The Horrors That Await If They Get Away With Stealing The Election

It's Who Counts The Votes

By William M. Briggs | www.wmbriggs.com/post/33314

I predicted that unless there was wholesale cheating Trump would win.

There was, is, wholesale cheating. There isn't an educated soul anywhere that doesn't know that ballot stuffing is the normal Democrat ploy. In Wisconsin, more votes were found than registered voters, the late "discovered" ones going to Team Biden. We saw crowds for Trump in Michigan, Wisconsin, Pennsylvania and elsewhere that dwarfed those for Team Biden—elephants versus ants weren't in it—yet, somehow, Team Biden had more votes. But only after the counts were stopped to see how many more votes were needed.

The panic over the coronadoom, a crisis that did not go to waste, contributed mightily to this. Readers here cannot say they weren't warned. Over and over and over again some more, until we are now all sick unto death talking about it.

Ask any Team Biden voter who Tony Bobulinski is, or about Joe Biden's treason. The media's and Democrats strategy to remain utterly mute on this subject, a clear admission they believed Bobulinski, paid off.

There is any number of stories of how the Leftists have launched what they hope can be their final assault on America. Their goal is to obliterate everything good that America ever did or aspired to achieve, erase its citizens' memories, and sow the seeds for future generations to revile and reject everything that is decent and noble in our country.

They intend to fundamentally change America's historical narrative away from events and circumstances that made our country

Horowitz: How Republican-controlled state legislatures can rectify election fraud committed by courts and governors

By the proper power our Constitution gives them

By Daniel Horowitz

Who determines the outcome of the presidential election in a given state? Governors? Secretaries of state or boards of election superintendents? The courts? Fox News' decision desk? Nope. The president wins a state when electors selected by state legislatures conduct a vote in their respective states on Dec. 14. Thus, ultimately, according to the Constitution, the state legislators wind up serving as the kingmakers in a disputed election.

Endless pots of unverified mail-in ballots that often fail to meet state election law standards weren't created overnight at 3 a.m. on Nov. 4. They were created by a mix of illegal administrative actions taken by Democrat administrations in the key states and state and lower federal courts overriding long-standing state election laws. This has been going on for years, but accelerated to a fever pitch over the past few months.

The Constitution, in Art. I, §4,

A Disputed Election Will Test the Electoral College?

By William L. Kovacs

If Election 2020 is disputed, it will test the workability of the constitutional and federal and state statutory procedures to elect a president against the U.S. Supreme Court wanting to accumulate greater power by functioning as a super-legislature.

Supreme Court involvement will ensure 2021-2024 will be a continuous fight over legitimacy, no matter who wins. George W. Bush, Obama, and Trump were considered illegitimate by some portion of the nation. There is a comprehensive set of laws and several constitutional provisions governing the election of a president. If the legislated process is again co-opted by the U.S. Supreme Court; half the nation will likely believe the next president illegitimate.

Forget Russian interference, there are no algorithms for gaming the outcome of the electoral college process. It was designed by compromise, not logic. The electoral college, like the play Shear Madness, allows for many endings. We need to let the solid judgment of the Founders' compromise

Refusals to Cover Biden's Foreign Influence Peddling Expose Naked Media Scandal

By Professor Larry Bell

Arguably the most newsworthy story on the cusp of the most important American election in modern history is one that most major media outlets aren't covering.

Namely, the missing scoop is about a blockbuster October 14 New York Post feature describing details regarding how the Biden family has made a lucrative business peddling Joe's vice president and potential White House oval office influence to Chinese oligarchs and other foreign adversaries.

The Post obtained the information from thousands of emails, text messages and personal images found on an unclaimed laptop computer now in the FBI's possession since late 2019 that former Vice President Joe Biden's son Hunter had left in a Delaware shop for repair.

Notably, although candidate Biden has attempted to dismiss the Post report as a "smear," neither he nor his campaign have disputed that Steve's Say . . .

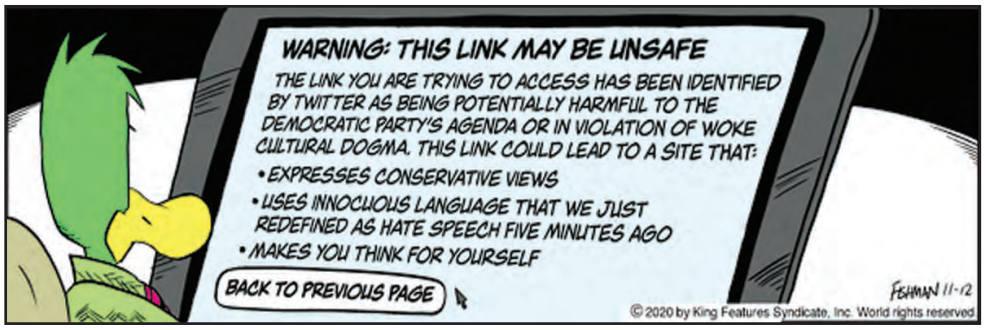
The Fake World They're Trying To Force You To Believe You Live In



By Steve Welcenbach

The November 3rd Presidential election happened exactly as we surmised it would here at Reality News. The fake news media would utilize the fake polls to create a fake narrative with their fake votes generated by their army of fake poll workers to generate fake results where they needed them to occur.

Unfortunately for them, you overwhelmed the polls with legitimate Trump votes which forced them to alter their plan. And they got sloppy.

You may recall the headline piece provided in the September RN edition describing the exact scenario you witnessed beginning on the night of November 3rd. Trump appeared poised to win an easy victory. Then the post midnight Biden vote dumps magically reversed some of Trump's enormous leads, followed by days of clearly illegal vote processing and observer exclusion in Pennsylvania, Michigan and Georgia. There leads there were so big several hundred thousand new fake ballots had to be manufactured.

Today the documented instances of fraud and voting machine rigging keep piling up at an accelerating rate. This voter fraud syndicate, which spans the entire country and contains many international elements and includes the mainstream media, is systematically being exposed and positioned for prosecution.

We are now witnessing Trump's greatest triumph and gift to America. That is, if we ignore the fake news manure being spread across the airwaves and support the efforts of his teams to gather the necessary proofs. Only full exposure of the heist of our American heritage these criminals are trying to pull off can not only rectify the immediate electoral crime but put America on a path of truly fair elections in the future.

God's plan almost never looks like the one we draw up in our mind. Ours never seems so uncomfortable nor difficult or requiring patience. God's plan never seems to turn out so tidy. Trump had to allow this electoral mess to play out so that he could retrieve the needed evidence to expose and prosecute all of the actors involved. That's just what's happening now. And it's working. Beautifully.

You don't think these scoundrels caught Trump at unawares, do you? He's proven always to be several steps ahead. No collection of bureaucrats, politicians or Leftists has ever defeated him. And they're not going to now. He told us he foresaw this election heist coming. But he also understands that the achilles heel of the criminal mind is hubris, their belief that they will always get away with their crimes, because they always have.

The US constitution already provides the remedy for correcting this criminal heist of our votes and American heritage. State Legislatures decide who their electors will be and how they will vote in the electoral college, as outlined in David Horowitz's piece included in this RN edition. If they conclude that a false outcome of the vote totals occurred due to fraudulent acts, they simply can instruct the electors to vote for the duly elected candidate absent the fraud. The Republican legislatures in Wisconsin, Pennsylvania, Michigan, Georgia and Arizona should have no trouble utilizing this constitutional provision to correct this obvious fraud.

State Legislators better get the message. If these criminals successfully complete this heist and install Joe Biden as president, America as founded ends. Freedom will not exist nor will prosperity. We will die unless we move forward with the very last arrow in our quiver - to abolish it. Yes, that means civil war, to restore the Republic as founded. What that looks like I don't want to know and neither do you. So do your job and keep us out of it.

But what about the media outrage? And the inevitable riots that will burst forth?

Simple. Let the cops and, if need be, the National guard actually do their job and arrest the insurrectionists. And who cares about the media. They're part of the syndicate. Many need to be arrested and tried as aiders and abettors of the vote fraud syndicate.

So trust Trump. He will get us to the other side of this, if anyone can. But even more so, trust God and His plan.

As the great actor John Voight told us in his video today, we all know the truth. They stole Trump's re-election. We all witnessed it. We are in the "battle of righteousness vs Satan. Let us give our trust to God….Let us fight this fight as if it is our last fight on Earth."

Amen. And keep praying. God hears us.

Our Vision

We aspire to a world in which people, made in the image of God, reconciled to Him by Jesus Christ, and reflecting God's own creativity, work together to enhance the fruitfulness, beauty, and safety of the Earth, enabling more and more of our neighbors to enjoy good health, long life, freedom, justice, and spiritual and material abundance, for the glory of God and the good of our fellow man, thus fulfilling the two Great Commandments to love God and love our neighbor.

Our Mission

We seek to magnify the glory of God in creation, the wisdom of His truth in environmental stewardship, the kindness of His mercy in lifting the needy out of poverty, and the wonders of His grace in the gospel of Jesus Christ.

Our Identity

A coalition of theologians, pastors, ministry leaders, scientists, economists, policy experts, and committed laymen, the Cornwall Alliance is an evangelical voice promoting environmental stewardship and economic development built on Biblical principles.

California Governor Bans the Sale of Cars and Trucks with Internal Combustion Engines after 2035

By H. Sterling Burnett

California Gov. Gavin Newsom (D) issued an executive order (EO) banning the sale of gasoline-powered passenger vehicles in 2035.

Newsom's September 23 directive, requires all new passenger vehicles sold in the state be "zero-emission by 2035," and orders California's Air Resources Board to develop regulations to ensure that "all operations of medium- and heavy-duty vehicles shall be 100 percent zero emission by 2045 where feasible." As a result of Newsom's EO the only new passenger vehicles sold in California after 2035 would be electric vehicles.

Under Newsom's EO, owners of existing gasoline powered vehicles would still be allowed to keep, maintain, register, and sell their cars and trucks, and be able to buy and sell used cars, however, dealerships would not be allowed to sell any new cars that produce air emissions during operation.

Cites Existing Authority

Newsome's gasoline powered vehicle ban is likely to draw lawsuits challenging it since it was enacted through an executive order, not legislation passed by California's legislature.

Anticipating challenges, Newsome, when announcing the ban, said he was acting under authority given the governor under laws enacted in 2017 and 2018, directing the State Energy Resources Conservation and Development Commission to assess California's infrastructure to help the state reach the goal of having 5 million zero-emission vehicles on the road by 2030, and establishing a State Air Resources Board and authorizing it the to set regulations to reduce emissions.

"This is the most impactful step our state can take to fight climate change," Newsom said in a statement. "For too many decades, we have allowed cars to pollute the air that our children and families breathe.

"Californians shouldn't have to worry if our cars are giving our kids asthma," said Newsom. "Our cars shouldn't make wildfires worse – and create more days filled with smoky air, cars shouldn't melt glaciers or raise sea levels threatening our cherished beaches and coastlines."

'Silly … Unrealistic and Pointless'

Cars don't cause asthma or climate change so Newsom's EO will do nothing to prevent either, said Steve Milloy, a former Trump/Pence EPA transition team member, founder of JunkScience.com, and a member of the board of directors of The Heartland Institute, to Tyler O'Neil writing for PJ Media.

"Nothing that comes out of a tailpipe causes or triggers asthma," said Milloy. "[Newsom's order] as silly as it is unrealistic and pointless.

Replacing gasoline-power cars with electric vehicles in California would require, among other things, global cobalt production to increase by 133 percent and global copper production to increase by 33 percent," Milloy told PJ Media. "In return, the weather would remain the same."

Making a Bad Situation Worse

Newsome's EO comes at a time when California is decommissioning coal, natural gas, and nuclear power plants and replacing them with inherently intermittent and variable wind and solar generated power, a policy Newsome himself admitted in August had resulted in widespread rolling blackouts in each of the past two summers.

If future California politicians actually allow Newsom's ban on gasoline vehicles to be enforced, they will make an existing bad situation worse for a state already suffering power shortages, said James Taylor, president of The Heartland Institute, in a press release.

"This is a classic example of politicians seeking short-term political gain by imposing impossible requirements on future residents and politicians," Taylor said. "California's wind and solar power cannot keep its power grid functioning reliably even at current demand levels.'

"Adding tremendous new strain to the grid by requiring electrification of California cars will bring the entire grid crashing down," Taylor continued. "With eight-hours required to charge an electric car battery, Californians will soon be longing for the nightmare gasoline lines of the Jimmy Carter era; all future California automobiles will have to come with portable cots or sleeping bags for use while people wait to charge their cars."

Meteorologists Anthony Watts, a senior fellow with The Heartland Institute, also notes Newsom's order ignores California's recent experience with energy shortages by requiring ever more electric power demand, now for transportation.

"Newsom, ignoring the hard lessons of this past summer where the heavily solar and wind reliant California electric grid had to force rolling blackouts to prevent collapse, now adds the prospect of millions of additional electric vehicle kilowatt-hours charging from the grid," Watts said. "Even a grade-schooler can figure out that solar energy doesn't work at night, when most electric vehicles will be charging, so where does Newsom think all this extra electric power is going to come from? California's 'Green New Train Wreck' looms large on the horizon."

Order Will Cost Jobs

California's Republican Party said Newsom's EO ending the use of gasoline powered vehicles will result thousands of jobs being lost, even as the state is already experiencing record high unemployment.

"Governor Gavin Newsom's failure to lead California was on full display today as he talked about eliminating over 350,000 good-paying jobs in our oil and gas industry, while ignoring the millions of already unemployed Californians and the tens of thousands of shuttered businesses," Jessica Millan Patterson, chairwoman of the California Republican Party, said in a statement.

Time to Celebrate a Trump Victory! U.S. Leaves Paris Agreement!

By E. Calvin Beisner

It's past noon the day after the Presidential election, and we still don't know who won. But regardless who did, President Donald Trump completed a different victory today: the United States officially left the Paris Climate Agreement.

It's a victory of common sense. And you can chalk common sense up to President Trump, who on June 1, 2017, announced the intent to withdraw. The formal process took over three years to complete, but it's done.

Why is it common sense? Because full implementation of the Paris Agreement, by every country that signed it, with no cheating (despite there being no enforcement mechanism), would have cost the world's economy anywhere from $70 to $140 trillion dollars by the end of the century while preventing only about 0.3°F of global warming.

That's $23.3 to $46.6 trillion per tenth of a degree of prevented warming. I've said it before, and I'll say it again: It's no surprise that the author of The Art of the Deal would think that was a bad deal.

So, while you wait on the final election results, you can celebrate this milestone—and thank President Trump for it!

But don't think this is the end of alarmists efforts to push their radical agenda. The Paris Agreement was just one hurdle in a constant fight. We stand ready to continue our efforts for Biblical earth stewardship, economic development for the poor, and the gospel of Jesus Christ.

But those efforts cost money, and so while we celebrate, I am also asking you to consider a special celebratory gift to the Cornwall Alliance to mark this momentous occasion. Keep reading to learn about an awesome DVD that we would love to send you as our "Thank you" when you give a gift of any amount.

Public Understanding of Energy and the Environment Is Fractured! Let's Put it Back Together!

"Political language is designed to make lies sound truthful and murder respectable, and to give an appearance of solidity to pure wind. "

So said George Orwell, author of 1984, in which the corruption of language played a central role in the destruction of liberty and the imposition of injustice.

My friend Mark Mathis, a former TV news anchor/reporter, founder of Citizens Alliance for Responsible Energy (CARE) and then of the Clear Energy Alliance, knows well how environmentalists corrupt language when it comes to energy.

"The way we talk about energy is fractured," Mark says.

"The words we use aren't just misleading, they're outright deceptions, and it's no accident.

"Fossil fuels. Mother Nature. Environmentalism. Alternative Energy. Clean Energy. Green Energy. Denier. They're all wrong."So Mark produced Fractured, a highly educational movie that exposes the truth behind the rhetoric. "Not only are activists, the media, and politicians lying to us," Mark says, "we are unwittingly participating in this dangerous and expensive ruse, and the very future of our society hangs in the balance."

Fractured is one of the clearest, most powerful documentaries I've ever seen addressing the crucial controversies over conventional energy sources (coal, oil, gas, hydro, and nuclear) versus so-called "Green" or "renewable" energy sources (wind, solar, and biofuels). Part of what makes it so valuable is that it cuts through the confusion over terms.

ANDREW BREITBART FREEDOM CENTER AT THE HEARTLAND INSTITUTE

On March 1, 2016, on the fourth anniversary of his death, The Heartland Institute dedicated the public meeting space in its new home in Arlington Heights in honor of Andrew Breitbart.

The Andrew Breitbart Freedom Center is a state-of-the-art meeting facility with seating for 75. Events are scheduled to take place every week in the space, featuring authors of new books, freedom activists and thinkers, and civic and business leaders.

"Andrew Breitbart was a genuine American hero," said Joseph Bast, president of The Heartland Institute, in a video announcing the dedication. "He inspired millions of people to stand up and speak the truth about what is happening in America. We could not be more pleased to have his name forever affixed to The Heartland Institute. We are honored that his family and friends believe this is a suitable addition to his legacy."

Deal, and replacing fossil fuels with wind, solar, battery and biofuel power the centerpiece of their foreign and domestic policies. They would ban fracking outright – or price and restrict it out of existence through a slow, painful death of a thousand regulatory cuts.

That would cost millions of jobs and billions of dollars in annual royalty and tax revenues, send energy prices soaring, and end America's newfound status as the world's foremost oil and gas producer.

It would also hammer environmental quality, especially in sunny and windy locations, such as Western, Midwestern and coastal states. Their fossil fuel revenues would disappear; their wind and sunshine would be exploited; their open spaces, scenic areas and wildlife habitats would be blanketed with wind turbines, solar panels, transmission lines, and warehouses filled with backup power batteries.

But some would benefit greatly – including those with financial and other interests in mining, mineral processing and manufacturing related to wind, solar and battery technologies. Hunter Biden's email trove and growing cascades of other evidence continue to reveal fascinating Biden Family connections to China, Russia and Ukraine: countries that would profit mightily from a US Green New Deal, because they supply most of the metals, minerals and components that are absolutely essential under any GND vision.

Many news media, social media and search engines routinely spike, censor or bury stories that could harm the Biden candidacy, sow doubt about manmade climate chaos, or undermine claims that the GND transition would be easy, affordable, ecological, sustainable and painless. It would not be.

Wind and sunshine are certainly clean and renewable. Harnessing them to power America is not.

Fossil fuels still provide 80% of US energy. In 2018, they generated 2.7 billion megawatt-hours of electricity. Another 2.7 billion MWh worth of natural gas powered factories, emergency power systems, and furnaces, ovens, stoves and hot water heaters in restaurants and homes. Cars, trucks, buses, semi-trailers, tractors, bulldozers and other vehicles consumed the equivalent of another 2 billion MWh.

That's 7.4 billion megawatt-hours per year that the GND would have to replace! We'd also have to generate another 142 million MWh per year to charge batteries for each week of windless, cloudy days.

The more we try to do so, the more we'd have to put turbines and panels in low quality wind and solar sites, where they'd generate electricity only 15-20% of the year: 80-85% below "nameplate capacity."

That means this transformation to an all-electric nation would require millions of onshore wind turbines, thousands of offshore turbines, billions of solar panels, millions of vehicle battery modules, billions of backup energy storage battery modules, thousands of miles of new transmission lines, millions of vehicle charging stations, tens of billions of tons of concrete, steel, copper, plastic, cobalt, rare earth elements and countless other materials – and digging up hundreds of billions of tons of overburden and ores!

Even if the United States and world could somehow mine, process and smelt enough metals and minerals – and manufacture, transport and install all those turbines, panels, batteries and transmission lines – the GND would require the greatest expansion of mining, manufacturing and land use in human history.

With Democrats and Greens still adamantly opposed to mining anywhere in the USA – even though the USA likely has all those metals and minerals literally beneath our feet – America would be dependent on China, Russia and Ukraine for the critical materials that make wind turbines, solar panels and rechargeable batteries possible. US foreign and domestic policies would be held hostage.

Nearly all this mining, processing and manufacturing would require gasoline, diesel, natural gas and coal ... in foreign countries ... because those operations cannot be conducted with wind, solar and battery power. Global CO2 and other emissions would increase. Global atmospheric carbon dioxide levels would continue to rise. They would simply come from locations outside the USA.

Moreover, that overseas mining, processing and manufacturing would mostly take place under nearly nonexistent workplace safety, fair wage and child labor laws. The horrors we already see Africa's Congo region would be minor compared to what would accompany GND demands for cobalt and other materials.

Replacing oil and gas for petrochemicals, pharmaceuticals and plastics would require importing those feed stocks or planting millions of acres in canola, soybean and other biofuel crops. The water, fertilizer, pesticide, tractor, harvester, processing and transportation requirements would be astronomical.

The wind, solar, battery and biofuel facilities would impact hundreds of millions of acres of America's croplands, scenic areas, and plant and animal habitats. Raptors, other birds, bats, and forest, grassland and desert wildlife would suffer substantial losses and even be driven into extinction in many areas.

The GND would also mean ripping out perfectly good natural gas appliances, replacing them with electric models, installing rapid charging systems for vehicles, and upgrading household, neighborhood, state and national electrical systems to handle the extra loads. That would require still more raw materials.

Would Biden AOC & Co. require "responsible sourcing" for all GND materials and components, meaning certified compliance with all US wage, workplace safety, child labor and environmental laws?

Would they require that wind and solar companies go through an extensive, multi-year NEPA environmental review process for every industrial installation and transmission line? Demand compliance with the Endangered Species Act, Bald and Golden Eagle Protection Act, Migratory Bird Treaty Act, Clean Water Act and other laws that have been strictly enforced for decades for other industrial facilities?

Or will they claim all those turbines, panels, batteries and power lines are needed to "save the planet from imminent climate cataclysms," and thus must be exempted from wildlife and environmental laws? Will they claim killing birds, bats and other wildlife is "inadvertent" and "unintentional," and thus should be excused or legalized – exempting even the massive slaughter associated with GND-scale installations?

Families, factories, hospitals, schools and businesses accustomed to paying 7-11¢ per kilowatt-hour for electricity would pay 22¢ per kWh as they already do in "green" US states – or even 35¢ a kWh as families now pay in Germany. Gasoline and natural gas prices would also skyrocket, until the GND banished those fuels. How many businesses would survive? How many jobs would disappear? How many people would have to join the ranks of those who must choose between heating and eating?

When electricity supplies cannot meet demand, or when California-style rolling blackouts hit, who would get cut off first? Politicians who imposed the GND and Deep State bureaucrats who operate it? Big Tech servers? Environmentalist groups and schools whose teacher unions backed the Biden-Harris-AOC Deal? Or innocent hospitals, factories, workers and families? Who would get to make those decisions?

If states or counties are forced to erect wind turbines, solar panels and transmission lines, can they decide to meet their own needs during shortages, before exporting electricity to progressive states and cities? Could they declare themselves fossil fuel sanctuaries and refuse to close mines and power plants?

Who will design and enforce the GND income confiscation and redistribution schemes, in the name of "social, environmental and economic justice" – with much of the redistribution likely going to ruling elites and their corporate and activist allies? Do we really want to further enrich the originators of COVID?

All these issues demand open, robust debate – which too many schools and universities, news and social media outlets, corporate and political leaders, and Antifa mobs continue to censor and cancel. America deserves answers, before November 3, and before any actions are taken on any Green New Deal.

Paul Driessen is senior policy advisor for the Committee For A Constructive Tomorrow (www.CFACT.org) and author of books, reports and articles on energy, environmental, climate and human rights issues.

Health care plan under Biden and Harris blows up

READ SLOWLY!

1. In order to insure the uninsured, we first have to un-insure the insured.
2. Next, we require the newly un-insured to be re-insured.
3. To re-insure the newly un-insured, they are required to pay extra charges to be re-insured.
4. The extra charges are required so that the original insured, who became un-insured, and then became re-insured, can pay enough extra so that the original un-insured can be insured, 'free-of-charge' to them. They can also insure the illegal immigrants for free and keep kids on the parents plans until the kids are 26 years old. Co-pays rise to 6,000 to 12,000 and more. Many treatments are assigned to individuals for fees and many treatments are denied due to age.(use aspirin in place of knee replacement etc.)to save $.

This, ladies and gentlemen, is called "redistribution of wealth" or, by its more common name, SOCIALISM, or PROGRESSIVISM, the politically correct names for COMMUNISM !

Currently there are 180,000,000 privately insured through the companies they work for. There are only 8,000,000 insured through Obama care.

The Biden plan would cancel all private insurance and move to government insurance, single payer, a socialist democrat plan.

The US healthcare system would decline under the Liberal dream.

Israelis and Africans for Trump

Trump policies reshape Middle East politics and reject eco-imperialism for Africa and USA

By Paul Driessen

President Trump is "the greatest friend Israel has ever had in the White House," Israeli Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu has said. According to an i24 News poll, 63% of Israelis say Trump would be better for Israel than Joe Biden, who received a mere 18% affirmation. They cite moving the US Embassy to Jerusalem, recognizing Israeli sovereignty over the Golan Heights, rejecting the Obama-Iran nuclear deal, and normalization of relations between Israel and Bahrain, the United Arab Emirates and Sudan, along with greatly improved relations with Saudi Arabia, all largely because of Trump Administration efforts.

It's easy to imagine similar reactions from all over Africa when you hear people like South African energy analyst and development champion Adil Nchabeleng, who says Mr. Trump "is doing so much good for humanity. Those that hate him are doing so because of their dislike for his achievements." Or South African black trade unions, who say Trump "needs lots of support and must come back as an administration. They have their minds and heart in the right place."

Contrast that to President Obama, who in 2010 told Africans they should reject "dirty" fossil fuels, and base their economies on the continent's "bountiful" wind, solar and biofuel resources. Mr. Obama wasn't keen on hydroelectric either, though a continent with few good rivers and a history of prolonged droughts isn't very enthusiastic about hydro either. His support for nuclear power was minimal, at best.

Obama's carbon-colonialist views were reflected in his administration's policies and support for World Bank and "multilateral development bank" policies of lending only for "renewable" energy. That is a recipe for minimal job growth, barely improved living standards, interminably antiquated medical services and perpetually short life spans. It's eco-imperialism and even eco-manslaughter.

I've condemned this and the evil of what are really anti-development banks in books and in multiple articles (here, here, here, here, here and elsewhere). For the most part, there's been little reason to moderate my criticism. Even the Africa Development Bank, after promising to support coal and gas-fired power plants, caved in to radical green pressure groups and now says it will finance only wind and solar.

Indeed, the Deep State is still too much in control of US policies and messaging, and in denial of the horrific human and ecological damage it is causing. It's all too easy to imagine what policies would be under a Biden-Harris-AOC regime. Africa (and the rest of the developing world) clearly deserve better.

That's why President Trump's call for supporting nuclear power in Africa and other developing nations is important, why he should (and probably will) support fossil fuel power plants in Africa during a second term – and why Africans and other common folk worldwide should (and probably do) support him. While too many US, UN and EU agencies and elites still promote and impose anti-fossil fuel policies, another four years of Trump would change much of that, for the great betterment of Africa and other regions.

You simply cannot build economies, industries, jobs and modern countries on expensive, intermittent, weather-dependent wind and solar power – even if they are backed up, almost megawatt-for-megawatt, by redundant and equally expensive batteries or coal, gas, nuclear and hydroelectric power plants.

Wind turbines, solar panels, electric vehicles, transmission lines and battery energy storage systems are reliant on far too many metals and minerals that must be dug out of the ground, processed and turned into pseudo-green technologies at rates and in amounts far in excess of what the world has ever achieved, ever before in history, and with massive adverse environmental consequences. None of these materials is renewable; none of the mining and manufacturing processes are sustainable at the rates envisioned.

Moreover, this "renewable" energy future is intended not just to meet Africa's own needs. It is supposed to meet global demands for these same materials, so that every nation on earth can keep their fanciful pledges to "go green" and "carbon neutral" by 2030, 2050 or some other arbitrary year. (Most of these target dates are far enough away to be meaningless – and to ensure the politicians making the promises are dead or out of office, and can't be held accountable for the devastation they will cause.)

The bottom line is very simple. No Green New Deal – for America, much less for the entire world – can break the laws of physics, or the laws of nature and ecology. Just the massive additional amounts of copper and concrete would be inconceivable – to say nothing of the rare earths, cobalt, lithium and scores of other materials we would need for Joe Biden's transition from an oil and gas economy to one based on wind and sunshine.

These GND technologies are pseudo-renewable, pretend-sustainable, make-believe clean and green. You cannot build them without raw materials. You cannot get those materials without mining, fossil fuels and ecological impacts at hundreds of times the levels humanity and our planet have ever seen before. And because of American (especially environmentalist and Democrat) animosity toward mining anywhere in the USA, you cannot get them without violating every canon of "ethical, responsible sourcing," and every US law and moral principle against "conflict minerals," child labor and environmental degradation.

The hard reality is that all the GND mining, processing and manufacturing would be done overseas – primarily in Africa, Asia and Latin America ... primarily by Chinese and Russian companies ... paying little better than slave wages ... paying little attention to endangered species or ecological values ... and not giving a tinker's damn about foreigner criticism ... perhaps especially because all those moralizing foreigners would be 100% dependent on the Chinese and Russian supply chains.

As a South African friend recently observed, African concern for the environment is much more intimate and ingrained than it is for most Americans and Europeans. Every African is spiritually tied to his or her ancestral rural homeland; each one knows which piece of land he or she came from. They believe those lands are sacred and occupied by the spirits of past generations, so they are spiritually in communication with the environment much more than "western first world" people.

Even African city dwellers, and certainly those still living in rural areas, are constantly aware that there are elephants, big cats and other animals around. They don't want to upset the wildlife, much less see rhinos and other animals poached for superstitious Asian markets – much, much less see them sacrificed on the altar of GND transitions and climate change alarmism, as the continent is ravaged for minerals.

More and more Africans are recognizing that radical greens and climate catastrophists are really demanding that Africans accept living standards not much better than what they have endured for generations – while their environment is ripped up, their wildlife are killed off, and their countryside is blanketed with mines, turbines, panels, transmission lines and warehouses of battery modules.

More and more Africans are also beginning to understand that their future is dependent on oil, gas, coal and nuclear power. That the more they can generate reliable, affordable electricity with those sources, the more jobs they can create, the wealthier and healthier they will become, the more they can wean themselves off foreign dependency – and the less they will have to rely on the financing and dictates of foreign banks whose lending policies are dictated by climate fears and "carbon neutrality" demands.

Mr. Biden and President-in-Waiting Kamala Harris also want to fundamentally and totally "transform" America's economy, culture, history, traditions, and freedom to read, hear, see, think and speak facts and ideas that differ from their ideologies and agendas. That intolerant, authoritarian government, media and educational system has personified Africa, China, Russia and the Middle East far too long. For it to dominate the United States would be a worldwide disasters.

If President Trump is reelected, he should bear all this in mind in charting his second term's foreign and domestic policies. Americans should certainly reflect on this as they mark their ballots. And people everywhere should keep all this in mind, as they ponder their future electoral decisions.

Out of Africa, an entrepreneurial society emerges

Ivor Ichikowitz's Africa Youth Survey underscores the continent's innovation and ambition

By Duggan Flanakin

"By their very nature, young Africans are some of the most entrepreneurial people in the world. Up until now, they just lacked opportunity, access to capital or even the courage to believe in themselves," Ivor Ichikowitz said in a recent Zoom interview with me. The South African industrialist, social entrepreneur and philanthropist's family foundation sponsors and funds the Africa Youth Survey, which tracks the attitudes, aspirations and opportunities of African youth in 14 countries.

"Whether or not U.S. policy makers have been paying attention to Africa, young Africans are paying attention to America. I don't even think most American legislators understand the positive impact that American culture and technology have had on the continent," Ichikowitz lamented. "Despite the Chinese penetration into many African countries, all that needs to happen is for the Americans to turn up – to fill the vacuum they created."

In fact, the United States has an astoundingly fresh opportunity to partner with young African entrepreneurs, build the Africa of tomorrow and make the Dark Continent a burgeoning mecca for American goods, Ichikowitz is convinced.

Although China has taken full advantage of U.S. reluctance to invest in Africa's future and end the stigma of European colonialism, many Africans see the Chinese as just another generation of exploiters. The Youth Survey shows that young Africans have a far closer affinity to American products, culture and values, and the American way of life, than anything coming out of China, he observes.

China is not a party to the Equator Principles, which require that Western financial institutions meet World Bank social and environmental policies that have put a heavy emphasis on manmade climate change, eliminating fossil fuels, and financing only wind, solar and biofuel projects. This too discouraged Western capital from reaching Africa's shores, opening the door to Chinese influence.

"What we wanted to do in the Survey," said Ichikowitz, "was to show America and the world that there is a sleeping giant – over a billion people in the world's youngest, most entrepreneurial region. This generation of Africans is committed to not being held back by the 400-year legacy of colonialism and Apartheid. They see themselves as intellectual, economic and social equals with their peers in the developed world." The Survey underscores the truth of this perception.

The actual survey involved face-to-face interviews with 4,200 young Africans, ages 18-24, of all educational levels, from 14 sub-Saharan countries. A startling 76% said they want to start a business in the next five years; 60% already have an idea for a business or social enterprise. Four out of five see Wi-Fi access as a fundamental human right and believe technology will change Africa's future for the better. Three in four believe they can positively change their communities through their work.

In the past 15–20 years, this emerging generation of Africans has used Internet access to garner information, overwhelmingly America-based, to educate and thus liberate themselves. This access – including social media aspects and business, technical and other valuable information – has helped young Africans break the shackles of prior generations who, after centuries of colonialist propaganda and restrictions, distrusted successful blacks as surely corrupt and thus untrustworthy.

It has been not mere Internet access, but the social connections and ability to get data (mostly via cellular phones, as access to plug-in electricity remains sparse across much of the continent) that "has changed the lives of hundreds of millions of people across sub-Saharan Africa over the last 10 to 15 years." Little wonder many young Africans view Internet access as more vital to their futures than even electricity and running water.

Nearly 15 years ago, this writer contributed to an article published in European View (by the European People's Party) in which my colleagues and I stated: "Thanks to the almost universal access to cellular telephones and the Internet, Africa is maturing politically and economically, even in countries where oppression is widespread…. Many Africans are tired of 400 years of colonialism and its ongoing vestiges in the post-colonial era, and others are responding to their cries to 'let my people go.'"

In that same article we quoted Peruvian economist Hernando de Soto, who explained in his seminal book, The Mystery of Capital, "The cities of the Third World … are teeming with entrepreneurs … who possess talent, enthusiasm and an astonishing ability to wring a profit out of practically nothing. Most of the poor already possess the assets they need to make a success of capitalism."

The problem, de Soto stressed, is that their assets are primarily intellect, talent, drive and persistence. They lack access to financial capital [and to abundant, reliable, affordable energy] to turn their dreams and often brilliant ideas into reality.

And yet, in the foreword to the Africa Youth Survey, Ichikowitz says this generation of

THIS WEEK:
By Ken Haapala, President Science & Environmental Policy Project (SEPP)

The Science & Environmental Policy Project began in late 1990 as a research effort by atmospheric physicist S. Fred Singer and a handful of graduate students working out of a small office in downtownWashington, D.C.The Project had two goals: (1) to gather material for a book on global environmental issues,and (2) to conduct a survey of scientists affiliated with the UN Intergovernmental Panel on Climate Change to determine the extent of what was, even then, being touted as scientific "consensus" on global warming.

What the graduate students discovered with their survey convinced Dr. Singer to set his book aside and instead to circulate among senior members of the American Meteorological Society a "Statement by Atmospheric Scientists" on greenhouse warming, which was quickly endorsed by 46 leading climatologists and atmospheric physicists (and eventually by nearly 100). That statement, issued on February 27, 1992, drew widespread media attention and was cited more than 150 times in the press. It was the first inkling journalists had that there was no scientific consensus on the reality of a global warming. Indeed, there was raging debate.

The Science & Environmental Policy Project was incorporated in the state of Virginia in 1992, and established as a nonprofit, 501(c)3 educational organization in late 1993.Today, having expanded from that core of 46 scientists, it draws on an international network of some of the finest minds in science who donate their time to promoting sound, credible, peer-reviewed research as the only basis for the health and environmental policies that affect us all.

You can help in two ways:

1. Download SEPP reports, press releases, and articles and pass them on – to newspaper editors, journalists, educators, civic leaders, and others. Help stop the fearmongering and the distortion of science.This is the most important thing you can do.

2. Support SEPP with your tax-deductible contributions. The environmental pressure groups, which present so much wrong information, have a combined clout of more than $1 billion a year.The Science & Environmental Policy Project has had far-reaching impact on less than one-hundredth of one percent of that figure. It's money well and effectively spent.

Van Wijngaarden and Happer Continued: Last week TWTW discussed the preprint of the paper "Dependence of Earth's Thermal Radiation on Five Most Abundant Greenhouse Gases" by W. A. van Wijngaarden and W. Happer (W & H), two noted experts in Atomic, Molecular and Optical (AMO) Physics. To understand the greenhouse effect, an understanding of AMO is needed, particularly to estimate the extent to which increasing greenhouse gases can warm the earth. At the end of last week's discussion, TWTW stated:

"As stated by Lindzen previously, doubling of CO2 will have little effect on the earth's climate, a few percent of the total energy flowing onto the earth and out to space. Again, the exponential functions used by the IPCC [UN Intergovernmental Panel on Climate Change] are pure fantasy. Further, as will be discussed next week, cutting existing CO2 in half will have little effect and the residence time of CO2 in the atmosphere is not particularly meaningful. Carbon dioxide capture is of little or no value."

The term "exponential functions" is not correct as used. It would have been better to say, "Again, the exponential relationships used by the IPCC are pure fantasy."

Another inappropriate term is tipping point which comes from the phenomenon where a tipped object falls over—and does not return to its initial position—once the center of gravity lies outside the base. By extension, a climate tipping point would be one in which (say) the planet gets inexorably hotter, never to cool down. The term is utterly inappropriate for describing the earth which swings back and forth from glacial to interglacial periods.

Further, it is important to emphasize the W & H work supports previous work by others. As stated in the Abstract:

"Doubling the current concentrations of CO2, N2O or CH4 increases the forcings by a few percent. These forcing results are close to previously published values even though the calculations did not utilize either a CO2 or H2O continuum. The change in surface temperature due to CO2 doubling is estimated taking into account radiative-convective equilibrium of the atmosphere as well as water feedback for the cases of fixed absolute and relative humidities as well as the effect of using a pseudoadiabatic lapse rate to model the troposphere temperature."

Unlike models used by the IPCC, W & H compared their results against appropriate physical evidence. They do this in Section 8, "Comparison of Model Intensities to Satellite Observations":

The authors realize that it would be ideal to compare their calculations with satellite observations over the tropics, but the interferometer data are not available. Also note the thermal inversion that occurs over wintertime Antarctica,

Among other conclusions that readers of TWTW may find interesting are:

"Radiative forcing depends strongly on latitude, as shown in Figs. 7 and 8 [not shown here]. Near the wintertime poles, with very little water vapor in the atmosphere, CO2 dominates the radiative forcing. The radiation to space from H2O, CO2 and O3 in the relatively warm upper atmosphere can exceed the radiation from the cold surface of the ice sheet and the TOA [Top of Atmosphere] forcing can be negative.

"Fig. 9 as well as Tables 2 and 4 [not shown here] show that at current concentrations, the forcings from all greenhouse gases are saturated. The saturations of the abundant greenhouse gases H2O and CO2 are so extreme that the per-molecule forcing is attenuated by four orders of magnitude with respect to the optically thin values. Saturation also suppresses the forcing power per molecule for the less abundant greenhouse gases, O3, N2O and CH4, from their optically thin values, but far less than for H2O and CO2.

"Table 2 and Fig. 10 [not shown here] show the overlap of absorption bands of greenhouse gases causes their forcings to be only roughly additive. One greenhouse gas interferes with, and diminishes, the forcings of all others. But the self-interference of a greenhouse gas with itself, or saturation, is a much larger effect than interference between different gases. Table 4 shows that for optically thin conditions, the forcing power per molecule is about the same for all greenhouse gases, a few times 10?22 W per molecule." [Boldface added]

The issue of water vapor is critical to the estimates in 1979 Charney Report that a doubling of CO2 would cause an increase in temperatures of 3 K, plus or minus 1.5 K. These estimates have been continued by the IPCC and its followers, without physical evidence from the atmosphere.

As stated in TWTW last week, W & H have three estimates of the impact of a doubling of CO2. For a fixed absolute humidity and constant lapse rate (drop in temperature with increase in altitude below the tropopause (where water freezes out of the atmosphere)) the estimate is 1.4 K (? C or 2.5 ? F). For a fixed relative humidity and constant lapse rate the estimate is 2.3 K (? C or 4.1 ? F, and for a fixed relative humidity and a pseudoadiabatic lapse rate (condensed water is immediately removed) the estimate is 2.2 ?K (? C or 4 ? F). All these estimates are below the mean estimate used in IPCC reports of 3.0 ? C

Since the greenhouse gases are saturated, particularly for H2O and CO2, there is no reason to accept any estimates above 3.0 ? C without compelling physical evidence of strong atmospheric warming, which is totally lacking in the IPCC reports. Further, as demonstrated in the report of McKitrick and Christy, and in the current report of bulk atmospheric temperature trends by Roy Spencer and Earth System Science Center, UAH, the linear warming trend is modest.:

"The linear warming trend since January 1979 remains at +0.14 C/decade (+0.12 C/decade over the global-averaged oceans, and +0.18 C/decade over global-averaged land)."

Despite dire reports, there is no evidence of dangerous warming from greenhouse gases.

Diseased Electrical Grids: Thanks to the public never having a vote in the 2008 Climate Change Act, the UK is further along with the crippling effects of unreliable electricity than the US, with the possible exception of California. Due to its reliance on solar power, despite soaring prices, California will face problems from blackouts on hot afternoons and evenings when the sun goes down and consumption increases.

Due to its reliance on wind power, the UK will face blackouts on cold, winter nights, when high pressure systems dominate weather patterns. Global Warming Policy Forum Energy Editor John Constable has been writing about the problem for some time. Following another cold snap, Constable has another good essay with a weather map showing an exceptionally large high- pressure system from the mid-North Atlantic to Moscow, centered near the UK. On November 4 & 5, the grid operator, the National Grid, issued System Warnings, requesting existing coal-fired and natural gas-fired plants to fire-up so that the grid will not face a power shortage. If such a shortage occurs the system can crash, causing major damage.

All this is despite the fact that due to increasing electricity prices, consumers and industries are reducing consumption. As Constable writes:

"The fact that electricity consumption has fallen so far in so short a time should be a matter of deep concern, but it is easily explained. In 2002 subsidies to renewables were trivial, today they are £10 billion per year and still rising. Add to this sum the system management charges and it is no wonder that electricity is becoming unaffordable. This is in effect price rationing."

"Indeed, in a delicious irony, during the very moments of peak demand on the 4th of November, when coal, and pumped storage and aeroderivative OCGT [Open Cycle Gas Turbine, a waste of heat] turbines were propping up a cold windless Britain, we were still paying wind turbines in Scotland a total of £40,000 an hour to reduce output, with a grand total of £500,000 over the 4th of November. And this is in spite of the £1 billion Western Link interconnector between Scotland and England that was designed to prevent such payments."

"It is now plain to see that the UK electricity industry is a chaotic joke, with the consumer and the national interest sacrificed repeatedly to save government face and the revenues of the renewables industry."

"It is unlikely that the Department of Business, Energy and Industrial Strategy (BEIS) has any remaining will power to tackle the situation, and the Secretary of State himself, Alok Sharma, is compromised by his position as chairman of the [UN] COP 26 climate negotiations next year. He will do nothing."

Just like a hot evening can be disastrous for California, a cold, still evening can be disastrous for the UK. Politicians are more interested in saving face than addressing problems they face. The UK may have difficulty becoming the Saudi Arabia of wind power as Prime Minister Boris Johnson claimed.

New Name, Same Claims: Corporate Attorney Francis Menton points out that advocates of the US "Green New Deal" have changed the term for their cause to "Zero Carbon Energy Plan." As with the Green New Deal, this plan will produce the same amount of electricity as fossil fuels, create millions of jobs, at no increase in costs to the consumer?

Number of the Week: Up 1.5%. According to Tom Bawden of I News:

"The UK's solar power capacity increased by just 1.5 per cent to 13,500 megawatts in the past year – representing about 5 per cent of the country's total electricity generation capacity."

These numbers are upsetting green politicians and their backers:

"'These figures are appalling. Growth in solar power is virtually at a standstill. People across the country are crying out for the Government to take urgent action to tackle the climate emergency, yet time and again they fall short,' said Liberal Democrat spokesperson for the Climate Emergency Sarah Olney.

"Greenpeace UK's chief scientist, Doug Parr, said: 'These figures are a reminder of the massive opportunity we're missing. Solar is the cheapest, most popular energy source in the UK, yet a series of cack-handed government interventions have managed to put people off fitting solar panels.'"

The claim for solar being the cheapest source for energy comes from the International Energy Agency's World Energy Outlook 2020, which manipulated numbers for claiming increasing carbon dioxide, with increasing photosynthesis, is causing destruction and the report apparently failed to realize that solar power does not work well when its cloudy, as in the UK, or at night.

What Joe Doesn't Know

significantly affecting it. And, yes, we do have a moral and economic imperative to address it. We do that by recognizing that the Sun, not human activity, is undoubtedly the main driver of climate change on Earth, and planning accordingly.

The former vice president tells us that, should he win the presidency, America will "re-enter the Paris Agreement on day one of the Biden Administration." Before committing America to rejoining the useless and economically-devastating treaty, Biden has an ethical responsibility to learn far more about this complex issue.

That the Sun would have a major impact on climate should not surprise Joe. Compared to Earth, our home star is a behemoth and a huge source of energy whereby only a minuscule portion comes to the Earth. Yet that is enough to raise the temperature of our planet from near absolute zero (-273 degrees Celsius) to the relatively comfortable and stable 15 C (59 F) we enjoy today.

Contrary to popular opinion, the Sun is always changing. The variations in its apparent luminosity (called Total Solar Irradiance (TSI), which is the amount of the Sun's power density that reaches the Earth's upper atmosphere in kilowatts per square meter) occur over periods ranging from the well-known 11-year sunspot cycle to longer cycles lasting decades or even centuries. We see evidence that Earthly temperatures vary on the same time scales.

For example, it was during a period of high solar activity around 1000 AD when we experience the Medieval Warm Period. And it was during a period of low solar activity that the Little Ice Age occurred between 1300–1850.

This led prominent solar physicists to suggest that variations in the output of the Sun could account for most of the slight warming since at least the end of the Little Ice Age.

The Friends of Science Society has an excellent web page showing the correlation between recent TSI and temperature at https://friendsofscience.org/index.php?id=707 . The below graph is described on that page as follows:

"A paper by Soon et al 2015 finds a strong correlation between Northern Hemisphere (NH) exo-tropic temperatures and total solar irradiance (TSI). The NH temperatures were determined by using mostly rural stations to remove the effects of urban development that contaminates government datasets."

Some of the direct causes of the changes in the Sun's energy input to the Earth are obvious:

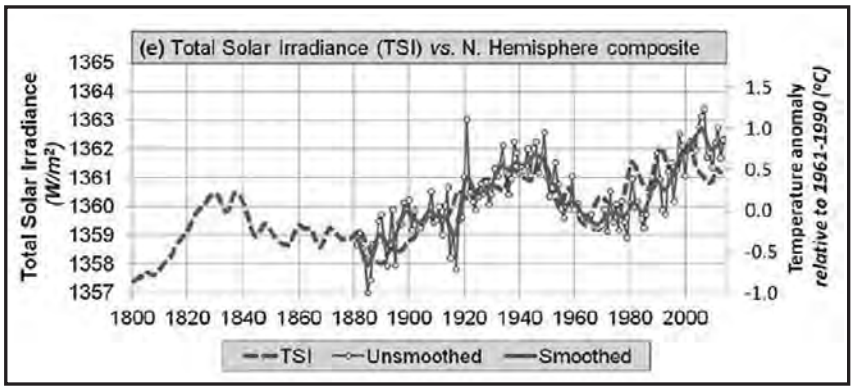
1. Variations in TSI.
2. Changes in the physical Sun/Earth relationship. These changes are generally known as the Milankovitch cycles and are as follows:

• the Earth's orbital path around the Sun varies its eccentricity every 100,000 years, changing its distance from the Sun from 83 to 120 million miles.

• the tilt of the Earth on its axis varies from 22.7 degrees to 24.5 degrees over 41,000 years, altering its seasonal climate. The inclination is now 23.7 degrees.

• the Earth wobbles slightly upon its axis as it rotates, like a slightly off-center spinning top. This cycle is called axial precession and spans about 25,771.5 years.

A visual representation of the changes in the Sun/Earth relationship is as follows:



However, neither of these kinds of changes appear to be the direct cause of the warming seen on the Earth since the end of the Little Ice Age.

• The first factor, changes in TSI, is, according to the reports of Working Group I of the Intergovernmental Panel on Climate Change (IPCC), too small to account for the changes we have seen since 1750. The IPCC estimate the radiative forcing on climate from solar activity between 1750 and 2011 at around 0.05 watts per square meter (W/m2). This value is essentially negligible compared to changes in anthropogenic greenhouse gases whose forcing, the IPCC maintains, is around 2.3 W/m2.

• The second factor, the Milankovitch cycles, operate over time frames much longer than the period of recent warming.

Yet, it has recently been found that, based on measurements of the rate of sea level change over an 11-year sunspot cycle, the change in the amount of energy that enters the oceans is almost ten times larger than that due to the corresponding TSI variation alone. Something is apparently magnifying the impact of changes in the output of the Sun on temperature.

For changes in the Sun's output to be a significant driver of Earthly climate change over the past century, there would have to be a previously unknown natural factor amplifying the TSI changes. Such a potential amplifier has indeed been discovered and, if it is correct, much of the warming in recent centuries could vary well have been an indirect result of changes to TSI.

Evidence for the existence of such a driver is described well in the paper "FORCE MAJEURE: The Sun's Role in Climate Change" by Dr. Henrik Svensmark, a physicist and a senior researcher in the Astrophysics and Atmospheric Physics Division of the National Space Institute in Denmark. What is boils down to is as follows:

• when the Sun is highly active, it has a stronger magnetic field

• this field blocks a significant fraction of the Galactic Cosmic Rays (GCR) entering our solar system from deep space

• since GCRs are understood to encourage cloud nucleation, the reduction in GCR entering the Earth's atmosphere leads to less cloud formation on our planet

• since clouds are known to, generally speaking, cool the planet, less clouds means a warmer Earth.

The reverse is also believed to be the case: a weaker Sun produces a weaker magnetic field and so more GCRs are allowed to enter our atmosphere resulting in more clouds and hence a magnification of the slight cooling effect of a low TSI Sun.

Svensmark summarizes:

"the impact of solar activity on climate is much larger than the official consensus suggests. This is therefore an important scientific question that needs to be addressed by the scientific community."

So, yes, Joe, climate change is enormous. And you therefore have an ethical responsibility to properly address it by focusing on adaptation to whatever nature throws at us next, not yielding to the ridiculous calls to 'stop climate change' from extremists in your party.

Bushfires Royal Commission Doesn't Have The Answers

Experienced land and fire managers from eight community groups across Australia have jointly written to the Prime Minister urging the restoration of healthy and safe rural landscapes. The grass-roots organisations represent more than 6,000 members and 14 regional councils. They have called for an end to the ongoing loss of human life and the socioeconomic and environmental destruction caused by extreme bushfires.

Former Chief of CSIRO Bushfire Research, Phil Cheney, says that a focus on emergency response at the expense of land management has created an unstoppable monster. Expenditure on firefighting forces is ever-increasing whilst volunteers are being cynically used to deflect criticism away from failed government policies. Land management agencies no longer have primary responsibility for suppressing wildfires. Consequently they have little incentive for stewardship and fire mitigation. Cheney is a scientific advisor to Volunteer Fire Fighters Association.

Chairman of Western Australia's Bushfire Front, Roger Underwood, points to the stark contrast in historical fire management policies and outcomes on either side of the continent. Seventy years of data from WA show a strong inverse relationship between the area maintained by mild burning and the area subsequently damaged by high intensity fires. This relationship is especially apparent in extreme fire seasons.

Underwood is widely experienced in sustainable land and fire management at all levels from lighting or fighting fires on the ground, to leading a State land management agency. He highlights the deep divide between those who actively care for the bush and who understand bushfire science and operations, compared to the Academics and Fire Chiefs who are misleading governments. The Royal Commission did not call upon Mr. Cheney, Mr. Underwood or similar elders to give evidence. Their consideration of previous bushfire inquiries went back only as far as the COAG whitewash in 2004.

The Royal Commission has accepted wrong advice from academics and modellers rather than information from experienced practitioners. Consequently its conclusions on Effectiveness of Fuel Management are substantially incorrect.

Our land was successfully managed for tens of thousands of years, through some extreme natural climate changes, by people with long experience, but only the most basic technology. It is shocking to see how this truly adaptive management has been replaced by reliance on computer modelling and hugely expensive but futile paramilitary response capacity. The inevitable carnage will continue in the wake of this Royal Commission unless active landscape management based on pragmatic science is reinstated.

Here is the beginning of the letter sent to the Prime Minister:

Geoff Burrowes, Chairman Garry Squires, Secretary

Hon Scott Morrison MP
Prime Minister of Australia

Dear Prime Minister,

The Bushfires Royal Commission – providing no hope for the future

The Royal Commission's interim observations and the draft propositions give cause for grave concerns.

Conditions leading to Black Summer were not unprecedented. Equally atrocious conditions have been recorded periodically since the Settlement Drought, starting in 1790, when thousands of flying foxes and lorikeets dropped dead at Parramatta during three days of extreme heat and searing winds. Aboriginal fires were constantly burning, but Europeans were able to contain any that reached their settlements, because fuels were light and discontinuous. Our first known megafire occurred about 1820 in the Strzeleckis, after local Aborigines were decimated by smallpox. When Aboriginal management was disrupted across Victoria, 5 million hectares exploded on Black Thursday 1851. By the start of the 20th Century, before any manmade warming, megafires were delivering unprecedented quantities of charcoal in 70,000 years of sedimentary records.

By mid-century, we realised that lack of mild burning causes both pestilence and holocaust. Landscape management was reinstated. Forest health and fire safety improved. Charcoal in sediments declined against a trend of rising temperatures. More than half a century of data from WA shows that mild burning and quick response aid control of wildfires, reducing their number and extent, and maintaining biodiversity. A minimum 8% of the native landscape must be treated annually to guard against megafires. Treatments are effective for 6 years. The maths are simple. At least half the landscape must have recent maintenance to avoid disasters in extreme conditions.

Voter Irregularity And Election Armageddon

By Gary L. Wickert

President Donald Trump has been assailed like no president before him. He has survived 26 accusations of sexual misconduct (which puts him a little under average for public figures with a strong negative following), an impeachment, and an estimated 4000 lawsuits. He has survived—yes, even thrived—following the ridiculous Russian collusion hoax which ended up turning the investigators in the investigated. He has been maligned on social media with more frequency than Adolf Hitler, and his brand of populism has been mistakenly been branded as fascist by those who don't understand history. He is the undefeated heavyweight champion. But his unbeaten record might be coming to an end, victim of the one evil he has gone twelve rounds with but may be powerless to eradicate—voter irregularity. Our sacrosanct election process has been torn from its constitutional roots and relegated to a process you might witness in Venezuela.

For the first time in history, we have witnessed over 100 million votes were cast well before election day, including 66 million mail-in votes. As of Friday, November 6, 2020, there were still nearly 27 million votes outstanding. When you combine this fact with the unfortunate dilemma that we are now a country with a majority of people who want something from their government—rather than the other say around—it is easy to see how America's election process has devolved into something you'd see in a third world country. Party registration statistics from the U.S. Elections Project (https://electproject.github.io/Early-Vote-2020G/index.html) reveal the number of Republicans and Democrats are registered in states with party registration data. As of the 2020 election, conservatives who stand for republicanism, limited government, Christian values, moral universalism, pro-business, opposition to trade unions, strong national defense, free trade, anti-communism, and pro-individualism, number just over 15 million. Democrats—whose political party has been coopted by the far left— rally around such mindless platitudes as "Hope and Change" and this year, "restoring the soul of America by recognizing that our differences are precious and our similarities infinite." Motivated by the lie that is Black Lives Matter and the ridiculous and unsubstantiated dithering about institutional racism and police bias, registered Democrats in those same states number over 22 million. If this preponderance carries through to the other states who have no party registration data, it is not a stretch to say that 60% of Americans are Democrats. It's hard to overcome that big of a difference when people are allowed to vote year-round.

The mail-in voting dream of Democrats carries with it an irresistible opportunity for voter fraud and a commensurate devaluation of the entire election process. The 101 million votes cast early this year (many states do not have data differentiating between in-person and mail-in early voting) put a strain on our system like we have never witnessed before in history. It is a process that is ripe for corruption. And this year we weren't disappointed. Thousands of duplicate ballots were sent to residence. Faulty ballots were printed but never destroyed. One Republican county which Trump carried with over 60% of the vote in 2016 he lost by the same margin in 2020; something that is conceivably possible, but highly unlikely. Philadelphia election officials announced on November 4 a batch of 23,277 votes which were counted late. All of them were for Joe Biden. In conservative Luzerne County, 5,300 late votes included an even 4,000 for Joe Biden. That isn't even possible in a county which voted 57.9% for Donald Trump in 2016.

As of November 9, 2020, Pennsylvania, Georgia, and Arizona are too close to call. If Trump wins those three states, he wins the presidency. There will be litigation over voter irregularity and voter fraud in those three states. In Pennsylvania, the courts State law is clear. You can only count ballots that are received up to election day. This was changed by the courts due to COVID-19, without any requirement that there be a determination that the vote was actually cast before or on election day. While voter fraud is not likely to sway an entire national election, it does become critical when the margins are as slim as they appear to be in these three states.

In May, a former judge of elections pled guilty to stuffing ballot boxes for Democrats. He literally stood in a voting booth and voted over and over, while being paid by others to sway the election. Poll watchers in Detroit were heckled and escorted out of counting rooms. Cardboard was taped over windows so Republican poll watchers couldn't perform their legal responsibility of watching recounts.

The Heritage Election Fraud Database has over 1,300 proven instances of mail-in voting election fraud—all of which occurred before the 2020 presidential election. Undoubtedly, many times that amount go undetected or unreported. Thousands of cases of people stealing voting ballots out of mailboxes and then filling them out and returning them have been reported. Bags and satchels full of ballots are being found abandoned. In Hudson County, New Jersey, a postal worker was arrested for discarding mail after an investigation conducted by the U.S. Department of Justice found more than 1,800 pieces of mail, including 99 absentee ballots, in a dumpster. Heritage.org reports the following:

• Thomas Cooper, a postal worker, pleaded guilty to obscuring, crossing out, and changing at least five party affiliations on absentee ballot request forms back in July during the West Virginia primary.

• In Manatee County, Florida, Larry Wiggins, a registered Democrat, was arrested for requesting an absentee ballot for his late wife, who passed away in 2018. Though Wiggins claims he was simply "testing the system," he is now facing third-degree felony charges.

• In Texas, four people, including a Gregg County commissioner, were arrested last month in connection with their alleged involvement in a vote-harvesting scheme that was uncovered by the state Attorney General's Office.

• A mayoral candidate for the city of Carrollton. Zul Mirza Mohamed is alleged to have forged at least 84 voter registration forms for unwitting residents of Denton County, and then obtained absentee ballots in their names without their knowledge using a virtual mailbox and a false identity.

The list goes on and on. The left continues to dismiss these threats and claim defiantly that voting by mail has no potential for fraud, but these stories continue to disprove that narrative. The problem with mail-in voting is that the sanctity of the process is now susceptible of fraud not just simply during the two minutes process of getting your ballot and standing in the ballot box with a Sharpie. It extends months and involves unsecured mailboxes, nefarious postal workers, the fungibility of the mailed ballots and the insecurity of what happens to them from the time they are mailed until the time they are received.

Trump came out recently and announced that if he loses, it is because of voter fraud. Democrats' heads exploded and they went insane; arguing that the results of elections should be respected and honored. But of course, after four years of thousands of lawsuits, impeachment efforts, and non-stop allegations that the election of 2016 was somehow stolen from them, they have very little credibility in this area. In March, the Atlantic actually came out with a story titled, "How Donald Trump Could Steal the Election." You can't make this stuff up.

Democrats do not get to run around and claim that they deeply respect the outcome of every election and then use Al Gore to make that statement. They do not get to claim the high road after they repeatedly trotted out Stacey Abrams as the governor of Georgia after she lost by more than 50,000 votes. The media has been doing the dirty bidding of elected Democrats for four years now; so, it is no surprise that so many outlets simply come out and announce that Joe Biden is president-elect. A week ago, Hillary Clinton said the following on a news program: "There is an illegitimacy that surrounds the Trump presidency. That infuriates [Republicans] and they have to keep striking out at me." It seems that respecting the sanctity of the vote only occurs to the left when they win.

Donald Trump and the Republican Party should contest every aspect of the 2020 election, and chase down and prosecute every instance of voter fraud. Even if it takes an entire year, it will be three years less than the Democrats spent contesting the results of the 2016 election.

Milwaukee Officials Have Some Explaining to Do

By Jack Cashill

A rumor circulated widely that more people voted in Wisconsin than were registered. Although not true, it strikes me as an honest mistake. The originator of the rumor was looking at the registration numbers for 2018. More people did vote in Wisconsin in 2020 than were registered in 2018.

The real numbers are almost as incredible. In 2020, an astounding 88 percent of those registered to vote seem to have voted. In Ohio, another battleground state, the turnout was a much more typical 68 percent. The highest voter turnout in recent years nationwide was 61.6 percent in 2008. In 2012, the last year for which data are readily available for Wisconsin, the turnout was 65 percent.

If the Wisconsin average was 88 percent statewide, some parts of the state obviously had to have higher numbers. In this regard, the City of Milwaukee is suspect, and not all of Milwaukee, either. Contrary to expectation, in many of the wards with the heaviest concentration of black American voters, the turnout was relatively light. Joe Biden was no Barack Obama, but more on this in a minute.

As a caution, let me call this a work in progress. I am looking at a ward-by-ward spreadsheet that strikes me as a legitimate. Those who know Milwaukee better than I should feel free to contact me through American Thinker.

The most striking feature of the data is a fact that cries out for clarification: in seven wards, voter turnout appears to have exceeded 100 percent. In two of those wards, turnout exceeded 200 percent. In another 15 wards, voter turnout exceeded 95 percent. Joe Biden carried 21 of the 22 wards of the 95-plus-percent wards. But then again, he carried all but one of the 67 additional wards in which the turnout was above 90 percent and won 80 percent of the vote citywide.

In 25 wards, Biden received 97 percent or more of the vote, none higher than 98 percent. Based on exit polls, it is highly likely that these were overwhelmingly black districts. No other demographic could produce those numbers.

One suspects that Democratic operatives could not afford a repeat of Philadelphia 2012, when Barack Obama received 100 percent of the votes in 59 voting districts. They know that Trump is no Mitt Romney (thank God!). Here is how PolitiFact tried to cover for this apparent fraud:

For Pennsylvania, the meme reads, "In 59 voting districts in the Philadelphia region, Obama received 100% of the votes, with not even a single vote recorded for Romney. (A mathematical and statistical impossibility.)" This kind of happened, and it's not actually mathematically impossible.

These fact-checkers do not know how foolish they sound. Barack Obama outscored Romney by a combined 19,605 to 0 votes cast in these 59 districts. Fidel Castro never did this well. That said, not a single major media outlet followed up on the Philadelphia story.

They should have. According to Roper, Romney received 6 percent of the black vote nationwide. If those numbers held in Philadelphia, and there is no reason to believe they would not have, nearly 1,200 of these Philadelphia voters would have voted for Romney.

If only 14 people voted in those districts, the odds would have favored Romney's receiving at least one vote. If 80 people had voted, Romney would have had a better than 99 percent chance of receiving at least one of those votes. With nearly 20,000 voters, the odds of Romney being completely shut out are beyond any reasonable calculation.

According to exit polls, Trump doubled Romney's vote totals among black Americans to 12 percent. To subtract all of his votes would have been too obvious. Interestingly, in every one of these 97- to 98-percent wards, voter turnout was below the statewide average. This suggests that if there were any mischief, it was of the traditional, small-scale kind.

Wisconsin has known voter fraud before but never on this scale. According to the MacIver Institute, a Wisconsin free-market think-tank, nearly 4,000 cases of likely voter fraud were recorded by state officials after the 2016 election, close to a thousand of which were referred to district attorneys.

The likely large-scale fraud of 2020 calls way too much attention to itself. If the data I am looking at are correct, there are people on the hard left who may want to get caught. For them, a Biden win overturned by the Supreme Court would offer a whole lot more opportunity for mayhem than they could hope to find with a faltering old liberal as president.

Restore Confidence in our Elections

By Rep. Joe Sanfelippo

MADISON, Wis. - Regardless of any election's outcome, it is imperative that every citizen be confident in the honesty and integrity of what is inarguably one of our most valuable constitutional rights.

A great number of irregularities have taken place leading up to and including this past Election Day that have breached the trust of the electorate and created an environment of no-confidence in the outcomes of the November 3rd election.

The only way to restore that trust and confidence is to perform a complete and in-depth investigative audit of the election and to hold off on certifying the election results until the investigation is complete.

"Democrats have created a cloud of suspicion over this election because they refuse to follow state election laws. Conducting such an investigation prior to certifying the election is essential and the only way our citizens will believe the results reported are legitimate," Sanfelippo said.

The WI Election Commission ignored state law and refused to deactivate the eligibility of more than 230,000 unverified names on the voter list. Clerks in Milwaukee and Dane Counties colluded to nearly 250,000 individuals to the "Indefinitely Confined" voter list. Officials in the City of Madison defied state law confirmed by a court ruling and began early voting weeks ahead of the time allowed by law. Third Party candidates were kept off the ballot to protect the "chosen party" candidates. This is just the beginning of the list.

If an investigation shows these actions affected the outcome of the election, we need to either declare this past election null and void and hold a new election or require our Electoral College Delegates to correct the injustice with their votes.

"If we do not take action now to enforce our election laws and restore confidence in the outcomes, we will create an environment wherein each side tries to "out-cheat" the other to get to victory and We the People will lose permanent control as we fall victim to a government created of, by, and for the party," said Sanfelippo.

"Operation Scorecard" CIA-run vote theft software was running in EVERY swing state… "glitches" switched votes from Trump to Biden

By Mike Adams

(Natural News) Five days ago, we published a breaking story that was originally uncovered by Dave Janda (DaveJanda.com), detailing the use of CIA-developed software to steal votes by intercepting voting machines and switching Trump votes to Biden votes. That story is entitled, "RED ALERT: Dems collude with CIA to launch intelligence operation that ALTERS voting machine results in Pennsylvania and other swing states." (See full video interview below, which was banned by YouTube.)

Earlier today it was discovered that a software "glitch" in Michigan had switched 6,000 votes from Trump to Biden. The glitch was discovered when an effort was made to manually review the ballots, revealing that thousands of votes were switched by the software. This was announced by state GOP Chairwoman Laura Cox, who stated:

In Antrim County, ballots were counted for Democrats that were meant for Republicans, causing a 6,000 vote swing against our candidates. The county clerk came forward and said 'tabulating software glitched and caused a miscalculation of the vote.' Since then, we have now discovered the 47 counties used the same software in the same capacity… Antrim County had to hand count all of the ballots, and these counties that used the software need to closely examine their results for similar discrepancies.

So 47 other counties in Michigan were using the same software. This means the Michigan vote was stolen from Trump, and we are actually being subjected to a cyber warfare assault on America.

The same vote rigging software is used in every swing state.

Now, we are learning from The Gateway Pundit that this same software was used in all swing states, including PA, GA, NV, MI, WI, AZ and MN.

The software is ominously named "Dominion." The project to deploy this software is called both "Project Hammer" and "Operation Scorecard."

As TGP reports:

Dominion Software is used in 47 US states including ALL OF THE BATTLEGROUND STATES.

The Dominion software "glitch" ONLY took votes from President Trump and Republicans.

Dominion is used in 30 different states.

Dominion is used in EVERY SWING STATE!

Nevada, Arizona, Minnesota, Michigan, Wisconsin, Georgia, Pennsylvania.

And NUMEROUS COUNTIES in Georgia also used the software!!

This is turning into a MASSIVE scandal!

Democrats thought this "glitch" would be enough to beat Donald Trump.

They had no idea he would have the greatest landslide and vote totals in US history!

So then they had to dump Hundreds of Thousands of ballots in to the swing states they lost!

The original interview that broke this story was published by Dave Janda. It was an interview with Lt. Gen. Tom

SD Gov. Noem: 'We Gave Al Gore 37 Days to Run the Process' — Trump Voters Deserve Same Consideration

Gov. Kristi Noem

By Pam Key

Governor Kristi Noem (R-SD) noted Sunday on ABC's "This Week" that during the 2000 election, former Vice President Al Gore was given 37 days to run the process of legal challenges to the election.

Therefore, she said we should "afford the 70.6 million Americans that voted for President Trump the same consideration."

Partial transcript as follows:

NOEM: What I think is going on here, George, is that this is all premature. This is a premature conversation because we have not finished counting votes. There are states that have not been called, and back in 2000, Al Gore was given his day in court. We should give President Trump his day in court. Let the process unfold because, George, we live in a republic.

We are a government that gets its power from the consent of the governed. That is the people. They give their consent on Election Day. Election Day needs to be fair, honest, and transparent, and we need to be sure that we had an honest election before we decide who gets to the White House the next four years.

Pennsylvania's mail ballot results don't look right

By Richard Baehr

All of the major networks started confidently predicting yesterday that Joe Biden would win Pennsylvania after all the mail-in ballots that had been received by the state had been counted. The numbers gurus at the networks reported that Biden was capturing 78% of the votes from mail in ballots, and Trump 21%. In other words, Biden was winning this vote group by 57%,

This margin seems too high, based on the party registration of those whose mail in ballots have been confirmed.

The party registration data suggests that Democrats were 65.5% of those who returned mail ballots, Republicans 23.4% and independents 10.4%. If independents split their votes evenly, then one possibility was that Biden would win this voter pool by 42.1%, the difference between their 65.5% share of registered voters who returned mail ballots, and Republicans' share of 23.4%. Let us then assume that independents broke heavily for the Democrats, say 80-20, Then Democrats would have about a 48.3 % lead, 73.8% to 25.5%. Let us further assume that more registered Republicans shifted to Biden than registered Democrats to Trump, so that the real margin was 50%.

How does the Biden victory margin change with different shares of the mail in vote?

- At 42.1% (50/50 split of independents returning mail ballots), Biden wins this pool of 2,506,507 by 1,055,260
- At 48.3% (80/20 split of independents), Biden wins by 1,210,667
- At 50%, Biden wins by 1,253,279
- At 57%, the margin reflecting the state's announced results, Biden wins by 1,428,737

It is almost certain that Biden will win the state when all voting ends by fewer than 175,000 votes. If the mail in vote split were not 57%, as announced, but something more consistent with the party registration of voters who sent back mail in ballots, the change in the margin for Biden among this voting group is a reduction ranging from 175,000 to 373,000 votes in the three scenarios with different vote margins from 42.1% to 50%. Is there a good explanation for why Biden would win this voting population by so much more than the registration numbers suggest? I do not see it.

Count me skeptical of Biden's margin of 57% among mail in ballots, and his soon to be declared "victory" in the state, which will elevate him to President elect with ore than 270 Electoral College votes.

How The Wisconsin Elections Commission Destroyed Fair Elections In Wisconsin

The bipartisan body tasked with administering elections has instead spent the past year tilting the scales for Joe Biden

Guest perspective by Dan O'Donnell

To the world, the Joe Biden presidential campaign in Wisconsin began when he won the state's presidential primary in April. To those who understand how Biden really captured Wisconsin's 10 electoral votes (pending a likely recount), however, the campaign to deliver him the Badger State really began in October of 2019.

That month, the Wisconsin Elections Commission (WEC)—the bipartisan board tasked with administering the state's elections—indicated that it would ignore Wisconsin law buy refusing to remove from the state's voter rolls the names of 234,000 people who had moved either out of state or to a different city in Wisconsin.

Once those names are flagged by the multi-state Electronic Registration Information Center (ERIC) database, Wisconsin Statute § 6.50(3) requires the WEC to "notify the elector by mailing a notice by first class mail to the elector's registration address stating the source of the information." If they do not reply and "apply for continuation of registration within 30 days of the date the notice is mailed, the clerk or board of election commissioners shall change the elector's registration from eligible to ineligible status."

The law is crystal clear: If a voter does not respond and apply for continuation within 30 days, his or her name is to be removed from the voter rolls immediately. This does not, of course, disenfranchise those voters since they are still registered to vote at their new address. It simply removes the old, defunct name and address (in effect a "phantom" voter) from the rolls.

Even if a voter is incorrectly flagged (as three to five percent may be), Wisconsin has same-day voter registration and a person wrongly removed from the rolls can simply re-register on Election Day.

There is no legitimate reason for keeping these 234,000 names on the voter rolls, but the WEC did. Instead of following the law, the WEC invented its own and refused to deactivate these phantom voters for a further 12 to 24 months, allowing them to vote in the presidential primary and general elections.

Needless to say, the potential for massive voter fraud is very high with the existence of more than 200,000 different names on Wisconsin's voter rolls that don't correspond to an actual voter (since the actual voter is either in another state or registered at a different address within Wisconsin).

julian STATE SENATE BRADLEY

In Landslide Victory, Julian Bradley Elected to State Senate

Bradley To Become Wisconsin's First Black Republican State Senator

FRANKLIN, Wis. — In a landslide victory, Julian Bradley, R–Franklin, was elected to represent the 28th District in the State Senate on Tuesday evening.

Bradley released the following statement in response to his win:

"The trust the voters are putting in me to represent them in the Wisconsin State Senate is humbling, and I am so thankful.

"This victory wouldn't have come without the generous support of neighbors, friends, and grassroots volunteers who knocked on doors, made phone calls, and spent countless hours sharing our positive message across the district.

"We are living through unprecedented challenges: challenges which call for engaged leadership and a commitment to finding lasting solutions. I ran for this seat because Madison needs more legislators who will stand up for the values that make us who we are and who will work tirelessly to move our state forward.

"I pledge to serve humbly, loyally, and courageously, and to always uphold our Wisconsin values."

We Name Names: Did Wisconsin Democrats Rig Election Against Trump?

A state Supreme Court Justice "expressed concern the U.S. Supreme Court might force Wisconsin to redo its election to include Hawkins and Walker."

By Jim Piwowarczyk

Did Democrats – including two big Joe Biden campaign donors – rig the Wisconsin election against President Donald Trump? You be the judge.

Ignore everything the mainstream media is telling you about why President Donald Trump supposedly "lost" Wisconsin in unofficial vote totals because of sky-high turnout, decreasing Republican strength in suburban WOW counties, and growing vote totals in Dane County. Sure, all those things played a role. But there's another reason why Trump supposedly "lost" Wisconsin (and with it perhaps the presidential election). We say supposedly because he says he's challenging it in a recount.

We're talking about the Wisconsin Election Commission's outrageous and arguably unconstitutional decision, on a 3-3 party line vote, with all Democrats voting in favor and all Republicans against, to block the Green Party's candidates Howie Hawkins/Angela Walker from the state's ballot. In a separate decision that had some GOP votes, the Commission also tossed rapper Kanye West from the ballot. We're especially incensed, though, that the Democrats removed the Green Party as a voter choice with the flimsiest of reasons. (The Greens were tossed off the Pennsylvania ballot by Democrats too).

Some people, including the Green Party, tried to raise the alarm before Nov. 3; frankly so did we. We pointed out that the Democrats, so-called champions of diversity, were trying to keep two black candidates (Angela Walker and West) off the Wisconsin ballot.

In a stinging dissent during a court review, conservative state Supreme Court Justice Rebecca Bradley "expressed concern the U.S. Supreme Court might force Wisconsin to redo its election to include Hawkins and Walker," according to Madison.com. Is she right? It's something affected folks should consider. Another conservative justice called it a "kangaroo commission." This is the commission's chair, Ann Jacobs, with guess who:

In 2016, the Green Party's Jill Stein received 31,072 votes in Wisconsin. It arguably cost Hillary Clinton the State of Wisconsin because President Donald Trump won the state with fewer votes than that in 2016 (22,748 votes).

Democrats learned this lesson.

They apparently learned it well.

Wisconsin Clerks May Have Unlawfully Altered Thousands of Absentee Ballots

By Dan O'Donnell

County and municipal clerks and poll workers across Wisconsin may have unlawfully altered witness statements on thousands of mail-in ballots across the state, "The Dan O'Donnell Show" has learned.

Wisconsin Statute 6.86 provides that an absentee ballot must be signed by a witness, who is also required to list his or her address. If a witness address is not listed, then the ballot is considered invalid and must be returned to the voter to have the witness correct.

Instead, multiple sources tell "The Dan O'Donnell Show," municipal clerks and vote counters across the state simply filled out witness signatures themselves. Acting on false and unlawful advice from the Wisconsin Elections Commission (WEC), these clerks may have inadvertently invalidated thousands of absentee votes.

"The statute is very, very clear," said retired Wisconsin Supreme Court Justice Michael Gableman, who worked as a poll watcher in Milwaukee on Election Day. "If an absentee ballot does not have a witness address on it, it's not valid. That ballot is not valid."

The WEC sent uniform instructions to voters with their mail-in ballots that informed them that "your witness must sign and provide their full address (street number, street name, city) in the Certification of Witness section" and warned that "if any of the required information above is missing, your ballot will not be counted."

However, on October 19th, the WEC sent instructions to clerks that they can simply fill in the witness address themselves so that the ballot would not be invalidated.

"Please note that the clerk should attempt to resolve any missing witness address information prior to Election Day if possible, and this can be done through reliable information (personal knowledge, voter registration information, through a phone call with the voter or witness)," WEC wrote. "The witness does not need to appear to add a missing address."

"In defiance of and direct contradiction to the statute, the Wisconsin Elections Commission gave guidance--that is, cover--to all 72 county clerks and turned the statute on his head," Gableman said. "They said, 'Gee, we know the law says an absentee ballot without the witness address is not valid, but county clerk, you have a duty to go ahead and look up on your own the witness' address if there's no address on the absentee ballot."

Anticipating a legal challenge to this seemingly highly unlawful advice, the WEC instructed clerks to write in these witness addresses in red pen so that they would be easy to find during a recount or audit of the vote.

The Republican Party of Wisconsin estimates that thousands of witness addresses may have been changed, thus invalidating the ballots on which they appeared. The statutory remedy for this is to subtract a commensurate number of votes for the candidates for whom those ballots were cast, meaning that vote totals may substantially change.

President Trump's campaign is investigating the scale to which clerks and election workers were altering ballots as well as several other incidents that it has termed "irregularities." President Trump has also publicly called for a recount of Wisconsin's vote.

Former Vice President Joe Biden won the state by roughly 20,000 votes, a margin of less than one percent.

A Quarter-Million Wisconsin Voters Claim To Be "Indefinitely Confined" And Not Bound By Voter ID

The number of indefinitely confined voters has increased over 200% in little more than a year

By MacIverNews

Election officials across Wisconsin have been shocked by the number of voters claiming to be "indefinitely confined" in the run up to the election next month.

Since the Spring General Election in April, another 49,769 voters have registered as indefinitely confined. That's an increase of 26 percent. The total number of indefinitely confined voters in Wisconsin now stands at 243,900. Last year, the total number was only 72,000. That is an increase of 238% in just over a year.

Those voters enjoy a special perk when requesting an absentee ballot – they are exempt for the state's voter ID law.

Starting in May, local clerks bombarded the Wisconsin Elections Commission (WEC) with questions about verifying those voters' claims. How can they make sure those voters aren't just trying to get around the law?

WEC told the clerks they are under no obligation to confirm voters' "indefinitely confined" status. If they want to try, "they should do so using discretion and respect to voters' privacy regarding their medical and disability status," WEC advised in a May 13th memo.

However, even if clerks are able to confirm a voter is not really indefinitely confined, there's really nothing they can do about it.

"All changes to status must be made in writing and by the voter's request," WEC explained.

Since then the number of "indefinitely confined" voters has soared. Every county in the state has seen a significant increase. On the low end, Grant County saw a 10% increase (with 142 individuals) and on the high end, Menominee County had a 1000% increase (60 individuals).

Milwaukee County went from 42,359 to 53,494 – a 29% increase. Dane County went from 19,406 to 24,446 – a 26% increase. Both counties actively encouraged voters to identify as indefinitely confined in the run up to the April election.

Dane County Clerk Scott McDonell even took it upon himself to declare all voters in the county were indefinitely confined. After he did that, the Legislative Reference Bureau quickly explained that anyone falsely claiming to be indefinitely confined is breaking the law.

"If a voter votes absentee knowing that he or she is not confined because of age, illness, infirmity, or disability, he or she could not only face civil and criminal penalties, but also have their vote challenged during the canvass. A court would need to determine whether a voter, in committing this act, relied in good faith on the instructions of a municipal clerk," LRB wrote in a Mar. 26th memo.

The Wisconsin Supreme Court was asked to weighed in on the issue and heard arguments on Sep. 29th. The Republican Party of Wisconsin wanted clarification on who exactly qualifies as an indefinitely confined voter. The court has not yet taken any action on that.

MacIver News reached out to the top five counties with the most new indefinitely confined voters. The county clerks do not keep track of that information and referred MacIver to the individual towns and municipalities.

Milwaukee Elections Head Misplaced Crucial Voting Flash Drive [EXCLUSIVE]

By Jim Piwowarczyk

Police on the scene were pressured to stay silent.

A flash drive that contained crucial absentee voter information in the 2020 presidential election was briefly lost during the early morning hours of Wednesday Nov. 4 as the world waited for Milwaukee to reveal its ballot counts.

Sources within Milwaukee County law enforcement told Wisconsin Right Now exclusively that the executive director of the Milwaukee Election Commission, Claire Woodall-Vogg, realized she had lost the flash drive when she left, with police escort, the Central Count building where ballots were tallied. She was en route to the county courthouse to report "the results of more than 169,000 absentee ballots collected in the City of Milwaukee," the Hill previously reported.

Those results would prove to heavily weight toward Vice President Joe Biden in the critical battleground state. Biden would go on to win the state with the slimmest of margins (20,540 votes), although President Donald Trump's campaign says he will request a recount.

We've met a brick wall of silence and stonewalling in our attempt to get more details about what happened around 3 a.m. when the drive suddenly couldn't be located by Woodall-Vogg, according to our sources.

We reached out to the Milwaukee Police Department Office of Public Relations, and asked Sgt. Efrain Cornejo for comment. Cornejo referred us to the FBI and the Milwaukee County DA's Office for comment. Neither responded with comment.

We reached out to Claire Woodall-Vogg multiple times on Friday for comment, and we were told she was working, however she did not return any phone call or email to explain what happened. In particular, we wanted her to explain if the chain of custody was breached and, if so, for how long? And how she can assure voters that no one else had access to the flash drive during the time period she didn't have possession of it. We also wanted more information about what important information was on it. She did not respond.

UPDATE: Three days after this story first ran, Woodall-Vogg wrote a letter to the Wisconsin Election Commission in which she explained her side of what happened. In the letter, she admitted that, when she got to Milwaukee County with the flash drives, she couldn't find one of them. She says the flash drive was sitting in a tabulator machine, a senior staff member removed the flash drive and turned it over to a Milwaukee police officer who then delivered it to her 10 minutes later. She alleges that the incident did not alter the results of the election and that the District Attorney's office conducted an investigation to establish chain of custody.

Calls and emails for comment were also made to Mayor Tom Barrett's office, and the Milwaukee County Election Commission. There have been no responses at all. Our sources did not want to be named for fear of retaliation, although they are in a position to know the information they imparted; such is the urgency behind the scenes over the matter. One officer reported the incident to a supervisor out of concern, we were told.

According to sources, Woodall-Vogg became panic stricken when she realized she had lost one of the several flash drives. She stressed the importance of the missing drive and indicated it was urgent to find it, the sources said. Woodall-Vogg made phone calls and an unidentified female later handed her the flash drive stating something to the effect of that it was what she needed. The situation has caused a stir within the Police Department and ignited a wall of stonewalling.

Did Dems Rig Election?

Wisconsin returns?

20,535. Do the math. It's fairly obvious that Green Party voters would be more likely to pick Biden if left with that choice or Trump. It's definitely possible that keeping the Greens off the ballot gave Biden the extra votes he needed to defeat the president this time around.

The three state Election Commissioners, all Democrats, who did this included a Milwaukee-area trial lawyer, Mark Thomsen, who donated $2,000 in June to…wait for it – Joe Biden. He's made a career out of suing police departments in use-of-force cases.

"Climate change west coast smoke darkens Milwaukee sunset. Vote. Vote Biden/Harris to save the planet for your children. Please," he wrote recently on Facebook. He posted another photo with Biden/Harris masks.

The second commissioner, Jacobs, also a Milwaukee-area trial lawyer who is a former public defender, gave…wait for it – $1,000 to Joe Biden in September, less than a month after she voted to boot the Greens from the Wisconsin ballot (in April she told the left-wing site Slate.com that holding an in-person primary election during COVID-19 was "an abomination and a stain on our democracy.")

Both are blatant Biden supporters on social media. Jacobs even has a photo with Biden as her cover picture on Facebook. We get this commission has long been packed with partisans on both sides; they're political appointments. The legislature should change that.

In June 2020, according to FEC records, Thomsen donated $1,000 to Biden for President and $1,000 to the Biden Victory Fund in June 2020. He also gave $2,800 to Kamala Harris and $1,000 to the Democratic Party in 2020, among other donations to liberals, federal records show. The same records also record the Jacobs' donation as well as two others she made to Biden for $250 each in 2020.

The Democrats who did this also include Julie M. Glancey, a former County Clerk. They were aided and abetted by liberal state Supreme Court justices – including one who received donations from Thomsen and Jacobs – and who literally refused to consider the merits of what the commission had done.

Interestingly, the major third party that did make it on the Wisconsin ballot was the Libertarian who would presumably draw more from Trump. The Libertarian's vote totals exceeded the margin of supposed victory.

In a party line vote on a complete technicality, Democrats argued the Green Party VP – Angela Walker – used two addresses on her nomination papers. She said she had simply moved – within the same state! To kick the Greens off the ballot on this hyper triviality, the Democrats on the state Election Commission stated that it wasn't proven that Walker had actually moved. Republicans said it was obvious she moved.

It went to the Supreme Court, which, in a 4-3 decision, simply said it was too late in the election process to do anything. The Court did not rule on the merits of the Commission's decision. The justices in that majority? The liberals (including one elected last spring on the back of a massive liberal outside spending advertising binge) and…so-called conservative justice, Brian Hagedorn. The state Supreme Court passed on actually ruling on the MERITS and said putting the Green Party on the ballot at that point would confuse voters. Yeah, right. What a dereliction of duty. If that's the principle, then a commission could bar someone from the ballot for literally any reason as long as there isn't enough "time" to set it right. It's appalling.

WILL to Participate in Wisconsin Supreme Court Oral Argument in Legal Challenge to Gov. Evers's COVID-19 Emergency Declarations

WILL to address unconstitutional delegation of legislative power

The News: The Wisconsin Supreme Court granted the Wisconsin Institute for Law & Liberty (WILL) 10 minutes of oral argument time for the argument in Fabick v. Evers, an original action to the Wisconsin Supreme Court challenging the multiple emergency declarations issued by Governor Tony Evers in response to COVID-19. WILL's participation in oral arguments will specifically address whether the Legislature's grant of authority, in response to Governor Evers's emergency declarations, constitutes an unconstitutional delegation of its core power to legislate.

Oral arguments will occur at 9:45 am on November 16, 2020.

The Quote: WILL President and General Counsel Rick Esenberg said, "The separation of powers holds that one branch of government cannot give away its core powers to another. We are pleased the Court has granted WILL oral argument time to make the case that the Legislature's grant of authority on Governor Evers's emergency declarations constitutes an unconstitutional delegation of power."

Background: Governor Tony Evers has issued three emergency declarations in response to COVID-19 in 2020. But Wisconsin law is clear that without express approval from the state legislature, the governor lacks the legal authority to extend an emergency declaration beyond 60 days. But Governor Evers has done just that. The result is a total breakdown of our constitutional order where the state legislature crafts and passes legislation and the governor signs or vetoes legislation.

In August 2020, WILL filed a lawsuit in Polk County Circuit Court on behalf of three Wisconsin taxpayers challenging Governor Evers's legal authority to issue multiple emergency declarations in response to COVID-19. A motion for a temporary injunction was denied and a motion for summary judgment was before the Court when the Wisconsin Supreme Court took the Fabick original action. The Court stayed the proceedings in Polk County, and invited the Polk County plaintiffs to submit an amicus brief in Fabick.

WILL filed an amicus on November 3, along with a motion for oral argument time to brief the Court on the non-delegation matters in Fabick v. Evers. The Court granted WILL's motion for oral argument time on November 6.

Surplus Property Law Results in Just One Vacant Milwaukee School Sale to Charter School

WILL Policy Brief revisits how state law was thwarted by local actors for the last five years

The News: A new Wisconsin Institute for Law & Liberty (WILL) policy brief reveals how a state law passed in 2015 intended to make vacant Milwaukee schools available to charter and private schools has been thwarted by local actors. Empty Handed: How Milwaukee Thwarted a State Law Meant to Help Schools reveals that just one vacant Milwaukee school was sold to a Milwaukee charter school in the last five years despite the intent of a state law intended to facilitate sales.

The Quote: Director of Education Policy Libby Sobic said, "This is a story of hard lessons. Good intentions were thwarted by a lack of taxpayer accountability at the local level. And a state law intended to help meet the high demand for school facilities has resulted in just one sale to a charter school. The problems haven't gone away and it's time to develop new solutions."

Diving Deeper: In 2015, state lawmakers were fed up with repeated stories from Milwaukee where thriving charter and private schools couldn't purchase vacant Milwaukee school buildings. A Surplus Property Law, supported by Sen. Alberta Darling and then-Rep. Dale Kooyenga, was added to the state budget and a new process was established that required the City of Milwaukee to facilitate the sale of dozens of empty former public school buildings.

But by 2020, just one Milwaukee charter school had purchased a vacant school despite interest by local school leaders. What happened? Director of Education Policy Libby Sobic takes a deep dive into the sordid history of vacant schools in Milwaukee in Empty Handed: How Milwaukee Thwarted a State Law Meant to Help Schools. This important policy brief reveals:

- The implementation of the Surplus Property Law was challenged from the start because Milwaukee Public Schools continuously tried to prevent vacant buildings from being made available for sale.
- Several private schools, like WILL client Right Step, tried to purchase these buildings. They were unsuccessful after the Milwaukee Common Council did everything in their power to prevent the sale.
- Five years later, only three vacant school buildings remain available for purchase.
- The need for facility access for private and public charters is more important than ever, as many schools have waitlists and as parents re-evaluate their school choices during the pandemic.

Economy: The Law of Stewardship

"Moreover thou shalt provide out of all the people able men, such as fear God, men of truth, hating covetousness; and place such over them, to be rulers of thousands, and rulers of hundreds, and rulers of tens:" Exodus 18:21

By Riley J. Hood-Milwaukee County Constitution Party

When confronted with his adulterous behavior; Bill Clinton said, "It's the economy, stupid." Clinton would say that in response to his opponents. The economy is addressed in the Bible. The 8th Commandment reads, "Thou shalt not steal." Exodus 20:15 You can't buy and sell, if people can rob with impunity. The 10th Commandment further states "Thou shalt not covet thy neighbor's wife, thou shalt not covet thy neighbor's house;" "nor anything that is thy neighbor's." Exodus 20:17 The term, "thy neighbor's" means it belongs to your neighbor, not you. That is the basis for property ownership. And for those obstinate souls, who find that the word economy isn't in the Bible, I assure you it is.

Our King James Authorized Translation is a Bible Translation from the Greek language New Testament. When one studies the word "stewardship," it is the Greek word "Oikonomos:" from where we derive our English word economy.

My Webster's II New Riverside University Dictionary reads: Economy, n.pl (O Fr. economie, management of household<Lat. oeconomia<Gk. oikonomos, household manager: oikos, house+ nemein, to manage.)

My Strong's Concordance states: 3623 oikonomos, from 3624 and the base of 3551; a house distributor (i.e. manager,) or overseer, i.e. an employee in that capacity; by extension a fiscal agent (treasurer); fig. a preacher (of the Gospel:) ---chamberlain, governor or steward.

You will note that a standard definition of the word economy can mean either "the law of the household" or "the law of stewardship." "Oikos" or "Oikonomos" occurs 12 times in reference to the words steward, and stewardship in the New Testament. These terms are also translated into the English as "house" and 'householder," about as many times. The term; and the principle of "economy" are in the Bible. Therefore, the Milwaukee County Constitution Party addresses all economic issues from the same Bible-based world-view that we address every area of politics. The Bible, first and foremost, then the US Declaration of Independence, and the US Constitution have much to say regarding economy. We will not substitute a secular/socialist view for a Christian world-view on the matter.

The concluding point of this article is a long overdue repudiation of the "Clinton Doctrine," that morality has nothing to do with the economy, and nothing to do with competence when in office. An immoral leader will steal your money, by raising your taxes. The smart ones do it under color of law, the not so smart ones get caught. The question is, do you want men like Cory Booker, Bernie Sanders, or Joe Biden deciding how much you pay in taxes, or do you want men with self-control; bearing down on government spending in office? We have to live within our means, and it is past time for civil government to do so as well.

Regarding morals, we agree with the Reverend John Witherspoon, a signer of the Declaration of Independence; who said, "That he is the best friend to American liberty, who is most sincere and active in promoting true and un-defiled religion, and who sets himself with the greatest firmness to bear down profanity and immorality of every kind. Whoever is an avowed enemy of God, I scruple not to call him an enemy of his country."

The Constitution Party of Wisconsin, a recognized political party, promotes the Biblical principles referred to in the Declaration of Independence and United States Constitution. We promote these principles by guiding our members into positions of civil authority.

We Call on the Democrat Party to Disband

"For with what judgment ye judge, ye shall be judged: and with what measure ye mete, it shall be measured to again." Matthew 7:2

By Riley J. Hood—Milwaukee County Constitution Party

For my whole life, Thomas Jefferson was considered the major founding father, ostensibly because he was the principle author the US Declaration of Independence. I think liberals asserted his primacy because he was also the founder of the Democrat Party. Technically, Jefferson founded the Democratic-Republican Party, and Andrew Jackson founded the Democrat Party. It was Jackson and the Democrats who deported the Cherokees to Oklahoma, as Elizabeth Warren very well knows, from history books.

Five years ago, socialists started a "cultural revolution:" endeavoring to cleanse America of anything that reminds them of slavery that isn't spoken in black terms. Banning confederate flags and taking down statues of Robert E. Lee. Now Black Lives Matter idiots are out to "eradicate white supremacy" from the face of the earth, according to Black Lives Matter. These millennials are taking down any memorial to any founding father because America is racist. Any statue of a white man anywhere is racist, because in their brainwashed emotions, all white men are racist.

These people are hypocrites. Slavery in America was an evil done away with in 1865. The institution of slavery and segregation that continues to this day is the Democratic Party. That party is so rotten, the Milwaukee County Constitution Party calls upon the Democrat Party to dissolve itself. JOBAMA Biden should admit he is an empty head, and Harris should admit she is an affirmative action malcontent. Biden didn't pick a person for VP: he picked a category. Harris is a gimmick and a token. There isn't much historic about a black woman, VP, seeing as we already had a black man occupy the White House for eight years. The Harris nomination is a first without breaking new ground. We have all seen affirmative action before. If these malcontents were consistent, they would abolish the Democratic Party, and examine their own hypocrisy before they torment normal people.

The Base

"Thou shalt not bear false witness against thy neighbour." Exodus 20:16

By Riley J. Hood—Milwaukee County Constitution Party

According to black racist Detroit AP reporter Corey Williams, "White supremacists accused of intimidating Michigan family." October 29, 2020, CW posted, "Two members of a white supremacist group were arrested Thursday and accused of intimidating a Michigan family, authorities said. Justen Watkins, 25, of Bad Axe, and Alfred Gorman, 35, of Taylor, were charged with gang membership, unlawful posting of a message and using computers to commit a crime, according to Michigan Attorney General Dana Nessel's office."

The headline sounds like the KKK burned on cross on someone's lawn, or they formed a picket line around a polling station. The "charges followed an investigation by Michigan State Police and the FBI into a group called The Base and a December 2019 incident." Someone in Antifa got doxed, and the socialists don't like the taste of their own medicine. According the Michigan GA, the two men posted pictures of the wrong home. A December 2019 post qualifies as an October surprise to discredit an incumbent President?

"Using tactics of intimidation to incite fear and violence constitutes criminal behavior," Nessel said. "We cannot allow dangerous activities to reach their goal of inflicting violence and harm on the public." This AG's comments would be better suited to Antifa or Black Lives Matter, but Dana is an affirmative action malcontent who actively supports Antifa and BLM. After all, Watkins and Gorman were not beating people up, attacking police men, looting stores, lighting cars on fire or blocking traffic.

Gretchen Whitmer is blaming Trump for her self-created conspiracy theory that the Base, the 111%, and the Wolverine Watchmen were trying to kidnapper her. Remember that this scuzzy hussy has a penchant for making things up out of whole cloth. Earlier this year, she called us Nazis for wanting the lockdown to be ended. She has built a career in government on such behavior. Hussy Gretchen said Trump's "failure to condemn white supremacy" in the October 2020 debate with China Joe caused a December 2019 incident.

According to Corey Williams, if you train normal people in the use of firearms you are running "a hate camp that included tactical and firearms training." When street gangs provide their pimps and dope dealers with fire-arms they are guilty of no such thing, neither is BLM or Antifa. The Milwaukee County Constitution Party asserts that the Michigan AG's selective concerns amount to a campaign to disarm white people. Regarding, the Base, I don't know them. I don't officially endorse them. What I do know is the evidence the State has amounts to few idiot posts at best, and is more likely to be communist propaganda made up out of whole cloth. During the 1990's I met some of people from the Michigan Wolverines, they were not Nazi's, they were people like me, concerned over the direction of our nation, and events like Ruby Ridge and Waco smacked of federal tyranny. The Milwaukee County Constitution Party supports your right to defend yourself, and to organize into a well-trained militia unit to defend your community.

Timothy L. Williams and the Liberal Narrative

"A false witness shall not be unpunished, and he that speaketh lies shall perish." Proverbs 19:9

By Riley J. Hood—Milwaukee County Constitution Party

In 1984 a 14yr-old white girl was raped and murdered. According to Yahoo News on 9/16/2020, "The last time Wendy Jerome was seen alive she was leaving her home in Rochester, New York, to deliver a birthday card to a friend who lived nearby. It was around 7 p.m. on Thanksgiving and Wendy, who was 14, had to be home by an 8 p.m. curfew." Wendy's parent's nightmare came true when her body was found in an alcove behind a school on 11/22/1984.

According to www.clickorlando.com, "BREVARD COUNTY, Fla. – Police say a suspect in a 1984 rape and murder of a 14-year-old girl in Rochester was arrested in Florida after a DNA search. Fifty-six-year-old Timothy Williams faces second-degree murder charges in the death of Wendy Jerome." Williams was arrested at his home in Melbourne Florida, based on DNA evidence. After doing more digging, I found William's picture, he is black. For rape and murder Williams is being charged with second degree murder. The Statute of limitations on a rape charge have expired. Why not first-degree murder? This report brings up several issues, the attitude on rape, the attitude on criminal punishment, the reliability of DNA, and media bias.

The attitude on rape. In a Christian view first degree rape is a death penalty offense. (Our laws used to be based on Deuteronomy 22:25-27). Rapists come from every community, but some groups bear down on it. When I grew up, a rapist and a wife-beater were despised as the lowest piece of garbage, and the 1% motorcycle gangs were despised as the heathen they were and still are. Some communities excuse it as machismo. In the black community this behavior was approved of. Such sayings as "I had to tune her up," and "If a woman gets unwound after being raped then she wasn't too tightly wound in the first place." Referring to women

The Muslim Report: Somalia

"The wicked shall be turned into hell, and all the nations that forget God." Psalm 9:17

By Riley J. Hood—Milwaukee County Constitution Party

After a civil war resulted in 50,000 battle deaths, and 300,000 by starvation, the government under Said Barre collapsed. On December 9th, 1992 1,800 Marines went into Mogadishu to secure the UN food distribution, as Islamic groups use food as a weapon. The UN authorized the arrest of Mohamed Farah Aideed, so the Ranger/Delta units and the 160th SOAR. took over. After patterning themselves, the Muslims caught on. October 3rd, 1993 following a bad intelligence tip, the Blackhawk Down fight resulted in 18 dead and 73 wounded US Soldiers. Al Gore desecrated their memory by saying they died in the service of the UN. Muslims dragged their stripped bodies through the streets, as they usually do. Mark Bowen, author of the book Blackhawk Down estimates that 700 Muslims died and over 1,000 were wounded. The Somali government acknowledges 133 dead.

The sight of dead US soldiers being dragged through the streets was a turning point in American intervention in Africa. Within six months, the US had withdrawn its forces from Somalia. The images, of our dead were broadcast around the world and celebrated by Muslims. Gen. Aideed was nowhere to be found. He was murdered by his fellow Muslims in 1996.

In 2006, Al-Shabaab seized control of the nation, for a short period of time, and in spite of a military campaign by the African Union, AS still controls large areas. Al-Shabaab is allied with Al-Qaeda and ISIS. They are establishing a caliphate. The 2012 Provisional Constitution enshrines Islam as the State Religion, and the Quran and Sunna as basic sources which no law may contradict. Christianity is illegal.

In 2016, the Minister of Religious Affairs dismissed the possibility of Somali Christians even existing. In 2017, a breakaway government of "Somaliland" decided to reopen a historical church building, in Hargeisa, to "respect the wishes of the people and their religious leaders." This could very well mean, converting the building into a Mosque.

The state of women in Somalia is horrendous. Many women have hard time shielding their children from their Islamic fathers, after the Muslim divorces his wife. Some women are becoming underground Christians, hoping for something better than the abuse that gets heaped on them, under the color of Islam. Children are expected to attend Mosque, especially the boys, and if they are missing, inquiries are launched.

In 2004, the Somali government banned New Year's Day in Mogadishu because they believed it to be a Christian holiday. In 2015 that ban became nationwide, as New Year's Day could "damage the faith of Muslim Community." Their hatred of Christianity is what drives this, and there are bans on Christmas and Easter.

This year, Al-Shabaab spokesman Ali Dhere called on Muslims to rejoice over COVID-19, as the "small soldier of Allah" is killing non-Muslims. He mocked the Somali government lockdown, which includes Mosques and Madrassas. My criticism of the corona-panic aside, the good news is if something deadly came on the scene, maybe this man and his fellow Muslims would die in unbelief, when they discover the world doesn't revolve around them.

The Milwaukee County Constitution Party's objection to the Somalian Constitution is that it is Islamic. It is based on false sources and a false religion. Patrick Henry said of America, "Our nation wasn't founded on religions, but on the Gospel of Jesus Christ, which is why people of other religions are afforded freedom and asylum here." That asylum is a gift from the American citizens, not a liberal suicide pact to turn our America into an Islamic hell.

The Muslim Report: Mali

"Therefore submit to God. Resist the devil and he will flee from you." James 4:7

By Riley J. Hood—Milwaukee County Constitution Party

Christians make up 3% of Mali's population, and that is 3% too many for the Muslim. In 2012, there was an African Spring in Mali where the Tuaregs, Al-Qaeda in the Islamic Mahgreb, Ansar Al-Dine, the Movement for Unity and Jihad in West Africa and other typical Muslims seized control in Mali's northern region, and the misery began in earnest. After the non-fighting welfare troops of the Mali army were pushed out, the Jihadi groups turned against their fellow Muslims, the Tuaregs, subjecting them and everyone else to Sharia. With aid from the French, other militaries defeated the Jihadi's in 2013, but new groups have emerged, including Jama'ah Nusrat al Islam wal-Muslimin aka JNIM. JNIM was a merger between Ansar Al-Dine and four other Muslim groups. As to the failure of UN peacekeeping, more than 170 UN troops have been killed since 2013, and Jihadis still control large areas of the nation.

On June 10th, 2019 peaceful Muslims exterminated the Christians in the village of Sobame Da in the name of Allah the merciful. That means almost the entire population was exterminated, no one knows whether any one survived.

On May 27th, 2020 Muslims on motorcycles (like Boko Haram) attacked three Christian villages murdering 27 people. Some were reported to have been burned alive. The Church response is to "pray for our brethren that they not be afraid of those who can kill the body, but can't kill the soul." That Bible verse being referenced is true, but is being used as an excuse, while the Church has fun. People trying to kill you does understandably cause fear, flight and panic. It is time to fight these monsters, who are in the same league as Communists and Nazis regarding their penchant for torture and murder. While the first two were atheistic political systems based on Darwinism, Islam is a religion based on the life of a murderer.

The Muslim Report: Uganda

"I am the true vine, and my Father is the husbandman." John 15:1

By Riley J. Hood—Milwaukee County Constitution Party

The land of Uganda has been hit by the worst locust plague in 50 years. Christians are starving and dependent on foreign aid. The year began with severe flooding, and the corona-panic has made a bad situation worse. Uganda suffers from a plague worse than natural disasters. The plague of Islam.

The Muslim Ida Amin Dada declared Uganda to be an Islamic nation. As long as Islam is allowed to exist, Muslims will take that as confessed, and they will exterminate the Christian majority. They will often use violence, but Jihad encompasses more than violence.

Muslims will also use marriage as a weapon. They like to marry Christian women, the sillier the better. First, they say they are Christian, then they identify as Muslim, then they start having Islamic children, then they kidnap the family and move to an Islamic area, the wife beating starts, the polygamy starts, on and on south of heaven. You don't have to take my word, Betty Mahmoudy, liberal that she is, wrote two books about it, "Not without my daughter" and "For the love of a child." Anyway, this is a problem in Uganda. It seems beauty has become a curse to our women because of Islam, and Muslims rather enjoy defiling our women.

One Church held a Women's Conference, educating on mothers on how to look after their daughters. One teaching was, "My daughter and the Muslim influence." Mothers and daughters were warned to not believe the hype, when it comes to romantic advances from Islamic men. One mother said, "Now I know what to do when my daughter has an Islamic boyfriend. I thought we were worshipping the same God. My eyes have been opened."

The Milwaukee County Constitution Party asserts that Muslim men are the mainstay of the enemy, they are sadistic, rapist monsters, their crimes are abetted by Sharia. We further assert that Christian men are going to have to man-up, toughen up and gear up. We don't need any more "Men's movements" that teach men how cry, take orders from their wives and children, and sing silly ditties written by women and homosexuals. My daughter and the Muslim influence should be aimed at Christian men as well.

as "ho's" and "b------" (female dogs) shows an attitude that leads to more rape, not less. A man with the attitude that he is good looking and articulate, and every woman wants him, means can't take "no" for answer.

Regarding the attitude on criminal punishment, the fact that Williams is black means the black community, and their liberal allies will try to say he is being falsely accused by a racist. If found guilty, he will probably not serve a life sentence, much less receive the death penalty. If he were white, he would be guilty before the trial began, and would face the death penalty. After all SCOTUS in the 1972 Jackson v Georgia case only vacated the death penalty for rape on the basis of racism. Most people will probably think Williams is cuddly tear, who isn't responsible for his actions.

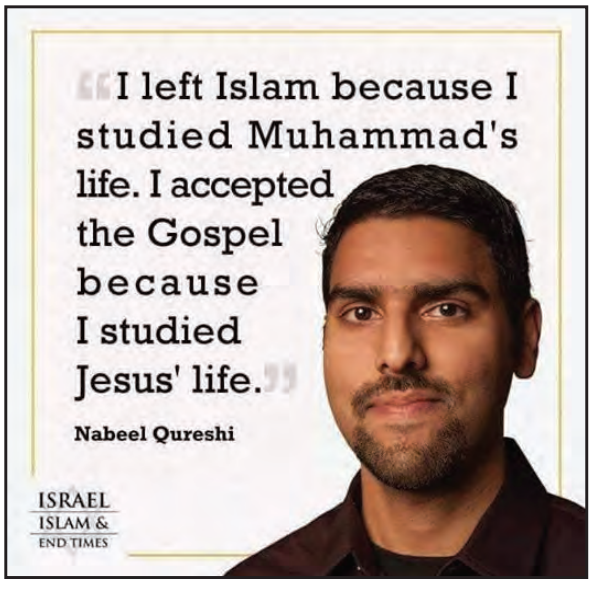
Regarding DNA, I do not think it is fool proof, some DNA testing comes back as inconclusive, because alleles break down over time. Nevertheless, if Williams was living in Rochester in 1984 and the DNA is his match, the prosecution has a case.

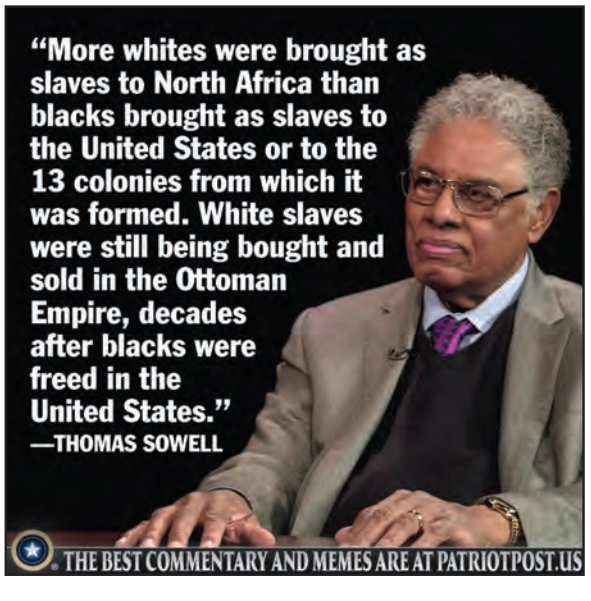
The media bias on this case fits the active pattern. Wendy Jerome's picture was of a white girl, but no reporter mentioned she was white, in print. There was no picture of Williams, nor was it reported that Williams is black, as if the facts are racist. I suspected Williams was not white, because if he was the national news including Fox News would have told me so. William's picture would be plastered all the web. When a post refuses to give details about a suspect, I know to dig further. That is the media's active pattern in promoting the liberal narrative. I am quite certain, there are cry babies who can't believe I wrote this, but I am holding everybody to the same standard. The media is not.

On www.clickorlando,com, some weenie tried to blame shift over to President Trump, which is all the "Me Too" movement is about. After all, black rapists are not who they are after, they hate white men, and they hate Trump mostly. "Troubled575 DAYS AGO Reply to Dee-This is why trump is fighting to suppress the demand of his DNA in the Jean Carroll rape case ...actually it's the defamation case, (defamation of character after he lashed out when she came forward) but still...who would want to hold back evidence that could exonerate oneself, particularly in a murder an old rape charge?" (Troulde57 can't write.)

A reply was posted, "JudgesGavel 4 DAYS AGO Reply to Troubled57 - Trump denies this vehemently & sued her for defamation. There's a bigger picture here though – it's not about exoneration or guilt at this point. Taking DNA from a world leader exposes them certain types of [asasination. sic] Once your DNA is taken...it can be distributed in databases & science labs globally. A single drop of saliva, semen, or hair can be divided 100 ways. Its espionage/black ops & the Secret Service instructed the Justice Dept to block it. NO world leader would dare give his/her DNA out. You can call this BS & say it doesn't matter, but it's much bigger than an accusation from 36 years ago. Obama or Biden wouldn't do it either - it would also be blocked. Lefty Marxists hate science & math...so this explanation will likely go through their head like a whiff of air, causing their Trump Derangement Syndrome to spike." After that the comments descended into threats against "JudgesGavel" for confronting Marxists etc. The reality is, that a story about a rape and murder in 1984 was turned into anti-Trump propaganda, post by what a friend of mine calls "adult pupae millennials" with the acceptance of the website editor. That is media bias in the extreme.

If you want to live in a Republic, where your God-given Rights are secure, where the presumption of guilt or innocence is not based on media bias, but on the law and the facts, the Milwaukee County Constitution Party would like to hear from you. If you are tired of criminals and their liberal allies, why not start working as team to confront them? Finally, we hope you never have to face what the Jerome family did.





A Prayer for the United States

By Brian Fraley

Wow, somebody is going to be shocked when this is all over.

Whether this is a close election or a blow out, a good quarter of the American people are going to be shocked. I just hope the shock doesn't lead to anger that fuels violent destruction.

If you're a die-hard supporter of President Trump, you see the huge rallies, the boat parades, the traffic jams, the social media dominance and you just know your guy is going to shock the world again. You believe the Red Wave is going to prove the political class wrong for the second time in as many national elections. The swamp (and their media allies) will be embarrassed. And you just can't wait.

If you believe the polls and feel in your bones that America is poised to reject the President, you just know that former Vice President Biden is on the cusp of a change election. Despite being hampered by restrictions due to the current public health crisis, you've seen him learn from the mistakes of 2016. He's put together strong organizations throughout the upper Midwest. He's rebuilt the Blue Wall. The money advantage is significant and you know he's going to win. And you just can't wait.

One of these two groups, which each number in the tens of millions of my fellow Americans, is going to be shocked.

As someone who has run a lot of campaigns, I've won and lost my share of shocking races. But clearly the stakes here are bigger, and so is the post-election danger.

While there are tens of millions of people who will be shocked when the dust settles on the 2020 presidential race, there is a much smaller sliver of radicals who will be hell-bent on violent chaos. Their actions must be prevented if possible and thoroughly rebuked and prosecuted if not.

Radicals on the far-left and far right have already threatened violence. Some self-styled militias believe any result that does not end with the reelection of the President is tantamount to a coup that must be resisted. Anarchists on the left believe anything short of a repudiation of the President will be a sign that the system is rigged and therefore must be burned down.

From violent riots across America this year, to the thwarted plot to abduct and 'try' the Governor of Michigan, it is clear that no matter how small, these movements have the wherewithal to act. They should not be taken lightly. I worry the election results could give these sewers of hate some fertile fields.

There is ample evidence that these tiny, violent, voices are amplified on social media and elsewhere by foreign governments who don't really care who wins, they just want to foment chaos here. A distracted and divided America leads to destabilization in the world and opportunity for others to profit.

Whether the results are decisive or narrow, many millions of Americans are going to be shocked.

Thanks to Maine and Nebraska's foolhardy tinkering with their electoral votes, it is even possible that the end result is a 269-269 tie in the Electoral College. But please note that such an outcome would not create a Constitutional crisis. Despite what some pundits may say if that were to arise, it would just prompt a Constitutional process for the state congressional delegations to participate in the selection process. That's not an unforeseen crisis. In fact it was spelled out by the Founding Fathers in Article Two, Section 1, Clause 3 of the Constitution. And it would not be unprecedented, there having been three such contingent elections in the 19th Century. It would be extraordinary, but it would not be a crisis, nor an excuse for chaos.

We have been a politically-divided nation for a couple of decades. But the friction does not need to lead to a fissure.

I echo the thoughts of John. F. Kennedy. Eight years before I was born, and four months before he was elected President, he said, "I think the American people expect more from us than cries of indignation and attack. The times are too grave, the challenge too urgent, and the stakes too high to permit the customary passions of political debate. We are not here to curse the darkness, but to light the candle that can guide us through that darkness to a safe and sane future."

If such a sentiment may have been true sixty years ago, it most certainly is true today.

No matter what happens on Tuesday night, or whenever the final votes are tallied, all of us still have a responsibility to our families, our neighbors, our community to not merely curse the darkness wherever we may see it, but to be a beacon of hope for a better way.

Our words matter. Our actions matter.

It is my fervent prayer that, regardless of the final Electoral College vote, we shun those who advocate hate, who rage, who loot, who destroy and who thrive on chaos.

Every election is the most important of our lifetime. But this year, the several months AFTER the election may be the most important period of American History since the mid 1800s.

It is not a partisan statement to say: May God Bless America.

A Nation Counting on Integrity

By Tony Perkins

When Americans woke up this morning (if they actually went to bed), not much had changed. We still didn't have the answer to the one question everyone is waiting for -- and maybe we won't for some time. But we still had answers -- and not many the Left will like. Because even though we can't announce the next president, we can declare a few losers, and the people who counted out conservatives should top every list.

Tuesday night was not the epic collapse of Donald Trump and the Republican Party that the media had been dreaming about. It was, however, the last gasp of credibility for the national polling industry. Anyone who gave the big firms a pass after the embarrassment of 2016 will not make that mistake after this year, when the fairytale prophecies of 17-point leads for Joe Biden in competitive states like Wisconsin turned out to be more fools' gold. Even the morning of the race, when some survey houses were starting to flip states to Trump, the New York Times stubbornly insisted -- with 70 percent certainty -- that Biden would win Florida. Other mainstream pollsters conjured ridiculous numbers for Senate Democrats, giving the GOP only between a five to 20-percent chance of maintaining control. Wednesday morning, with five seats in play, Republicans were leading in every one.

Whatever their reasons -- whether they didn't want to validate Trump's popularity, or they wanted to suppress the vote, or they're so blinded by their hatred for this president that they can't count straight -- the polling industry had a major reckoning Tuesday. And their survival will depend a lot on whether they can set aside their blatantly partisan agendas and adapt, like Trafalgar has, to the rapidly changing landscape. Americans don't trust the media, Tucker Carlson said emphatically, and they have good reason: they were wrong. "Is the polling industry dead? You know, I really hope so. [You have to be able to say] you screwed up, and you have to acknowledge it in order to get better. But we in the media are particularly good at pretending that there's some reason that we mislead our viewers or our readers -- and we really should stop doing that because too much is at stake. And the first way to fix it is by holding the people who screwed up accountable."

Obviously, there's a great deal to be concerned about as we head into this election overtime -- but one thing that shouldn't worry anyone is the media's framing of the outcome. If they were wrong before, why trust them now? In the meantime, there's a lot for the conservative movement to cheer. Republicans -- despite Big Tech's censorship, fake news's bias, and the polling industry's epic failure -- made history in ways no one expected. Not only was Tuesday not the "blue wave," we kept hearing it would be, but the GOP made incredible inroads in communities that Democrats have taken for granted for years. In astounding ways, the Republican Party platform resonated across ethnic and racial lines with numbers conservatives haven't seen in a half-century. Not since 1960 has a Republican president won such a huge slice of the non-white vote.

"Whether Trump wins or loses, he proved that Republicans -- including a Republican who is staunchly opposed to illegal immigration -- can win a big chunk of the Latino vote." Not only did he outperform expectations in Florida, but Obama's vice president lost ground among Hispanics in states like Georgia and Ohio. "News flash, Democrats," NRO's Jim Geraghty writes, "Bernie Sanders's open embrace of the label 'socialism' is killing you among these demographics!" The last thing Cuban-Americans and other Hispanics want is to watch this country become the kind of dictatorship they fled. They also have a natural alliance with conservatives on key social issues, which only makes the political transition for Latinos that much easier. Donald Trump may have single-handedly changed the diversity of the party, and the Left's hand-wringing proves it.

Politico put it the most bluntly. "Tuesday was an abject disaster for Democrats in Washington," the outlet warned. "To imagine the amount of soul searching and explaining the party will have to do after Tuesday is absolutely dizzying. The infighting will be bloody -- as it should be. We fielded text after text from Hill Democrats Tuesday night and early Wednesday morning with existential questions about their leadership and the direction of their party."

That's not to say that conservatives -- especially the church -- couldn't stand some long hard looks in the mirror. The fact that this election is so close, after all that President Trump has accomplished for life, faith, family, and freedom, ought to be a wake-up call for believers everywhere. When you consider the extremism that Joe Biden represents, it should be deeply troubling that he's within striking distance of the White House. We have major work to do in the church if our nation is this divided over a radical agenda that should be a non-starter for any patriotic, God-fearing American.

Meanwhile, as the counting continues, so must our prayers. As every map and ballot extension tells us, this race is far from over. And while we do see a path forward for the president, so much depends on the integrity and honesty of the process. Later tonight, at 8:00 p.m. (ET) on PrayVoteStand.org, I'll be hosting a special time of prayer was we seek God's mercy and guidance. Join me as we pray for transparency, for vigilance and caution on the part of election officials, for corruption to be exposed, and for peace to reign throughout our great nation.

The Gaslight Election

Dominated by a fraudulent reality created by a Leftist media and academia echo chamber

By Scot Faulkner

2020 is the single most important election since 1860.

This is not hyperbole. The future of America's representative democracy is at stake.

The Left plans to change fundamental policies that will cripple earnings and economic vitality. More ominous, the Left is planning to change the rules that have governed America since 1789. Their sole purpose is to achieve permanent all-pervasive power.

More frightening is that these threats are being successfully hidden from the electorate – thanks in large part to "legacy" media, social media, academia, and the Deep State. They have collaborated nonstop for years to advance liberal-progressive-socialist agendas, protect their favored candidates, and censor, cancel, shame and intimidate moderates and conservatives into silence, meekness and irrelevance.

America's news media took a sharp left turn in the 1960s. During the 21st Century, what is now considered the "Mainstream Media" (MSM) dropped all pretense of being professional journalism. They are now overtly the Left's propaganda arm.

"News anchors" and talk show "moderators" are no longer selected from working reporters, but from career political operatives. The result is an echo chamber of anti-Americanism, and now anti-Trumpism.

This Leftist echo chamber dominates over 95% of television, radio, print and digital "news." Except for a handful of conservative radio personalities, Fox Cable News shows, and conservative blogs, the Left's echo chamber shapes an alternate reality that almost totally controls political, historical, cultural and scientific discourse – and permits virtually no deviation or dissent from their reality and

Men of Christ 2019

A Prayer for Our Country

O Most Blessed Virgin Mary, Mother of Mercy, at this most critical time, we entrust the United States of America to your loving care.

Most Holy Mother, we beg you to reclaim this land for the glory of your Son. Overwhelmed with the burden of the sins of our nation, we cry to you from the depths of our hearts and seek refuge in your motherly protection.

Look down with mercy upon us and touch the hearts of our people. Open our minds to the great worth of human life and to the responsibilities that accompany human freedom.

Free us from the falsehoods that lead to the evil of abortion and threaten the sanctity of family life. Grant our country the wisdom to proclaim that God's law is the foundation on which this nation was founded, and that He alone is the True Source of our cherished rights to life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness.

O Merciful Mother, give us the courage to reject the culture of death and the strength to build a new Culture of Life. Amen.

The Fight is Now

A Statement from The American Mind.

From AmericanMind.org

Joe Biden and Kamala Harris, breaking every rule that Democrats have screamed for months that President Trump was going to break, have all but declared themselves the winners of the 2020 election before the votes are counted.

But the 2020 election is not over. The fight has just begun. This is the moment that decides everything. Everything is now at stake. Republicans must rise to the occasion. This means rallies and protests as well as investigating and ensuring that this election was lawful.

Bring Out the Lawyers

The results last night revealed conclusively that our supposed experts lied to the nation throughout 2020's election season with deceptive polls, statistics, and percentages about Trump's chances. This is no surprise—we already know our ruling class has lied non-stop to the American people about President Trump for four years.

Now we are asked to simply trust corrupt Democratic political machines in one-party cities to count the vote honestly. We will not. Instead, Republicans must aggressively investigate and prosecute any and all wrongdoing in the attempt to steal this election.

The reason the Democratic Party just broke all the norms related to voting in America is because they are trying to fend off a loss. They hastily changed the rules midstream by means of hundreds of lawsuits, using COVID as an excuse, and a stream of stories of troubling irregularities is now flowing out of the remaining disputed states. The question upon which everything now depends is whether or not Republicans are willing to stop them.

The American people, no less than the Republican Party and their lawyers, must demand transparency and accountability about what happened last night and what is now happening over the course of the ongoing count. As Michael Anton points out in his latest salvo, "Game-on for the Coup?" waiting until the end to pad the count with votes from urban areas is one of the oldest tricks in the American political playbook, and it has worked before. Is it happening now? Headlines like "Five Milwaukee wards report 89% turnout in 2020 presidential vote; Biden nets 146K votes in city" do not inspire confidence, and the same goes for the news now coming out of Democratic bastions like Detroit and Philadelphia.

We have known that the likely outcome of the election would be disputed vote counts in a select number of states for some time. As we've pointed out, Democrats have effectively said, over and over: "Our lawsuits to change the way we've always voted in the middle of a tumultuous election season are not part of a partisan cheat. Oh, but one more thing: America needs to understand that while it might very well look like Trump won on election night, due to our new rules votes will be counted for some time afterward and then our candidate will probably win."

If Republicans let this happen without pushing to ensure all applicable laws were and are now being followed they can forget about winning contested states and therefore national elections. The new rule, the new "norm" for the Democrats, will forever be what they did last night: "If an election is close we stop all the counting for a while until we can figure out what's going on." But Republicans do not have to let it happen.

The Republican Party at the state, national, and regional level and their lawyers need to demand explanation and investigation of every vote in every disputed state NOW. Swarms of lawyers must push for transparency in all the Democratic city machines now churning out votes for Biden. Lawsuits must be filed and recounts demanded. The FBI and other relevant law enforcement authorities should scrutinize every aspect of the process and offer rewards for reporting wrongdoing.

President Trump understands this. True, many a "moderate" Republican does not and would gladly roll over to the Left. But in 2020, the Republican base also understands both the stakes and the attempt to steal the election that is now well underway. This is why President Trump and his best surrogates must rally and lead them.

Bring Out the People

Now we are expected to sit quietly while the vote is counted. We will not. Instead, the President and his supporters must publicly rally and protest what any reasonable person would judge looks illegitimate.

First, President Trump should plan several more rallies. Huge ones. His supporters will show up to tell the Democrats that they will not sit back and allow them to cheat their way to victory. For months the radical Left has shown up in the streets to threaten the rest of America. They plan more protests if the election does not go their way. The Right must now make a show of support that says: enough.

Second, President Trump's team should ensure that their best surrogates and the remaining media figures not trying to attack and censor them have the specific data and arguments they need to make the public case: explain what happened last night and how the Democratic Party's rule changes allow them to tamper with the election, and what the stakes are if they are allowed to get away with it.

Third, no one—including the President himself—should stop communicating as the media begins to censor news and views it doesn't like. We need a full court press to catalogue and communicate the many ways in which suspicious activity has and is now taking place in disputed regions of the country. If one channel is closed to us because of censorship, we must work together to circumvent it.

Finally, all weak sisters on the right must be called out. In military doctrine, psychological operations only work on a populace that is already experiencing a defeat. They backfire when conducted against resilient and confident foes. The media and the left right now are trying to defeat and demoralize half the country under the guise of "democracy" and disingenuous cries of "just count the votes!" After the last six months, the last thirty years, the last damned century—conservatives and Republicans who lack steely resolve need to be called out and cast aside for those who will fight!

There is no time to lose. We have already detailed what the Democrats want to happen next. The playbook is already written, but it is not yet fully executed. It can be stopped if Republicans act together—now—to stop it.

cl. 1, gives state legislatures the power over the times, methods, and procedures of elections and provides no "public health emergency" exception that enables governors or judges to override them and create a new system for elections. At its core, this is why we have such post-election chaos, and it was by design – set in motion for years by the courts and crystalized over the past few months by using COVID-19 to remake the in-person voting electorate into a postal ballot free-for-all, in what Justice Gorsuch described as the greatest judicial intervention in elections in 230 years.

Well, now state legislatures can have their revenge and have the final say, as intended by the Constitution. Mark Levin reminded his audience today that state legislatures are the ones who choose the electors who directly vote for president in each state.

In case you think this is some desperate tactic Levin has concocted because he doesn't like the impending results of the state ballot tallies, he has been warning about this for months. While everyone slept as the courts rewrote election law, Levin, a constitutional lawyer, warned on Sept. 18, "As in Pennsylvania, the Michigan legislature is controlled by the Republicans. They must meet in emergency session and exercise their Article II power under the federal Constitution and seize back control over the election system."

In the run-up to the election, courts have allowed "late voting, namely submission of ballots after Election Day so long as they are postmarked before. In addition, a Michigan court allowed ballot-harvesting under certain circumstances, which appears to have occurred late at night in Wayne County. There has been a series of rulings or administrative decisions in numerous states, which are contrary to state law and in some cases federal election law, that enabled Democrats to upend the electoral process – putting aside questions of additional fraud in the early morning of Nov. 4.

Liberals say they want every vote to count, but having votes submitted by insidious special-interest groups that violate the terms and conditions of absentee balloting ensures that the lawfully cast votes of individuals indeed do not count. We can debate the policy merits of some of these anomalous voting procedures, but everyone agrees that state legislatures control the process. In many blue states, they have already codified Democrat priorities on ballot-harvesting, registration deadlines (or lack thereof), and weak voter verification systems. But in states like Michigan, Wisconsin, and Pennsylvania, there were laws on the books that were illegally ignored by the Democrat governors and the courts.

In his 2005 book "Men in Black," Levin noted that the reason the Supreme Court ruling on the Florida recount in 2000 was final was not because the courts are supreme over the electoral process. Quite the contrary, the Supreme Court was merely rectifying a mistake the state court made, because Democrats were the ones who involved the courts in the election process to begin with. But why did Al Gore ultimately accept the decision in Bush v. Gore?

"The Florida legislature could have (and, in fact, was preparing) to intervene and name a slate of electors if the Florida Supreme Court continued to interfere with the election," wrote Levin on page 170. "The legislature, which was controlled by the Republican Party in 2000, had absolute authority under the Constitution to choose Florida's members of the electoral college."

Art. II, Sec. 1, §2 of the Constitution stipulates that "Each State shall appoint, in such Manner as the Legislature thereof may direct" the electors to vote for president. The Constitution gives Congress the authority to set the date of that vote, which, pursuant to 3 U.S.C. §7, is the Monday after the second Wednesday in December of presidential election years. This year it is Dec. 14.

Notice how the Constitution specifically gives the job of choosing electors to the legislature, and unlike with standard legislation, there is no shared jurisdiction or responsibility with the governor, much less some random state or federal judge. Charles Pinckney, one of the signers of the Constitution from South Carolina, reiterated on the Senate floor on Jan. 23, 1800, how careful the framers were to cut Congress out of the process.

"The Electors are to be appointed by each State, and the whole direction as to the manner of their appointment is given to the State Legislatures," said Pinckney during a Senate debate. "Nothing was more clear … that Congress had no right to meddle with it at all; as the whole was entrusted to the State Legislatures, they must make provision for all questions arising on the occasion."

Technically, this means that state legislatures could even appoint electors and completely avoid or cancel out popular election ballots we have today, at least for the president and vice president. This was the practice in some states in the early days of the republic. As Justice Joseph Story wrote in his 1833 "Commentaries on the Constitution," state legislatures choosing the electors themselves "has been firmly established in practice, ever since the adoption of the constitution, and does not now seem to admit of controversy, even if a suitable tribunal existed to adjudicate upon it."

Indeed, in 1892 (McPherson v. Blacker), in upholding Michigan's practice of dividing the state's electors by congressional district (as done today in Maine and Nebraska), the Supreme Court wrote, "The legislature possesses plenary authority to direct the manner of appointment, and might itself exercise the appointing power by joint ballot or concurrence of the two houses, or according to such mode as it designated." In Bush v. Gore, the high court reiterated that any state legislature "may, if it so chooses, select the electors itself."

Obviously, none of us wants to abolish popular elections, but why would the Constitution even grant state legislatures such power? Well, the framers understood that, unlike Congress, these are the bodies that are closest and most accountable to the people, and unlike judges or executives (state or federal), they are numerous in a deliberative body and won't wield unilateral authority without some degree of consensus.

By overriding the legislatures in how to properly conduct the popular elections that choose these presidential electors, the courts and governors have disenfranchised their voters. A Michigan court extended Election Day for two weeks. A Pennsylvania court, along with the Democrat secretary of state, essentially nullified signature verification for mail-in ballots.

Thus, if there is ample evidence of voter fraud that would be sufficient to alter the will of the people through this popular election, it is incumbent upon the state legislatures in those states to reclaim their authority over the Electoral College and rectify the fraud that has upended our election process.

Their worldview, talking points and intolerance have even taken over our sports, entertainment, religious institutions and K-12 education. There is virtually no relief, no sanctuary anymore from their anger, political ideologies, or quest to rule every aspect of our country and lives.

This dominant echo chamber may well propel the Democrats into the White House and a Senate majority, while retaining their House majority.

The classic 1944 movie "Gaslight" is about a diabolical villain who creates an alternative reality to drive his victim insane, to steal her riches. The term "gaslighting" is based on this process of creating a fraudulent reality so that the victims make wrong decisions, to their detriment.

That is what 2020 is about. It is the Gaslight Election.

Since the Summer of 2016, the Left's echo chamber has created a narrative, fueled by the bogus Steele Dossier, that Russian leaders are puppeteers controlling Trump and his inner circle. Wild assertions went (and still go) unchallenged. A fake whistle blower, coached by Congressional Democrats and shaped by secretly backdated regulations, launched a reckless impeachment.

While the entire scheme of lashing Trump to Russia, and then Ukraine, was exposed as a fraud, the Left's echo chamber barely reports this fraud or how it was accomplished. In fact, most of the echo chamber reprises Russia, unchallenged, whenever it can.

Tragically, Judicial Watch has had to sue even Trump agencies to force their release of exculpatory information. Career bureaucrats have successfully delayed these facts from entering the public domain.

At the same time, former Vice President Biden is on video bragging about doing exactly what was the basis of Trump's impeachment, to laughter and applause by the Washington, DC elite. Efforts to hold Biden accountable have been thwarted by FBI and intelligence officials for years.

The Left's echo chamber remains silent – just as it is about the shocking revelations of Biden Family questionable to even criminal collusion with Chinese, Russian, Ukrainian other foreign organizations, as exposed in great detail in emails from Hunter Biden's and his associates' computers.

It is just as important to not report something.

House Republicans Make Demand AG Barr Investigate

By Sons of 1776

If you were to believe the mainstream media, you'd think the 2020 election has already been decided. But nobody watching what happened last week believes this was a fair and legal process. Numerous states dragged on ballot counting and reports of possible fraud and interference were too many to count.

A few fair-weathered Republicans are already throwing in the hat. They congratulated Joe Biden and Kamala Harris for winning an election by doing absolutely no campaigning. These RINO seem to think everything that went on in Pennsylvania, Michigan, Wisconsin, Arizona, and Nevada was totally above board. Sure, and ISIS wants world peace.

President Trump has vowed to fight the fraud and will be taking his case to the Supreme Court. Notable Republicans have joined the fight. Despite what the media says, this battle might be played out for days or weeks to come. And it looks like Trump is getting more support from the party than the left was hoping.

More than three dozen House Republicans, including House Freedom Caucus Chairman Andy Biggs (R-AZ), penned a letter Friday to Attorney General William Barr asking him what he is doing to ensure the integrity of the 2020 presidential election amid allegations of irregularities.

"While each state runs its own election process, the United States Department of Justice is ultimately responsible for the integrity of federal elections. The American people must have the utmost confidence that the outcome of the presidential election is legitimate,"the letter said"

The lawmakers said it was time for Barr to use the resources of the Justice Department to make sure the election and vote counting process is conducted in a manner that is fully consistent with state and federal law. [Source:†Breitbart]

Throughout Election Day and the days that followed, reports came in all over the country of suspicious behavior at polling locations and ballot counting houses. Republican observers were not allowed to watch the counting process in PA and other places. We've all seen the video of election workers boarding up windows so people couldn't see what was going on.

But we're supposed to believe this was a legitimate process?

Remember when Hillary Clinton lost fair and square? She claimed there was election interference despite a lack of evidence. The media backed her and the government launched a 3+ year investigation to get to the bottom of it.

Yet today, we're just supposed to let a man with dementia take over the country because the media says so?

Republicans from all states and offices must back the president and demand investigations. This election is not over until we get to the bottom of this scandal. More than a few state election officials have been accused of fraud or irregularities. If our democracy is to survive, this needs to be dealt with.

Perhaps it will take the full power of the DOJ to right these many wrongs.

Gaslight Election

The Lefts' echo chamber also set the ultimate trap for Trump's re-election. COVID-19 remains Trump's Achilles' heel because scary and highly inaccurate models generated by the Imperial College on March 16, 2020 forced America's economic near-suicide. The Left's echo chamber demanded that Trump shut down his booming economy, supposedly to prevent millions of deaths.

The model turned out to be fundamentally flawed. Now the Left's echo chamber blames Trump for this year's economic downturn, while ignoring the devastating medical, psychological and other effects of the lockdowns. Leftist Governors use their independence under Federalism to enforce draconian measures that are not based on current science. This slows the economic recovery through Election Day.

Biden, Harris and their media allies wear masks every time they are on camera. They wear masks when they are outdoors and over thirty feet from others. No science or health organization recommends this. But it serves as a symbol for COVID-19 remaining a "dire threat," with Trump to blame. The Left's echo chamber makes no effort to question this shameless propaganda ploy. Instead, it promotes it and will continue to do so until just after the election (if Biden wins).

The Left creates visual equivalency by providing only tight shots of Biden and Harris at their podiums, ignoring the fact that fewer than ten people are in the audience. Trump's 20,000+ rallies are either not covered at all or show only tight podium shots, making his huge crowds appear as small as Biden's.

Biden's countless lies about his attending Black churches and colleges, his groundless assertions, and his fiction about awarding medals, remain unchallenged. His radical agenda for the Green New Deal, tax increases, medical and medical insurance takeovers, and aggressive gun control goes unreported. Meanwhile, debunked accusations, like Trump hating the armed forces, dominate news cycles.

The Left over-samples registered Democrats, sometimes over 50% to only 38% or less for Republicans, to generate polls showing Biden trouncing Trump.

The Left's Gaslight Election may succeed because over 60 million have early-voted, just as facts about the Biden family's foreign influence peddling slowly seep out. Some early voters have already voiced "buyer's remorse" of having voted before they knew about the Biden family's corruption. Congressional Republicans' glacial investigative pace enables the Left's reality.

A Democrat sweep in November will be tragic for everyone except liberal elites. Trump's tax cuts will be erased, and new taxes added. Four years of regulatory relief will evaporate. All of Trump's government reform Executive Orders will be voided within hours of Biden's inauguration.

Gun control will rapidly expand. The 1619 anti-American indoctrination curriculum will be forced into every classroom. Illegal aliens will be granted wholesale amnesty and added to the voter rolls. American energy independence will vanish, and Americans will suffer from the absurd policies that have made California the land of pricey energy and rolling blackouts. Hollywood and sports celebrities will roar back into prominence, virtue signaling Americans about race relations and carbon footprints.

Even worse, all investigations of Biden, Obama, Clinton and the Deep State will end within hours of a Biden/Democrat victory, extinguishing any hope that truth and justice will prevail. America and the world must hope and pray that this Leftist echo chamber fails despite its size and power.

Out of Africa

young Africans is "connected to the world and out there doing incredibly innovative things with nothing. They are not just optimistic about the much-vaunted African century, they are determined to shape that century."

We also quoted economist C. K. Prahalad, who in his game-changing book, The Fortune at the Bottom of the Pyramid, had argued: "We must stop thinking of the poor as victims or as a burden, and start recognizing them as resilient and creative entrepreneurs and value-conscious consumers [who] … may well be able to transform their societies and economies dramatically in a very short time frame."

"In the context of Africa, where we have had to leapfrog other technologies," Ichikowitz explained in our interview, "the Internet is a more important tool than the wheel. Think about how far behind Africa was 15 to 20 years ago – and how quickly Africa has caught up."

Today's young Africans, the survey shows, are optimistic, committed to human rights, eager to start businesses and determined to compete successfully in the developed world. Their entire continent cries out for electrification, transportation systems and other technologies for which financing has been scarce and wrapped with strings.

Three-fourths of African youth believe in a common African identify based largely on culture and shared history, the survey found. Five of eight believe African nations should set aside differences and come together to achieve common solutions. Seven of eight remain inspired by the life and teachings of the late South African leader Nelson Mandela.

The survey also found that, while African youth are divided on whether democracy or stability is more important for the continent, most believe in the democratic values of participation, tolerance and freedom. Historically, African tribes allowed open discussion of matters of mutual importance (democracy), as well as firm, final decisions by tribal chiefs (stability). That may be why today's generation is equally divided between a desire for democracy versus stability in government. Of course, both are important.

The appeal of results-oriented leadership, Ichikowitz suggests, may explain why African youths believe President Trump (at 22%) has the greatest ability to influence their future. Tech entrepreneurs Mark Zuckerberg and Bill Gates finished behind Trump, with Chinese President Xi Jinping a distant fourth. No current African leader received more than a 5% share.

So whoever wins the presidential election should recognize that sub-Saharan Africa's more than one billion people represent markets for American goods, Ichikowitz said. Positive outreach to Africa would also provide opportunities to bring African and African-American entrepreneurs together, given their common history of oppression. That would be true win-win-win.

"Operation Scorecard"

McInerney. As I wrote several days ago:

Dave Janda of Operation Freedom (www.DaveJanda.com) has unleashed a bombshell story with huge implications for Tuesday's elections. Janda's guest in his latest broadcast is a former high-level intelligence official (Lt. Gen. Tom McInerney) who warns that the Dems and the CIA have put in place a mechanism which can alter the voting results of electronic voting machines in key swing states (like Pennsylvania) that will determine the outcome of the election.

This covert technology is called Operation Scorecard, and it was built by the CIA to surreptitiously steal elections in targeted countries. Now, that technology is being turned against the United States of America and is about to be activated on Tuesday to steal the election for Biden, explains Janda's guest.

YouTube banned the interview, but others uploaded it to Brighteon.com, so you can watch it here:

Brighteon.com/37f33814-f323-4c7a-9f19-90588161b4fd

As we reported earlier, the Dominion software intercepts voting machines and alters votes to make sure Joe Biden always has roughly a 3% victory margin, no matter what the original votes.

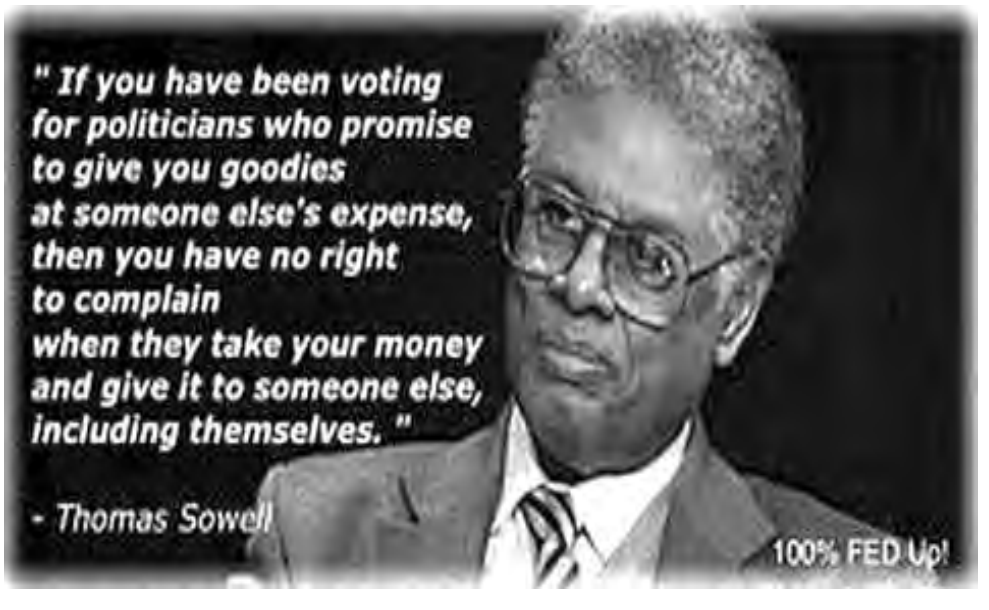
In the real world of legitimate votes, Trump achieved such an overwhelming victory in swing states like Michigan that the Dominion software had to switch hundreds of thousands of votes to give Biden the "win." This massive fraud left a trail of evidence so large that people began to notice. Manual recounts of selected ballots revealed the "glitch" had switch votes exclusively away from Trump in in favor of Joe Biden. (Isn't it amazing how every "glitch" somehow always favors Biden?)

Now, the evidence is irrefutable. They've been caught red-handed. Dems and the deep state stole the election, and the evidence is now in plain sight.

Trump will challenge the fraud and have the fake votes thrown out. Justice Alito from SCOTUS has already ordered Pennsylvania to set aside all votes received after 8pm on Election Day, in case all those votes need to be invalidated, which would hand Trump the win.

Once all the vote fraud is overturned, Trump will win Wisconsin, Michigan, Pennsylvania, Georgia, Arizona and many other states, giving him a landslide victory of well over 300 electoral votes, exactly as we predicted before the election.

Stay tuned for more breaking news details as this story unfolds…



Disputed Election

play out.

A candidate securing 270 electoral votes is the next president.

Disputed elections, however, can have surprise endings. Election disputes usually arise when one candidate has a small vote lead but the other candidate alleges that if certain votes are counted, he/she would win. With surveys estimating 80 million people voting by mail; each state having different deadlines for counting votes, it's likely deadlines will be missed causing challenges to slates of electors.

The determining factor in 2020 is whether disputes can be resolved in 35 days after the election, i.e. before December 8, 2020. If disputes are resolved within that time period, the selection of electors is "conclusive" and must be accepted by the next Congress, starting January 3, 2021.

Electors from states with unresolved disputes will be resolved by Congress in accordance with federal statutes. In separate proceedings, each House must decide which set of state electors to certify. If the House and Senate agree on a slate of electors, the slate is certified. If the House and Senate cannot agree, the electors certified by the Governor of the state are counted.

After certifying contested elector slates, Congress counts the electoral votes. If one of the candidates receives 270 electoral votes, that person shall be president. If no person has a majority of electoral votes, the House, voting by state, each state having one vote, votes to elect a president. The person receiving votes from a majority of states is president.

Which party benefits from this dispute resolution process? Currently, Democrats control the House however, Republicans in Congress hold majorities in 31 state delegations and 26 governorships. In seven swing states (AZ, FL. IA, MI, MN, PA, WI), Democrat's hold majorities in 4, Republican's 2, and PA is tied. Republican governors in swing states hold a 4-3 advantage. Guessing the ending is Shear Madness!

There is no time frame for completing the process, thus the need for the Presidential Succession Act which establishes a line of succession to ensure the nation is never without a president. The Act even contemplates the need for an acting president until one of the candidates can be elected by Congress.

In electing a president, there is a role for electors, state legislatures, governors, and Congress. There are, however, according to Professor Tokaji, "…no federal laws allowing judicial contest proceedings over disputed federal elections."

Notwithstanding the established constitutional and statutory process, the U.S. Supreme Court, in Bush v. Gore, usurped Congress' power to elect the president, when it blocked the Florida Supreme Court's order authorizing recounts. Florida's initial vote count gave Bush 1,784 more votes than Gore. The margin of victory was so narrow, state law required an automatic recount. Gore sought a manual recount. The Secretary of Elections, a Republican, denied the recount request. The Florida Supreme Court extended the recount deadline. Bush appealed to the U.S. Supreme Court which vacated the order of the Florida Supreme Court; ruling Florida's order was standardless, violating the Constitution's equal protection clause. By ending the recount, the court, selected Bush as president.

Even if Florida missed the safe-harbor deadline, and submitted competing electoral slates to Congress, Bush would have been elected president. Both Houses of Congress were controlled by Republicans. Even if there was a disagreement between the House and Senate, federal law mandates the slate certified by the governor, be counted. Governor, Jeb Bush would have certified George W. Bush electors.

In 2000, the Supreme Court disrupted constitutional and statutory procedures, used by states and Congress, to elect presidents. In 2020 the court will likely be asked to set aside election procedures for one or several states. Notwithstanding the court's lofty language, one-half the voters will believe it is manipulating words to hide its true intent – accumulating power as the nation's super-legislature. It is not fair for any president to hold office under such a cloud when it is so easy to ensure legitimacy by following the Constitution and federal statutes that place Congress and state legislatures in control of the electoral process.

the world's beacon of hope for freedom and representative government. They intend to replace well-documented reality with a false narrative of America being the scourge of the world, based on its enslaving and stealing from minorities to enrich and aggrandize white ruling elites.

Their plan is called the "1619 Project," an alternative history curriculum for American elementary and secondary students. It was announced in July 2019 with a series of front-page stories in the New York Times, and other major newspapers, explaining its content and the need to:

"reframe the country's history, understanding 1619 as our true founding, and placing the consequences of slavery and the contributions of black Americans at the very center of the story we tell ourselves about who we are."

The 1619 premise is: "Our democracy's founding ideals were false when they were written." Everything that happened in American history flows from the "original sin" of slavery. Every concept, document and institution that shapes and guides America was actually designed to promote slavery and therefore must be eradicated to atone for centuries of racial oppression.

The 1619 Project is partnering with those who deem the American Flag, Pledge of Allegiance and National Anthem as offensive vestiges of racism, slavery and white privilege.

We could ignore the 1619 Project if it were simply the ravings of a coddled leftist professor in some Ivy League sinecure. But it is not, or at least it is no longer.

The New York Times leads an array of news media, academic, think tank and public officials who see the 1619 Project as the final solution for turning America against itself. Once they indoctrinate the current generation of elementary and secondary school students with (even greater) hatred for America, drowning out and canceling dissenting voices with charges of racism and white privilege, they will have free rein to establish a permanent totalitarian socialist state.

The 1619 Project was embraced by Speaker Nancy Pelosi, when she led members of the Congressional Black Caucus to Ghana during the August Recess. They wanted the 1619 narrative of the first African slaves arriving at Jamestown to upstage commemorations of the first session of an elected government at Jamestown. To succeed, the 1619 Project must ignore mountains of facts, and fabricate mountains of lies.

The centerpiece of the 1619 Project is the false claim that slavery was a uniquely American crime, infecting everything and everybody it touched to the present day.

In reality, the capture and enslavement of defeated foes and "inferior" people is as old as humankind. Slavery was integral to establishing regional dominance for the Egyptian Pharaohs, Muslim Emirs, Roman Emperors and countless other rulers. The Western Hemisphere's great civilizations of the Mayans, Incas and Aztecs enslaved their subjugated people for labor and ritual sacrifice.

African rulers trading their slaves to Muslims or other Africans, and then to Europeans, was born from improved sailing technologies and the need for cheap, forced labor. The 1619 Project ignores the fact that only 9.7% of the Atlantic slave trade involved England's North American colonies; 90.3% of African slaves were shipped to South America and the Caribbean.

The 1619 Project ignores that while 12 million West Africans were shipped by Europeans to the Americas, over 17 million East Africans were shipped by Arabs into the Middle East. The 1619 Project ignores the fact that the American colonies began banning slave importation in 1778, during the Revolutionary War, leading to a formal (largely ignored) ban for the entire United States in 1794.

England did not ban slavery in its colonies until 1807. Meanwhile, the Arab slave trade in East Africa was not eradicated until England destroyed the last slave forts in Zanzibar in 1909. Slavery remains active, if officially banned, in much of the Arab world today – as well as in parts of Africa, in the Chinese and Russian penal systems, and in China-run mines in Congo, where 40,000 children labor for $1-2 a day.

The year 1619 is important, not because slaves arrived in the new world, but because for the first time in the Western Hemisphere, a free people elected representatives to govern and be held accountable in subsequent elections. This was the first step to America becoming the most exceptional civic culture in world history. That is the true 1619 lesson that leftists want to expunge.

The Left and New York Times would also have us believe that black Americans are in lockstep with Nikole Hanna-Jones and other authors of the divisive, revisionist 1619 pseudo-history. The claim helps drive their anti-American agenda. But it is false. .

Many African Americans have battled 1619 fabrications and assertions, while black American thought leaders have eviscerated it – including civil rights leader Robert Woodson, who founded the 1776 Project to combat 1619 falsehoods, because he objects to assertions that the "shadow of slavery and Jim Crow" hangs over the destiny of Black Americans. "Nothing is more lethal," he says, "than to convey to people that they have an exemption from personal responsibility."

Wall Street Journal editorial board member Jason Riley notes that the NY Times 1619 scheme is also a foundation of "critical race theory," which insists that problems within the black community are the fault of whites and the responsibility of whites to solve. It is now being taught in colleges, high schools, middle schools and even elementary schools across the USA – and in companies and government agencies via "diversity" and "racial sensitivity" sessions, where "diversity consultants" tell attendees the US is inherently racist and "virtually all white people" contribute to or benefit from racism.

Other vocal black critics of the 1619 Project and its adherents include political commentators Armstrong Williams and Candace Owens. Incredibly, notes columnist Deroy Murdock, the NY Times own family history is "rife with slavery, Confederate boosterism, and enforcement of Jim Crow segregation."

Eminent historians have also excoriated the phony 1619 history, including James M. McPherson, Richard Carwardine and James Oakes.

Sadly and outrageously, all too many academics, Democrats, race hustlers and even some Republicans are vigorously advancing destructive 1619 ideas. Others are too intimidated to speak out against them, out of fear that they will be ridiculed, fired, canceled, harassed online or in restaurants, even beaten or killed.

Americans must do all they can to stop the 1619 Project and stand-up for the greatest nation on earth, before it's too late. Bob Woodson's 1776 Project is a good start. Let's build on it, starting right now.

'Glitchy' Voting Machine Has A Sinister Link To Democrats

By Joe Hoft

The great Sidney Powell was on Mornings with Maria and she unloaded on the monstrous amount of Democrat voter fraud in the 2020 election. But during this discussion Maria Bartiromo dropped a bomb as well.

During her discussion with Sidney Powell, Maria Bartiromo shared the following about the firm that runs the application used in Michigan where thousands of Trump votes were switched to Joe Biden.

Maria Bartiromo: I've also seen reports that Nancy Pelosi's longtime Chief of Staff is a key executive of that company. Richard Blum, Senator Feinstein's husband is a significant shareholder of this company.

Here is the interview:

Bartiromo is correct. Bloomberg reported in April, 2019 that:

Dominion Voting Systems — which commands more than a third of the voting-machine market without having Washington lobbyists — has hired its first, a high-powered firm that includes a longtime aide to Speaker Nancy Pelosi.

Also Democrat Feinstein's husband does have a major stake in Dominion:

(Powell mentioned that they may have stolen votes even from Democrats like Bernie Sanders in order to get the outcomes they wanted.)

The fact that the Dominion voting machines flipped votes to Biden in at least two instances in Michigan alone is reason to audit all states where Dominion is used.

Kamala Harris' father was an avowed Marxist professor in the Economics Department at Stanford University in Palo Alto, CA. Both of Harris' parents were active in the Berkeleybased Afro-American Association; Fidel Castro and Che Guevara were the heroes of the Afro-American Association.

The group's leader, Donald Warden (aka Khalid al-Mansour), mentored two young Afro- American Association members, Huey Newton and Bobby Seale; they created the Maoist inspired Black Panther Party which gained strong support from Communist China; the Black Panther Party served as the model for creation of the Black Lives Matter Marxist organization. Khalid al-Mansour subsequently went on to arrange financing and facilitated for Barack Hussein Obama to be accepted as a student to matriculate at Harvard Law School.

Following graduating from college, Harris returned to California and subsequently became the mistress of the 60-year-old married Speaker of the California Assembly, Willie Brown, Jr. Brown's political campaigns was supported and funded by Dr. Carlton Goodlett, the owner of The Sun Reporter and other pro-Communist newspapers. Brown was elected as Mayor of San Francisco, and strongly endorsed Harris' Marxist political philosophy; he guided Harris political rise in California politics, leading to her election as California's Attorney General. Willie Brown, Jr. was a well-known long-time Communist sympathizer. Willie Brown, Jr. was initially elected to public office with the substantial help of the Communist Party USA. Today, Willie Brown is widely regarded as one of the Chinese Communist Party's best friend in the San Francisco Bay Area.

While serving as San Francisco District Attorney, Kamala Harris mentored a young San Francisco Radical Maoist activist, Lateefah Simon, who was a member of the STORM Revolutionary Movement; Simon currently chairs the Bay Area Rapid Transit (BART) Board. Simon has always been close friends with the founder of Black Lives Matter Marxist Domestic Terrorists, Alicia Garza, as well as STORM member and avowed Communist, Van Jones. Harris has been openly and aggressively supporting Black Lives Matter Marxists; Kamala Harris is still closely associated with Maoist Lateefah Simon and Marxist Alicia Garza.

Kamala Harris's sister Maya Harris was a student activist at Stanford University. She was a closely associated with Steve Phillips, one of the leading Marxist-Leninists on campus and a long-time affiliate with the League of Revolutionary Struggle, a pro-Chinese Communist group. Phillips came out of the Left, and in college he studied Marx, Mao, and Lenin, and maintained close associations with fellow Communists. Phillips married into the multibillion- dollar Sandler family of the Golden West Savings and Loan fortune. He funded many leftist political campaigns, and the voter registration drives in the Southern and South Western states in order to help his friend, Barack Hussein Obama, defeat Hillary Clinton. Phillips has been a major financial sponsor for Kamala Harris's political campaigns for various California elective offices.

Harris husband, husband Doug Emhoff works for the law firm DLA Piper, which "boasts nearly 30 years of experience in Communist China with over 140 lawyers dedicated to its 'Communist China Investment Services' branch. When she was elected to the US Senate, Kamala Harris appointed a Pro-Communist Senate Chief of Staff, Karine Jean-Pierre.When she was elected to the US Senate, Kamala Harris appointed a Pro-Communist Senate Chief of Staff, Karine Jean-Pierre. Jean-Pierre was active with the New York-based Haiti Support Network. The organization worked closely with the pro-Communist China/Communist North Korea Workers World Party and supported Jean-Bertrand Aristide, the far-left former president of Haiti and the radical Lavalas movement.

Fortunately for Harris, but potentially disastrous for the Republic, elected office holders are not subject to the security clearance process. If the FBI did a Background Investigation on Kamala Harris, she never would have passed, because of her 40-year close ties with Marxists, Communists, Maoists, and Communist China. Harris would never have been approved for acceptance to any of the 5 Military Service Academies, been appointed to a US Government Sub-Cabinet position, or would have been approved to fill a sensitive position for a high security defense contractor. Yet if Joe Biden were elected, Harris would be a heartbeat away from the President.

The US constitutional Republic is being threatened by the People's Republic of Communist China (PPC) externally, and by of their very active espionage operations within the United States. The People's Republic of Communist China (PPC), with 1.4 billion people, is governed by the 90 million member Chinese Communist Party (CCP), that has been working to destroy the US Constitutional Republic for 70 years.

The CCP operates a massive global intelligence network through its Ministry of State Security. The CCP operates a vast intelligence network in the U.S as well. It is made up, not merely of intelligence operatives working for the Ministry of State Security, but it is also made up of a myriad of business and industry officials, Chinese scholar associations, and 370,000 Chinese students attending American universities. It also operates the Confucius Institute indoctrination and intelligence gathering centers in the US on 67 University campuses and in seven K-12 Public School Districts. The Confucius Centers are staffed by Communist Chinese intelligence operatives. Refer to this.

Kamala Harris is now involved with the Biden Family Business, and is supporting Joe Biden, who has worked closely with Communist China for 12 years. Joe's son, Hunter Biden, is the point of contact for developing the off shore Biden Family Businesses in Ukraine, Russia, Communist Chin, Iraq, etc. Hunter was provided with a $5 million non-recourse loan for the Biden Family Business to form a partnership with the PPC; that loan was subsequently forgiven by Communist China.

Hunter Biden was given $1.5 billion for the Biden Family Business, to strategically purchase interests in companies in the US Military Industrial Complex, whose technologies would enhance and improve Communist China's defense industry. Hunter Biden was also instructed to try to take control of US companies involved in sourcing rare earths in the United States. Hunter received $3.5 Million from the wife of the Mayor of Moscow for some carefully hidden reason.

The Peoples Republic of Communist China has a military of two million men, including the world's largest Navy. The United States does not have enough ships and munitions to defeat China's Navy, absent the use of nuclear weapons. There is a famous book, Unrestricted Warfare, written in 1999 by two People's Liberation Army colonels. It argues that war between the PRC and the U.S. is inevitable, and that when it occurs China must be prepared to use whatever means are necessary to achieve victory. Refer to this.

If the American voters read the background information [in Trevor Loudon's article] on Kamala Harris, they would never support her election as Vice President of the United States. Joe Biden is suffering from the early onset of dementia and will continue to decline in cerebral awareness; he will never be able to fill out a four-year term of office. If Biden is elected, the Socialists, Marxists, and Communist who control Kamala Harris, are planning to enact provisions of the 25th Amendment, in order to remove Joe Biden from office, so Harris can become the first Communist President of the United States.

If Biden were elected, because Biden would not be up to it, Kamala Harris would lead the effort to appoint very dangerous anti-American Leftist, Communist, Socialists, and Marxists to fill highly sensitive positions in the Washington Deep State Bureaucracy. She would fill all appointive positions in the US Intelligence Agencies, in the Department of Homeland Security, in the Department of Defense, in The Justice Department, the Department of State, the FBI, the CIA, most cabinet positions, the National Security Council, and in the White House Staff.

American voters must be alert their fellow Americans that Kamala Harris is a very serious National Security threat to the very survival of the US Constitutional Republic; she has been a fellow traveler of Marxists, Communists, Maoists, Socialists, Progressives, and Chinese Communists for over 35 years. President Trump was had much more background information on Kamala Harris than we presented here, and he was correct, when he accused Kamala Harris of being a Communist.

Really, do it (vote for Trump) not only for the US, but for human dignity and the planet

"Hello, I am Rafael Palacios, known on the Internet as Rafa Pal. I am an independent journalist and I speak to you from Spain in these crucial hours for the planet, not only for the United States, and I make this video to remind you of some issues. Remember the events that occurred in some North American cities in the last summer months causing chaos by antifas and "black lives matter", led by the Democratic party in the states where these events have been most verified, coincidentally, in those in where there have been the most deaths from Covid and where there has been more repression from the pandemic.

I remember that Donald Trump has freed us from Islamic terrorism, from the wars in Syria and Iraq, despite everything they want us to believe: that the Republicans in this case are more militaristic. Those wars that Obama started are over. I remember the "Russiagate", the impeachment with which they were beating us for months and it turned out to be all a lie and that in reality it was a conspiracy created within the deep state of the Department of Defense, the FBI and the CIA to destroy Donald Trump, i.e., he was telling the truth and the media was lying.

But if all this is not enough for you to vote for Donald Trump, you must attend to all the censored information about the Biden family born from the lap top recovered from Joe Biden's son, Hunter Biden and that show that his father is an agent of the Chinese Communist Party like all the politicians of the Democratic Party. That is, if Biden wins, you will live like in China, in communist China. Do you really want that?

And if this were not enough to decide the meaning of your vote, you must remember that Biden's family are depraved, starting with Joe Biden himself. The son had sexual relations with his niece, that is, with Joe Biden's granddaughter. Watch the videos of Joe Biden as he touches the kids! There is evidence that Hunter, his uncle, Joe Biden's brother, and Joe Biden himself, are involved in child trafficking in Ukraine and this is something that will also be known from the Clinton Foundation on the occasion of the earthquake in Haiti. Do you want to have this gang and depraved president? Really, do it (vote for Trump) not only for the US, but for human dignity and the planet.

What comes next, if Trump wins, is going to be wonderful: all this hidden power with which they have been manipulating us and hiding technologies will be destroyed and we will be freed and we will be cured of many diseases that they themselves are creating.

So, from Spain, really vote for Trump, don't hesitate for a moment!"

Supreme Court Rejects Qualified Immunity Defense for the First Time in Years

By Ilya Somin

Earlier today, the Supreme Court issued a decision rejecting a law enforcement officer's "qualified immunity" defense. Taylor v. Riojas was the first such Supreme Court ruling since 2004. That alone makes it significant. Whether the Court will take more forceful action to curb qualified immunity in future cases remains to be seen.

Qualified immunity is the notorious doctrine under which law enforcement officers and many other government officials are immune from civil suits for violating constitutional and statutory rights in the course of performing their duties unless they have violated "clearly established" law. Courts have interpreted "clearly established" so narrowly that officers routinely get away with horrendous abuses merely because no federal court in their area has previously decided a case with essentially identical facts.

In Taylor, a 7-1 majority (the just-confirmed new Justice Amy Coney Barrett did not participate), concluded that the lower court had gone too far in granting qualified immunity to prison officials in an egregious case where they subjected a prisoner to horrific treatment:

…Trent Taylor is an inmate in the custody of the Texas Department of Criminal Justice. Taylor alleges that, for six full days in September 2013, correctional officers confined him in a pair of shockingly unsanitary cells. The first cell was covered, nearly floor to ceiling, in "'massive amounts' of feces": all over the floor, the ceiling, the window, the walls, and even "'packed inside the water faucet…..'" Fearing that his food and water would be contaminated, Taylor did not eat or drink for nearly four days. Correctional officers then moved Taylor to a second, frigidly cold cell, which the authenticity of the laptop nor any of the records contained on it.

In any case, smear or not, Joe declared at a May 2019 campaign event in Iowa City that any concerns about China representing a world superpower military and economic threat are overrated anyway. He explained, "China is going to eat our lunch? Come on Man. I mean, you know, they're not bad folks, folks. But guess what? They're not competition for us."

House Intelligence Chair Adam Schiff who famously and falsely claimed to have Russian collusion evidence against President Trump, has predictably once again attributed the Post report to Russian disinformation. Also, once again, there is no evidence of this either.

It would be challenging to convincingly argue otherwise. The Post revelations are presented in meticulous detail with transparently trackable sourcing. This stands in stark contrast to the vague, anonymous attributions of so many Russian collusion stories or the New York Times's mysteriously sourced "tax-return data" (not tax returns) of Donald Trump.

Hunter's name appears on the computer drop-off receipt, the repair shop owner supplied a subpoena showing that the computer and hard drive were seized by the FBI in December 2019, and both the FBI and Director of National Intelligence John Ratcliffe have empathically stated that no evidence of Russian disinformation exists.

Charges of disinformation are particularly ironic coming from the same crowd that spent four years pushing the Russia-Trump collusion narrative from 2016 ginned up and promoted by the Hillary Clinton campaign. Recall spurious spinning of salacious Steele dossier claims despite no supporting evidence and no on-the-record witnesses.

There are, however, powerful reasons warranting public attention to the blatant Post story coverup by media omission and censorship. Despite being published by the oldest and fourth largest U.S. newspaper, most networks went to extreme efforts to bomb or bury it.

Exercising a first line of gate-keeper complicity in containing monumental scandals, Twitter, and to a somewhat lesser extent Facebook, immediately sprang to assist Biden campaign defenses by taking extraordinary steps to stop Americans from reading what was already in print.

Twitter users clicking or retweeting a link to the Post story were shown a message that "We can't complete this request because this link has been identified by Twitter or our partners as being potentially harmful."

Included in the shutdowns were Twitter accounts of the entire New York Post's 1.8 million followers, White House spokesperson Kayleigh McEnany, the "Team Trump" campaign, and that of Politico.com journalist Jake Sherman.

Even the American taxpayer-supported National Public Radio (NPR) blocked the news. As Terence Samuels, the NPR network's managing news editor explained, "We don't want to waste our time on stories that are not really stories, and we don't want to waste our listeners' and readers' time on stories that are just pure distractions."

So just what sort of fantasy distractions was NPR referring to?

Well for starters, we learned that Joe had been decidedly untruthful in repeatedly claiming that he knew nothing of his son's lucrative foreign business dealings with disreputable entities transparently secured based upon his father's position.

Among the huge tranche of Post documents was an email from an executive of Burisma, a large Ukrainian oil company facing corruption charges, thanking Hunter for "giving an opportunity to meet" his father who was then serving as the Obama administration lead for Ukraine policy.

Hunter was raking in large payments for a no-show position on Burisma's board at the time when Joe publicly bragged about holding back a billion dollars in desperately needed U.S. military aid to Ukraine if they didn't fire the prosecutor who was investigating the company's corruption.

Arguably the most consequential Biden family revelations from U.S. economic and national security perspectives involve spectacularly sleezy and compromising transactions with Chinese oligarchs.

The Post reported that in December 2013, Hunter accompanied his father on an official visit to China aboard Air Force Two, returning with a $1.5 billion investment deal inked ten days later with the Communist state-owned Bank of China on behalf of a private equity firm he had established in 2009 with Christopher Heinz, the stepson of former Secretary of State John Kerry.

The transaction was accomplished through Bohai Harvest RST (BHR), a company where again, as with Burisma, Hunter served on its board. A BHR representative reported in July 2019 that Hunter had introduced his father to Chinese private equity executive Jonathan Li during the trip who later became BHR's CEO.

Another enormously troubling Chinese incident involved Hunter's May 2017 dealings with Chinese tycoon Ye Jianming, former chairman of CEFC, a now-defunct Shanghai-based energy company with broadly known Communist government and military ties which was later bankrupted following U.S. government money laundering charges.

Numerous records obtained from Hunter's laptop along with corroborating emails and text messages provided by former Hunter partner Tony Bobulinski make it clear that the Biden family not only profiteered by selling the former veep's political influence, but also that Joe knew about and fully endorsed the sleezy scheming.

Bobulinski has publicly recounted being introduced to Joe by his brother Jim and son Hunter on May 2, 2017. "That night," Bobulinski said, "we discussed the Bidens' history, the Biden family's plans with the Chinese, with which he [Joe] was plainly familiar, at least at a high level."

Tony Bobulinski has also produced an email from Hunter's partner James Gilliar that proposes that the "big guy," confirmed to mean Joe Biden, receive 10% of the venture's equity.

An August 2017 email from "Robert Biden" (Hunter's legal first name) then crows that the original deal which was for $10 million a year in fees, had since become "much more interesting to me and my family" because it included a share of "the equity and profits."

As Wall Street Journal editors point out: "The Democratic-media refrain is that even if the latest emails are real – again the Bidens don't deny their authenticity – they fail to prove Biden [by then a private citizen] broke any law. But felonies aren't the minimum standard for political behavior."

It was already clear at the time that Joe was considering a presidential run, and that such transparent influence peddling transactions and relationships would deeply compromise his ability to represent America in tough dealings with China and other foreign economic and military adversaries.

Yes, this is truly newsworthy stuff. But no, if Democrats win the White House and Congress, don't expect to hear much more about it.

House Speaker Nancy Pelosi once famously pontificated upon announcing President Trump's sham impeachment that "No one is above the law." That righteous theory is about to be tested as never before on November 3.

Criminal Biden Documents 'Mysteriously' Vanish

By Leah Barkoukis

Fox News's Tucker Carlson informed viewers Wednesday evening that highly sensitive and "damning" documents his show received from a source about the Biden family have disappeared.

"On Monday of this week, we received, from a source, a collection of confidential documents related to the Biden family. We believe those documents are authentic, they're real, and they're damning," he said.

Carlson explained when he and his executive producer received them, they were in Los Angeles preparing for his interview with Tony Bobulinski about the Biden family's shady foreign business dealings.

"So we texted a producer in New York and we asked him to send those documents to us in L.A. and he did that," he explained. "So, Monday afternoon of this week, he shipped those documents overnight to California with a large national carrier, a brand name company that we've used, you've used, countless times with never a single problem."

They never got to Los Angeles, he said, noting that the shipping company contacted them on Tuesday morning to say the contents of the package were missing: "The documents had disappeared."

Despite the company's best efforts at tracking every step of the package's journey, it has no answers.

"They traced the envelope from the moment our producers dropped it off in Manhattan on Monday all the way to 3:44 a.m. yesterday morning. That's when an employee at a sorting facility in another state noticed that our package was open and empty; apparently, it had been opened," he said. "So the company's security team interviewed every one of its employees who touched the envelope we sent, they searched the plane and the trucks that carried it. They went through the office in New York, where our producer dropped that package off. They combed the entire cavernous sorting facility. They used pictures of what we had sent so that searchers would know what to look for, they went far and beyond, but they found nothing."

Carlson continued: "Those documents have vanished. As of tonight, the company has no idea, and no working theory even, about what happened to this trove of materials, documents that are directly relevant to the presidential campaign just six days from now. We spoke to executives at that company a few hours ago. They seemed baffled and deeply bothered by this, and so are we."

Because the cell lacked a bunk, and because Taylor was confined without clothing, he was left to sleep naked in sewage.The Court of Appeals for the Fifth Circuit properly held that such conditions of confinement violate the Eighth Amendment's prohibition on cruel and unusual punishment. Louisiana voters approve amendment stating abortion is not a right in state constitution

Louisiana joins states with similar constitutional language: Tennessee, Alabama, West Virginia

By Travis Fedschun

Voters in Louisiana overwhelmingly approved a constitutional amendment on Tuesday that clarified the document does not grant the right to an abortion in the state.

The abortion measure, Amendment 1, was touted as a way to ensure state residents would clearly be on the record opposing the procedure in the event the Supreme Court was to overturn the landmark Roe V. Wade decision.

The question before voters Tuesday was whether to explicitly state that "a right to abortion and the funding of abortion shall not be found in the Louisiana Constitution."

APPEALS COURT UPHOLDS KENTUCKY ABORTION RESTRICTIONS

The wording also made clear that Louisiana opposes public funding for abortions.

Amendment 1 was backed by 62% of Louisiana voters with about two million votes cast, according to election data.

Three states have similar constitutional language: Tennessee, Alabama and West Virginia.

Benjamin Clapper, executive director of Louisiana Right to Life, said in a statement that voters showed "love for mothers and babies."

BIDEN SAYS CATHOLIC FAITH GUIDES POLICIES BUT GETS HIT ON ABORTION, RELIGIOUS FREEDOM

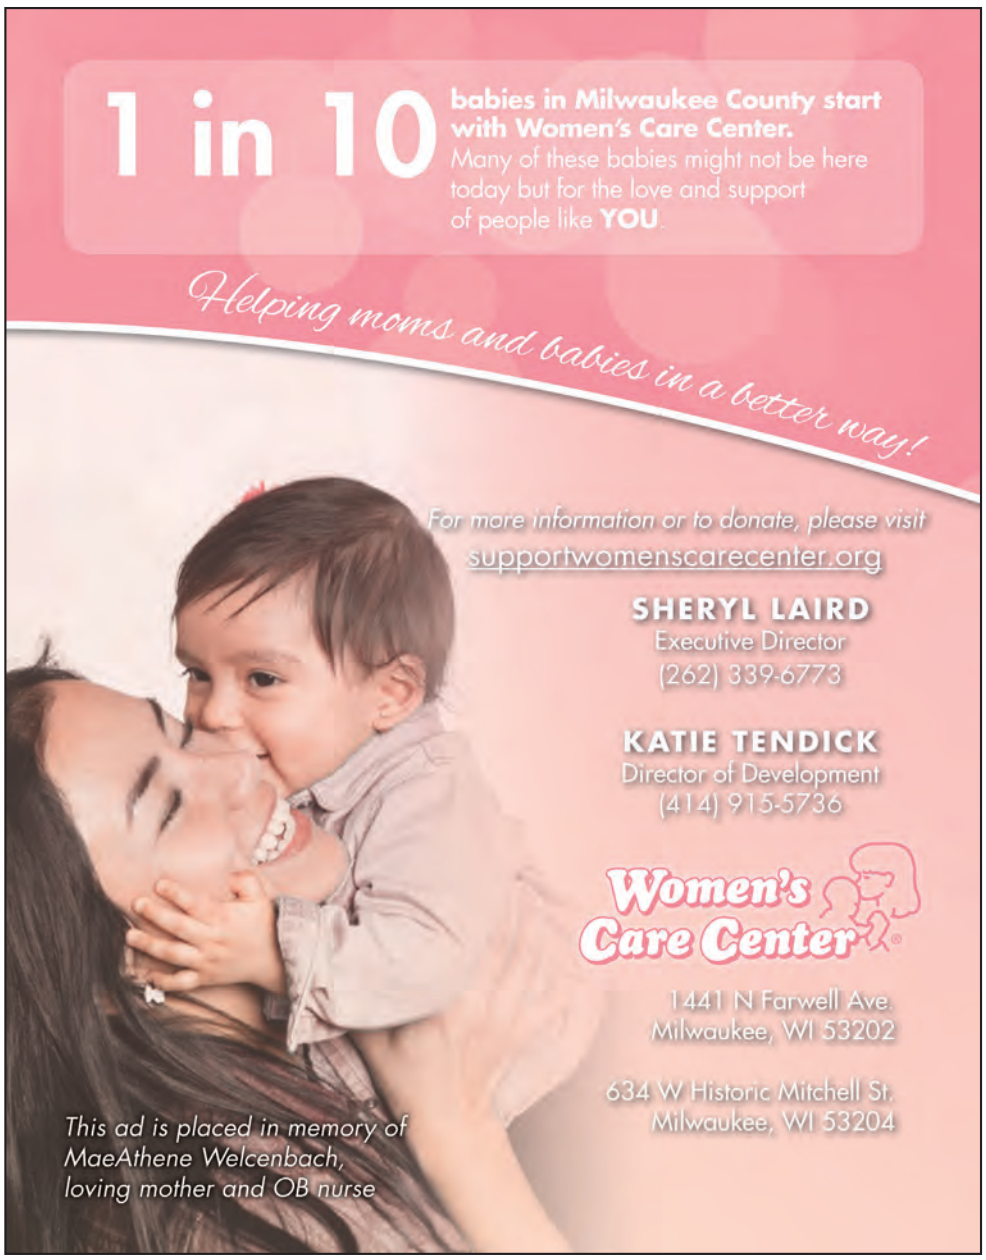
"With the passage of this amendment, our citizens have mandated that state judges can never use our Constitution to enshrine abortion or the taxpayer funding of abortion in Louisiana," Clapper said. "We the people, through our legislators, can pass laws defending life without the intervention of judges."

Ahead of the vote, analysts said passage would have little immediate effect.

But if the Supreme Court were to overturn the Roe v. Wade decision on abortion rights, the amendment would ensure against any court ruling that language in the Louisiana Constitution grants abortion rights.

Another state with abortion rights on the ballot, Colorado, saw voters on Tuesday reject a measure that would have put a ban on most abortions at 22 weeks or later.

About 1.6 million voters, or 59.7%, rejected Proposition 115 with 85% of the vote counted, according to election data.



The Un-Pope

"Then Peter and the other apostles answered and said, We ought to obey God rather than men." Acts 5:29

By Riley J. Hood—Milwaukee County Constitution Party

I had just heard a sermon by Fr. Meeks about why Roman Catholics should not vote for Biden. A first reason was the murder of the Pre-born. A second reason was that Biden supports "gay marriage." Then on 10/21/20 according to CNN, "Pope Francis has declared support for civil unions for same-sex couples for the first time, according to the Catholic News Agency." Francis said, "Homosexual people have a right to be in a family. They're children of God and have a right to a family. Nobody should be thrown out or be made miserable over it." He added, "What we have to create is a civil union law. That way they are legally covered."

According to newsbreak.com, "Milwaukee residents are giving their two cents following Pope Francis' decision to endorse gay civil unions for the first time." Archbishop Jerome E. Listecki of the Archdiocese of Milwaukee released a statement Wednesday, writing that "Recently, the Holy Father brought up the issue of civil unions for those with same-sex attraction."

You can call criminals children of God, and make up a fake law and even a fake sacrament for them, taking your ques from Queer Bible Hermanutics Inc. You can't change the scriptures. "Thou shalt not lie with mankind, as with womankind: it is abomination." Leviticus 18:22. "If a man also lie with mankind, as he lieth with a woman, both of them have committed an abomination: they shall surely be put to death; their blood shall be upon them." Leviticus 20:13 Death penalty felons are the enemies of God, even though God created them. It is called rebellion.

The New Testament amplifies that. Romans Chapter one, verses 18-32 is New Testament age of grace theology, and how does it read? "For the wrath of God is revealed from heaven against all ungodliness and unrighteousness of men, who hold the truth in unrighteousness; Because that which may be known of God is manifest in them; for God hath shewed it unto them. For the invisible things of him from the creation of the world are clearly seen, being understood by the things that are made, even his eternal power and Godhead; so that they are without excuse: Because that, when they knew God, they glorified him not as God, neither were thankful; but became vain in their imaginations, and their foolish heart was darkened. Professing themselves to be wise, they became fools, And changed the glory of the uncorruptible God into an image made like to corruptible man, and to birds, and fourfooted beasts, and creeping things. Wherefore God also gave them up to uncleanness through the lusts of their own hearts, to dishonour their own bodies between themselves: Who changed the truth of God into a lie, and worshipped and served the creature more than the Creator, who is blessed for ever. Amen. For this cause God gave them up unto vile affections: for even their women did change the natural use into that which is against nature: And likewise also the men, leaving the natural use of the woman, burned in their lust one toward another; men with men working that which is unseemly, and receiving in themselves that recompence of their error which was meet. And even as they did not like to retain God in their knowledge, God gave them over to a reprobate mind, to do those things which are not convenient; Being filled with all unrighteousness, fornication, wickedness, covetousness, maliciousness; full of envy, murder, debate, deceit, malignity; whisperers, Backbiters, haters of God, despiteful, proud, boasters, inventors of evil things, disobedient to parents, Without understanding, covenantbreakers, without natural affection, implacable, unmerciful: Who knowing the judgment of God, that they which commit such things are worthy of death, not only do the same, but have pleasure in them that do them." Idolatrous, implacable, inventors of evil things, they are reprobates, who deserve the death penalty in this day and age. When Churches accepted homosexuals in ministry, those same persons rewarded those Churches by molesting children and driving people away from Christ. And the Priest abuse scandal in the Catholic church has a pastor abuse scandal in Evangelical and Protestant churches.

To my Roman Catholic friends, if you don't like my Bible pounding, I will give an argument from the Holy Family. Mary was married to Joseph, Joseph adopted Jesus and they lived as an example for us all. They were a real working family. There were no dykes and fags involved. Now it is down to you, it has been for a long time. I am in the same boat, as many Pastors are supporting evil, preaching hatred of America and slavery from the pulpit. These men are wolves, hirelings, and false brethren.

If you claim that St. Peter was the first pope, Francis is not following his example, is he. When your leaders fail you, you must obey God directly, according to Acts 5:29. That makes you a de-facto protestant, as it means you are protesting a bogus pronouncement made on your behalf. You, by standing for the truth, are preserving the faith, as God will not tolerate a corrupt church giving Him a bad name.

The Milwaukee County Constitution Party asserts that sodomite acts of buggery and degradation must be recriminalized. Same sex marriage is as much of a farce as Caligula marrying his horse. We will never accept sodomy, and we assert that the Moral Order is the basis of all political activity. We are Christians in politics, and we invite people to attend our meetings as guests and friends of the party, and you don't have to check your Christian faith at the door.

VOICE OF JERUSALEM

Where America Now Stands

By Caroline Glick

On Wednesday, supporters of President Donald Trump gathered outside ballot counting centers in Arizona and Michigan to demand a clean and honest vote count. An MSNBC reporter in Arizona filmed the protesters in Maricopa Country where 400,000 ballots were being counted. Standing behind the protesters, the reporter tried to paint the crowd as violent and dangerous even as they kneeled in silent prayer for election integrity.

It was a hard sell, but other reporters quickly got in on the action and videos appeared throughout the day of reporters describing the swelling crowd chanting "Count the Vote" as violent. There may be an innocent explanation for the obvious misinformation. Perhaps the men and women with the mics simply don't know the meaning of the word "violent." After all, for the past seven months, they have been describing riots replete with broken windows, burning tires and looted stores as "peaceful protests."

The urge Trump voters feel to protest the vote count is easy to understand. The widespread fear that the Democrats are working to falsify the US presidential election results grows with each news update about another 369,000 ballots suddenly appearing in Philadelphia or 10,000 votes in Nevada cast by people who don't live in Nevada.

On Wednesday afternoon, Trump supporters at a ballot counting facility in Detroit were stunned as a poll worker used cardboard boards to block Republican poll watchers from watching the vote count.

Republican fears bubbled over Wednesday morning.

Tuesday night, Trump was leading Biden by comfortable margins in Michigan, Wisconsin, Pennsylvania, Georgia and North Carolina. And suddenly, election officials in Detroit, Pittsburgh, Philadelphia and Atlanta – Democrat-run cities in states where Trump was leading – announced they were stopping the vote count.

According to a report in The Federalist, based on information published by election officials in Michigan and Wisconsin, while the vote-counting had officially been suspended, strange things were happening.

In the wee hours of the night in Michigan, 138,339 mail-in ballots were counted. Biden won every single one of them. Hours after the stunning, vertical rise in Biden's numbers was reported, (and after Twitter censored Republicans, including President Trump who demanded an explanation), Michigan election officials claimed the numbers were a "data error." A glitchy vote-counting software accidentally added a zero – that is, 100,000 votes — to Biden's tally. The same glitchy software accidentally forgot to enter the votes that Trump won. Oops.

In Wisconsin, Biden got a similar 120,000 vote boost during the night and when Republicans woke up on Wednesday morning, Trump's 4.7% lead had all but disappeared. Trump got none of the votes.

Trump's campaign filed lawsuits in Michigan and Wisconsin regarding the apparent irregularities. The campaign also filed suit against Nevada's Board of Elections for allegedly counting 10,000 votes cast by non-residents. The campaign is exercising its right to order a recount of the ballots in Wisconsin after Biden was declared the winner with a less than one percent margin.

There are also multiplying claims of improprieties in vote-counting in Philadelphia. On Wednesday, Trump's attorney Rudy Giuliani came to Philadelphia to file a lawsuit after Republican poll watchers were barred from observing election officials count 120,000 ballots. A court order to permit the Republicans to observe the vote-counting was ignored by election officials and Democrats appealed the ruling.

The Democrats' response to all of the Trump campaign's claims is to accuse Trump and his supporters of trying to suppress the vote.

Most of the alleged irregularities have to do with mail-in ballots. This is no surprise. Trump and the Republicans warned from the outset of the Democrats' mail-in ballot campaign that the purpose of the move was not to minimize the spread of the coronavirus. Standing in line to vote is no riskier than standing in line at a grocery store. The goal of mail-in balloting is to tamper with the vote, they said.

AS PRESIDENT TRUMP said in his remarks Thursday evening, it may take time for the legal challenges to work their way through the courts and determine definitively who will be inaugurated on January 20. But we can already see that whoever wins, America's democratic order is steeped in crisis. The Democrats' post-election shenanigans are an expression of this crisis.

To be clear, Trump did not cause the crisis. It has two authors: The Democrats and the media.

The Democrats' fomented the crisis, which places America's very future as a constitutional democracy on the line when they refused to accept the results of the 2016 election. The media caused it by abandoning journalism in favor of political activism.

Perhaps the most emblematic image of the 2020 elections came in the days leading up to Election Day. Footage surfaced of business owners in big cities throughout the country boarding up their windows to protect their property from the riots they expected to break out once the voting stations closed.

The media's treatment of the footage exposed their pathology. The business owners expectation of political violence received little coverage. And to the extent the footage was mentioned at all, the mention was as laconic as the weather report: Tomorrow will be partly cloudy, violent riots forecast for downtown beginning at nightfall, and scattered thundershowers are expected around 10 p.m. in the northwest suburbs.

Newspapers and television networks didn't ask the shop keepers from whom they were protecting their property.

But then, they didn't need to ask. Everyone knew who the rioters were. Although the media and the Democrats have spent four years insisting that Trump supporters are violent, dangerous racists and Nazis, the merchants in Kenosha and Los Angeles didn't post Trump election signs in their storefronts to win brownie points from the rioters. They posted signs of support for the looters. And they all hailed from Black Lives Matter, Antifa and allied Democrat voting groups.

Trump's supporters standing outside vote-counting centers in Philadelphia, Maricopa County and Detroit didn't plan to protest after the election. Conservative activists only began organizing protests after Biden's vote tallies magically rose vertically on Wednesday morning.

In notable contrast, Biden's supporters in Black Lives Matter and allied groups started posting detailed instructions to their supporters about where to gather and where to protest a week before Election Day. And when late Tuesday night, the riots began on schedule in Washington, New York, Portland and Los Angeles, they weren't kneeling in prayer.

According to the New York Post, a "protester" in Portland was arrested Wednesday carrying hand grenades and a loaded AR-15 assault rifle. "Protesters" in New York were arrested carrying commercial military-grade firecrackers, a taser, knives, and hammers.

Black Lives Matter rioters in Washington reportedly stabbed five Trump supporters close to the White House early Wednesday morning.

Political violence, like ballot harvesting, is a feature of the Democrats' post-democratic political playbook. And here it is important to remember how things transpired in real-time.

During the 2016 election, Hillary Clinton, her campaign and the media presented Trump and his supporters as illegitimate political actors. Clinton notoriously referred to them as "deplorables." When Trump won the race, the Democrats' delegitimization of Trump and his supporters led them to forego simply opposing Trump's presidency and his actions and policies in favor of rejecting the legitimacy of both his presidency and of the democratic process that enables "deplorables" to choose a president that the Democrats don't support. The weren't leading an opposition. They were waging an insurrection.

In other words, Clinton's delegitimization of Trump and his voters morphed into a rejection of the rules of American democracy. All Democrat efforts to oust Trump from office and to block his ability to govern since, like the political violence the Democrats have employed with greater intensity in the intervening years, are a function of that move.

The Democrats revealed their new post-democratic character and totalitarian bent on inauguration day. When the millions of Democrats came out to protest the peaceful transfer of power, they called themselves "the Resistance." They weren't opposing Trump. They were resisting an illegitimate regime. And to take down the regime – that is, the US government – all means were justified.

The media have been a full partner in the Democrats' efforts to overturn America's constitutional order in favor of one that denies their opponents (or "enemies") the ability to lead the country. In 2008, the US media replaced its traditional pro-Democrat bias with full mobilization when Barack Obama entered the presidential race. The media writ large presented Obama as a man without blemish. His domestic and foreign policies were deemed ingenious, completely successful and kind-hearted and never subjected to serious scrutiny. Obama's personal and policy failings were airbrushed out of the storyline.

Obama's opponents were demonized as corrupt and evil foreign agents and avaricious "moneymen."

Biden has similarly enjoyed entirely positive coverage in the media. Together with Twitter and Facebook, the networks and major newspapers have censored, rather than reported information that could in any way undermine support for Biden.

From the moment Trump rode down the escalator of Trump Towers, he received the exact opposite treatment. If Obama was a messianic figure and Biden a kindly grandpa, Trump was the devil incarnate. The media's abuse of Trump has known no bounds. The legacy newspapers and television networks competed over who could report more Trump-Russia lies.

Trump's dizzying array of accomplishments in office, at home and abroad were deliberately ignored or downplayed all day, every day for the past four years.

Media executives, editors, anchors and reporters made clear the moment Trump was elected that their only goal, and the only legitimate goal was to oust him from office.

It's impossible to know how things will develop in America in the coming weeks. But it is hard to see a rainbow over the horizon. If Trump is declared the winner, the Democrats won't accept the legitimacy of the verdict. Their use of political violence will undoubtedly rise.

And if Biden is declared the winner, the Democrats will not rest on their laurels. Having already adopted the totalitarian mindset, they will insist their newfound power be used to advance their post-democratic program. Indeed, they already are.

MSNBC commentator Jason Johnson said Wednesday that there must be no peace for Republicans in a Biden presidency.

Johnson warned Biden that he mustn't even think about magnanimity in victory. He is "at war."

In Johnson's words, "You cannot come into this White House with the idea that these people [Trump supporters] aren't the enemy. They are. They are the enemies of democracy."

As for Trump's supporters, after being called "chumps" by Biden, after watching the Democrat-run vote counts and Big Tech's censorship of President Trump, Trump's supporters will not trust the integrity of the process that brought Biden to the White House. And it is hard to imagine them taking it silently.

Standing outside the Philadelphia courthouse Wednesday, Giuliani addressed both the media and Trump's supporters. Looking at the reporters, said, "Do you think we're stupid? You think we are fools?"

Turning to Trump's supporters, Giuliani added, "Do you know something? The Democrats do think you're stupid, they do think you're fools, and that's why you get called deplorable chumps. That's over."

cheating happens, and is happening.

However, since the end is not yet, and we don't yet know with certainty what will happen, let's assume the worst, that they get away with it and Trump is defeated. Call this is post-Halloween horror story. At the worst, if and when Trump marches to victory, this article will serve as a reminder of the dark fate we escaped.

Trump victory? I tell you what. I lost count of the times these last 4+ years we read that Trump was buried in a deep hole with no hope of escape, yet this famous sentence always ended these stories: "With a mighty leap Jack was free!"

TEAM BIDEN & The OLIGARCHY

Now all my tweets die after 7 days of coronavirus, so if you want a copy of this, screenshot it.

It reads, If Team Biden manages to swipe the election, how many months until Kamala? The first choice "0 – Biden gone by January" got the most votes, with the voting dropping off from 1-4, 5-9, and 10-14.

There isn't anybody, except strict TV watchers, who believes Biden will be the actual ruler, which is why I have been emphasizing Team Biden. Normies buy Biden's little-guy schtick, but everybody else knows his true state.

The oligarchic elite running Team Biden are happy to have him as a figurehead, but they'd be just as satisfied with Kamala, who they could tout as the "First BLACK! Female President", as if that were good news. It would be, too, for many addled people, who would forgive the cheating just because of that. If Biden's treason does pop back up somehow, they won't care if they have to sacrifice him.

In any case, Biden's health won't allow him to finish the term. It is President Kamala at some point. The only question is when.

I've quoted Parkinson so often on how democracies end that I know we're tired of hearing it. Historically, every one of them ended in one of two ways: oligarchy or dictatorship. Dictatorship seemed the livelier possibility, or perhaps that was only wishcasting on my part. The oligarchy won.

In considering the question of how long a democratic phase of government may be expected to last, we can appeal to reason, to history and to recent experience. Merely theoretical discussion would lead us to expect one of two things. Either the proletariat would establish a socialist state or it would fail as against middle-class opposition.

If it succeeded, the State would acquire such an accumulation of centralised power — political, economic, religious and cultural — that some of the former upper class would be goaded into revolt. Supposing the conspiracy or rising should attract any measure of support, in the name of freedom, the strongest personality in the government would make himself dictator during the emergency: thereafter, the rising crushed, he would remain dictator as a precaution against any future threat of the same kind.

There was one too many deplorable for our credentialed betters to take. And so here, hypothetically as of this writing, we are.

VER ARE YOUR PAPERZ?

There will be peace upon the land for a short period. Riots and looting won't be necessary, at first, and so the masters of Black Lunatic Marauders and Auntyfags will have them stand down. Which they'll do, more or less.

There needs to be time for those aware of the cheating to say, "I guess this isn't so bad after all." Anybody who brings it up six months from now will be called a conspiracy theorist and dismissed. The honeymoon will be the phase the oligarchs divvy up their territories. This won't be a conspiracy, per se, just the united action of like minded elites. They'll begin fighting amongst themselves soon enough.

Meanwhile, Team Biden will move:

Those expecting a fading piece of parchment to stop the left's excesses will learn soon enough of the power of paper against steel. Remember what happened to freedom of association? And speech?

Some little person on the left called for a Truth and Reconciliation Committee, at which deplorables would be asked to confess their sins of racism and Trump support. This will happen.

Woke politics will be everywhere. Don't expect a law saying all whites are evil, but do look for critical race theory to be restored to government training. The FBI et al will be more aggressive in going after "white supremacy". President Kamala has already been tweeting about how Equality is not enough and we need Equity, which is to say, equality of outcome. Hard quotas, excepting white men, will grow. The propaganda against whites, already high, would hit fever pitch. Woke politics is, after all, identity politics.

Watching shows like this might become mandatory.

The Senate was retained by the Grand Cucked Party, so there will be some measure of resistance to the most outrageous forays of Team Kamala (I'm assuming we're some six months in at this point). But they'll surrender on most things.

Big Tech will start cracking down in earnest. They were only warming up before. Dissident opinion will become rare on major sites. One tactic they only flirted with before will be juiced: bank deplatforming. Hard to buy and sell without the woke mark.

Biden promised a national mask mandate. The legality of this is suspect, but it's also illegal to stuff ballot boxes. The actual state of the waning epidemic will be meaningless. Obeying is what's important.

Global cooling will be a thing again. The Senate would likely bend over for this, because the left really learned how to sell fear in the coronadoom panic. Panic is a wonderful motivator. Look for new "discoveries" in how global cooling will kill you.

The court, which is now more centrist, will be less relevant, because of Executive Orders.

Which country will be the first to be bombed? Taiwan, as a favor to China? Russia? The Maldives? I'm not good at guessing this, but that the missiles will fly is certain.

The Great Reset will be pushed with increasing vigor by propagandists. The oligarchs make a lot of money pushing these schemes to "save us", mostly from bleeding the middle class.

"But Briggs. It was bad under Obama, but not that bad. Why isn't this just more of the same?"

Because we're a lot woker now than then. Because the left will be out for revenge because of Trump. Because knowing they stole the election, and got away with it, will embolden them to future feats of felony. Because "immigration" will turn from flood to tsunami.

Perhaps worst is that there won't be any elections in the future that can be trusted, not fully. America will be open game. Because, of course, every elite everywhere the globe over will know what has happened.

New blacklist of 'Trump sycophants' inspired by AOC being compiled

A blacklist of "Trump sycophants"—entitled "The Trump Accountability Project"—is archiving the names of individuals who "elected, served, funded, supported, and represented" President Donald Trump.

At the behest of 'squad' member and New York Congresswoman Alexandria Ocasio-Cortez, a blacklist of "Trump sycophants"—entitled "The Trump Accountability Project"—is archiving the names of individuals who "elected, served, funded, supported, and represented" President Donald Trump.

"Is anyone archiving these Trump sycophants for when they try to downplay or deny their complicity in the future? I foresee decent probability of many deleted Tweets, writings, photos in the future," the US representative tweeted Friday afternoon.

"Yes, we are," answered former Obama administration staffer Michael Simon, citing the Trump Accountability Project. "Every Administration staffer, campaign staffer, bundler, lawyer who represented them — everyone."On the website's landing page, it urges that "[w]e must never forget those who helped further the Trump agenda," adding that "the world should never forget those who, when faced with a decision, chose to put their money, their time, and their reputations behind separating children from their families, encouraging racism and anti-Semitism, and negligently causing the unnecessary loss of life and economic devastation from our country's failed response to the COVID-19 pandemic."

The site is a self-described "permanent record" of those who elected the president, including Trump campaign staffers, Republican National Committee members, and affiliated PACs in 2016 or 2020.

Individuals who donated a "significant amount"—$1000 or more—in efforts to re-elect the president and related campaign committees are also blacklisted.Others who worked in the Trump administration; endorsed the president in a public light; were appointed to federal boards, commissions, or the judiciary; and staffed law firms that represented the Trump name in any capacity are named.

Shortly after the project received sharp criticism on social media, advertisers changed the site's main blurb explaining the endeavor's purpose. Organizers clarified that the list was intended to oust paid backers of the Trump administration, axing the stipulations of "those who served him," "those who represented him," and "those who supported him."

The growing compilation was initially published before the group privatized the extensive Google Sheets document captured by Internet archives. Tabs separate categories such as "Campaign Staff," "Administration," "Appointees," "Donors," "Law Firms," "Endorsers," and "Denouncers."

Under "Administration," senior advisors in the White House are tallied all the way down to the "Chief Calligrapher." The "Denouncers" section points to Miles Taylor, the low-level bureaucrat anonymous source published and promoted by The New York Times as a "senior administration official." Supreme Court Justice Amy Coney Barrett tops the "Appointees" division."We're launching the Trump Accountability Project to make sure anyone who took a paycheck to help Trump undermine America is held responsible for what they did," former Pete Buttigieg national surrogates director Emily Abrams wrote before her account went private.

Former national press secretary for the Democratic National Committee and ex-senior spokesman for the Barack Obama campaign Hari Sevugan echoed Abrams.

"If you hire someone who remained with the Trump admin after the election, be on notice you will be held accountable by MeidasTouch and we will ensure you are exposed," warned Geragos & Geragos partner Ben Meiselas who represented professional football player turned-Black Lives Matter activist Colin Kaepernick in his highly-publicized lawsuit against the NFL.

On Thursday night, Stand Up Republic executive director Evan McMullin foreshadowed the call: "We should keep and publish a list of everyone who assists Trump's frivolous and dangerous attacks on the election. Name and shame forever."

Deranged Never-Trumper Jennifer Rubin also tweeted her desire for a blacklist of Trump supporters: "Any R now promoting rejection of an election or calling to not to follow the will of voters or making baseless allegations of fraud should never serve in office, join a corporate board, find a faculty position or be accepted into 'polite' society." She threatened, "We have a list."

In response, Human Event's Will Chamberlain quipped: "Leading Democrats like @AOC and @JRubinBlogger apparently want to treat Trump supporters like China treats the Uyghurs."

Slightly Offens*ve host Elijah Schaffer lambasted Cortez, levelling that she "threatened 69 million voting American citizens who support President Trump."

"The second amendment was created to protect us from people like her. We aren't scared of her or any other socialist sacks of sh*t," Schaffer volleyed. "Try us."

Students For Trump founder and co-chairman Ryan Fournier fired: "What AOC said today about logging tweets and names of Trump supporters is equivalent to what they would do in Communist China.""She and her crew do not belong anywhere near government," Fournier snapped.
