can all the elitist camp, begins from a very different basic assumption about the nature of U.S. support for Israel and the best way to preserve it. Members of elitist camp believe that the anti-Israel camp, particularly its Arabist and progressive factions is all-powerful. In their view, the State Department is the beginning and the end of U.S. foreign policymaking. Under these circumstances, Israel's job is to foster good relations with the anti-Israel camp and seek to appease it, even if that appeasement undermines the credibility of Israel's supporters.

Israel's radical left supports the elitist approach because its members share the U.S. anti-Israel camp's hostile ideological convictions about their country. The Lapid camp is a major faction of the elites camp because its members are elitists. Lapid and his supporters prefer the company of progressives and Arabs, who share their habits and personal preferences to the company of security hawks and Evangelicals. The Gantz camp adopts the submissive approach of the elitist school because its members simply do not understand U.S. politics or the complex way that foreign policy is crafted in America.

Initially, fifteen Democrats were scheduled to participate in the news conference on Wednesday, but only five showed up. Those who attended communicated a message that tracked with the weak opposition Bennett, Gantz and Lapid have communicated. Like Bennett, Lapid and Gantz, the Democrat lawmakers didn't object to the administration's nuclear appeasement of Iran per se. Instead, they said they want a better deal and that the Iranian Revolutionary Guard Corps should not be removed from the State Department's list of foreign terrorist groups.

As lawmakers defying their president and party leadership, the five lawmakers could not be more critical on this issue than Israel is. There is good reason to believe that the Bennett-Lapid-Gantz government's tepid criticism of the administration's betrayal of Israel vis-à-vis Iran played a role in the decision by the ten lawmakers who were scheduled to attend the conference not to show up. If Israel doesn't view Biden's nuclear deal as a source for urgent concern and a cause for outspoken opposition, then why should Israel's Democrat supporters?

Across the generations, and most notably in recent years, the American camp has been responsible for the greatest leaps forward in U.S.-Israel ties. As is the case today, over the same period, the elitist school has strengthened the anti-Israel camp in Washington and across America by refusing to stand up for Israel's interests and to support Israel's friends when they want to voice their support.

however that the evidence of who is responsible for the Russian-Ukrainian crisis, and the folly of insisting on provocations rather than seeking peace, will make many people understand the danger to which they are exposed if they do not organize in order to firmly resist the deep state's coup.

I know that in the United States the initiative has found a warm reception not only among Republicans but also among many Democrat voters who are disgusted by the scandals and corruption of Obama, the Clintons, and the Bidens.

AMV: In your Appeal you speak of real "popular movements of resistance and committees of national liberation" for a radical reform of politics. In the opinion of some, however, in the present situation there is not a suitable moral tension because public opinion is largely complacent and asleep. How would you respond to this objection based on your contacts all over the world?

Most people are little inclined to moblilize for action, especially if they have been manipulated and sedated by experts in social psychology. True resistance and the establishment of the Committee of National Liberation will be successful if it is coordinated by intellectuals and politicians who know how to place the common good and the defense of justice before their own political advantage. We need courageous leaders with a sense of honor, who are animated by sound moral principles: their example, along with a reawakening of consciences and a resurgence of dignity among judges, law enforcement, and public officials, could truly prevent the advent of the New World Order.

Social and political commitment must obviously be combined with a supernatural perspective, uniting action to prayer that is confident in the help of Divine Providence. Priests, religious, and all the faithful are therefore called to spiritually accompany their brothers and sisters in the good fight, not only with prayer but also with penance, fasting, and

20 Facts About The Emerging Global Food Shortage That Should Chill You To The Core

By Tyler Durden Tuesday, Apr 05, 2022

Authored by Michael Snyder via TheMostImportantNews.com,

I realize that this is not good news, but I would encourage you to share the information in this article with everyone that you can. People deserve to understand what is happening, and they deserve an opportunity to get prepared. The pace at which things are changing around the globe right now is absolutely breathtaking, but most people assume that life will just continue to carry on as it normally does. Unfortunately, the truth is that a very planetary emergency is developing right in front of our eyes.

The following are 20 facts about the emerging global food shortage that should chill you to the core…

#1 One of France's most important government officials is telling us that we should brace ourselves for an "extremely serious" global food crisis…

France's Foreign Affairs Minister Jean-Yves Le Drian said the EU must get to grips with the prospect that the war in Ukraine could prompt an "extremely serious" global food crisis.

#2 Joe Biden recently admitted that food shortages are "going to be real", and his administration is now openly using the word "famine" to describe what is coming…

The Biden administration is worried Russia's invasion of Ukraine will cause famine in parts of the world, White House Council of Economic Advisers Chair Cecilia Rouse told CNBC on Friday.

#3 It is being reported that food prices at German supermarkets will soon go up between 20 and 50 percent…

Just days after Germany reported the highest inflation in generation (with February headline CPI soaring at a 7.6% annual pace and blowing away all expectations), giving locals a distinctly unpleasant Deja vu feeling even before the Russian invasion of Ukraine broke what few supply chains remained and sent prices even higher into the stratosphere…

… on Monday, Germany will take one step toward a return of the dreaded Weimar hyperinflation, when according to the German Retail Association (HDE), consumers should prepare for another wave of price hikes for everyday goods and groceries with Reuters reporting that prices at German retail chains will explode between 20 and 50%

#4 Rationing has already begun in Spain…

In Spain, the country started experiencing sporadic shortages of different products like eggs, milk and other dairy products almost immediately following the outbreak of the war in Ukraine. In early March, major supermarkets like Mercadona and Makro began rationing sunflower oil.

#5 Rationing has also already started in Greece…

In Greece, at least four national supermarket chains have started rationing food products like flour and sunflower oil due to critically low supplies caused by the crippled supply chains coming out of Russia and Ukraine.

#6 The head of BlackRock is warning that this will be the very first time this generation "is going to go into a store and not be able to get what they want"…

On Tuesday, BlackRock Inc. President Rob Kapito told an audience in Austin, Texas, hosted by the Texas Independent Producers and Royalty Owners Association, that an entire younger generation is quickly finding out what it means to suffer from shortages, according to Bloomberg.

"For the first time, this generation is going to go into a store and not be able to get what they want," Kapito said. "And we have a very entitled generation that has never had to sacrifice."

#7 Since this time last year, some fertilizer prices have gone up by as much as 300 percent.

#8 Many farmers in Africa will not be able to afford fertilizer at all this year, and it is being projected that this will reduce agricultural production by an amount capable of feeding "100 million people"…

With prices tripling over the past 18 months, many farmers are considering whether to forgo purchases of fertilizers this year. That leaves a market long touted for its growth potential set to shrink by almost a third, according to Sebastian Nduva, program manager at researcher group AfricaFertilizer.Org.

That could potentially curb cereals output by 30 million tons, enough to feed 100 million people, he said.

#9 Russia is normally one of the biggest global exporters of fertilizer…

Russia is a key global player in natural gas, a major input to fertilizer production. Higher gas prices, and supply cuts, will further drive fertilizer prices higher. Russia is one of the biggest exporters of the three major groups of fertilizers (nitrogen, phosphorus and potassium). Physical supply cuts could further inflate fertilizer prices.

#10 In a typical year, Russia and Ukraine collectively account for approximately 30 percent of all global wheat exports.

#11 Half of Africa's wheat imports usually come from either Russia or Ukraine.

#12 Other nations rely on wheat exports from Russia and Ukraine even more than Africa does…

Armenia, Mongolia, Kazakhstan and Eritrea have imported virtually all of their wheat from Russia and Ukraine and must find new sources. But they are competing against much larger buyers, including Turkey, Egypt, Bangladesh and Iran, which have obtained more than 60 percent of their wheat from the two warring countries.

#13 One Russian official is warning that his nation may soon only export food to "friendly nations"…

A Russian government official has threatened that Russia will limit its vital food exports to only nations it considers "friendly".

Dmitry Medvedev, a senior Russian security official who previously served as the nation's president, has threatened that Russia may soon cut off the West from food exports.

#14 On Friday, it was announced that another 5 million egg-laying chickens in Iowa would have to be put down because of the bird flu.

#15 The death toll from the bird flu in Iowa alone will be pushed beyond 13 million as a result of this latest incident.

#16 Overall, this is what the total national death toll from the bird flu currently looks like: "22 million egg-laying chickens, 1.8 million broiler chickens, 1.9 million pullet and other commercial chickens, and 1.9 million turkeys".

#17 China's agricultural minister has announced that the winter wheat harvest in China could be "the worst in history".

#18 We are being warned that the winter wheat harvest in the United States will be "disastrous" due to severe drought.

#19 During a recent interview, one prominent U.S. farmer stated that most Americans won't like it when "your grocery bill is up $1,000.00 a month".

#20 The head of the UN World Food program says that what the planet is now facing is unlike anything that we have seen since World War II…

"Ukraine has only compounded a catastrophe on top of a catastrophe," said David M. Beasley, the executive director of the World Food Program, the United Nations agency that feeds 125 million people a day. "There is no precedent even close to this since World War II."

We have been warned over and over again that this day was coming, and now it is here.

Like I said at the beginning of this article, I hope that you will share this information with as many people as possible, because this crisis really is going to affect every man, woman and child on the entire planet.

In my entire lifetime, I have never seen anything like this, and conditions are getting worse with each passing day.

A truly nightmarish global food crisis really is upon us, and hundreds of millions of innocent people are going to deeply suffer as a result.

The Real 'Reset' Is Coming

reporting would have to displace the old, supposedly disinterested approach to the news.

There is a common theme here.

In normal times progressives worry that they do not have public support for their policies. Only in crises do they feel that the political Left and media can merge to use apocalyptic times to ram through usually unpopular approaches to foreign and domestic problems.

We saw that last year: fleeing from Afghanistan, the embrace of critical race theory, trying to end the filibuster, pack the court, junk the Electoral College, and nationalize voting laws.

These "new orders" and "resets" always entail far bigger government and more unelected, powerful bureaucracies. Elites assume that their radical changes in energy use, media reporting, voting, sovereignty, and racial and ethnic quotas will never quite apply to themselves, the architects of such top-down changes.

So we common folk must quit fossil fuels, but not those who need to use corporate jets. Walls will not mar our borders but will protect the homes of Nancy Pelosi, Mark Zuckerberg, and Bill Gates.

Hunter Biden's lost laptop will be declared, by fiat, not news. In contrast, the fake Alfa Bank "collusion" narrative will be national headline news for weeks.

Middle class lifestyles will be curbed as we are instructed to strive for sustainability and transition to apartment living and mass transit. But the Obamas will still keep their three mansions, and Silicon Valley futurists will insist on exemptions for their yachts.

In truth, we are about to see a radical reset—of the current reset. It will be a different sort of transformation than the elites are expecting and one that they should greatly fear.

The world and the United States are furious over hyperinflation that may soon exceed 10 percent per year. We will be lucky if it ends only in recession or stagflation, rather than a global depression.

The mess was created by the same apparat who bought into "modern monetary theory." That silly university idea claimed prosperity would follow vastly expanding the money supply, keeping interest rates at de facto zero levels, running huge annual deficits, piling up unsustainable national debt, and subsidizing workers to stay home.

Natural gas and oil costs are now soaring to unsustainable levels—and to the point where the middle class simply will not be able to travel, keep warm in winter, or cool in summer.

Both in Europe and the United States left-wing governments deliberately curbed drilling and non-Russian pipelines. They shut down nuclear power plants and subsidized costly, inefficient solar and wind projects. They ended up not with utopia, but with fuel shortages, high prices, and energy dependency on the world's most repressive regimes.

The woke revolution in the West was supposed to teach us that the "white male"-dominated Western world is toxic. Its origins, ascendence, and current leisure and affluence were supposedly due only to systemic exploitation, racism, and sexism.

Elites introduced cancel culture, doxxing, deplatforming, and social ostracism to shame these supposed exploiters and to destroy their lives and careers.

Few asked how a supposedly noxious West of some 2,500 years duration became the number one destination of millions of global non-Western migrants and offered the greatest degree of global prosperity and freedom for its citizens.

So a reset reckoning is coming—in reaction to the "new orders" championed by Biden and the Davos set.

In the November 2022 midterms, we are likely to see a historic "No!" to the orthodox left-wing agenda that has resulted in unsustainable inflation, unaffordable energy, war, and humiliation abroad, spiraling crime, racial hostility—as well as arrogant defiance from those who deliberately enacted these disastrous policies.

What will replace it is a return to what until recently had worked.

Closed and secure borders with only legal and measured immigration will return. Americans will demand tough police enforcement and deterrent sentencing, and a return to integration and the primacy of individual character rather than separatist fixations on the "color of our skin."

The public will continue to tune out of the partisan and mediocre "mainstream" media. We will see greater increased production of oil and natural gas to transition us slowly to a wider variety of energy, strong national defense, and deterrent foreign policies.

The prophets of the new world order sowed the wind and they will soon reap the whirlwind of an angry public worn out by elite incompetence, arrogance, and ignorance.
